LUKE-WARM TEMPERANCE MEN.

We wish we could say something that should rouse to action those luke-warm temperance men who hang like a mill-stone about the neck of the temperance reform. There are multitudes of professed temperance men, who neither drink intoxicating liquors themselves, nor furnish them to others; but who, notwithstanding the consistency of their example in these respects, take no active part in the promotion of this enterprise. They neither attend our meetings, nor bestow of their substance, to sustain our operations. True, they love the cause, but are extremely careful not to say much in its favor, in the presence of those who love strong drink. They know that something must be done, but they can do nothing. They are aware that money is necessary in order to sustain our operations, but they have none to give. They acknowledge the importance of public meetings, but they can find no time to attend them. If you urge upon them the necessity of individual action, they readily nod assent. If you tell them that their fellow citizens and neighbors, even, are fast going down to the drunkard's grave, they say, it is too true, but we cannot help it. They act like the man, who, when the city is on fire, looks calmly on at a distance and sees not only buildings, but the bodies of his fellow-citizens consuming in the flames, without lifting a finger to arrest the progress of the conflagration.

We call upon these men to awake from their lethargy, and put forth a vigorous and determined effort, to rescue the poor inebriate from impending destruction and stop the abominable traffic. Luke-warm temperance men! Look around you and behold the ravages intemperance is making in our midst; witness those disgusting sights which present themselves before our eyes; look in the drunkeries of our cities and villages; see there the once amiable and highly esteemed husband and father imbruting himself over the intoxicating cup; go to the abode of the drunkard and there behold the poverty, shame and sorrow of his disconsolate family—see his long suffering and much abused wife—his hungry starving, emaciated and woe begone children. Then look into the family of the drunkard maker, clothed in purple and linen and fuming sumptuously every day; living in princely magnificence, surrounded by all the elegancies of life, and ask yourself, what makes the difference? And then tell us, will you not put forth your hand to snatch the bird from the snare of the fowler—to save the poor drunkard from the tender mercies of the drunkard maker.—Luke-warm temperance men, bestir yourself! Be not so indifferent to the happiness of your brother man. Unite heartily and speedily with those who are labouring in this cause. Show to the world that you are sincere in your professions of temperance.

It is stated that measures are in train, in England, to raise a fund for the benefit of Frederick Douglass, (colored,) on the principle of the "Colden Testimonial." The plan is to raise three millions of pennies, or one for each slave in the United States. This would amount to about sixty thousand dollars, and would, of course, afford a very handsome income.

A Havana (Cuba) paper publishes a list of the houses destroyed or injured in and about that city, by the terrible hurricane of the tenth and eleventh of last October. Houses destroyed, twelve hundred and seventy-five; more or less injured, ten hundred and thirty-eight. Of the former, thirty-six were of stone, and eight hundred and thirteen of wood; of the latter, two hundred and twenty-five were of stone and eight hundred and thirteen of wood.

A New York fashioned dray has made its appearance in the streets of Boston.

MISCELLANY.

THE WRECKER OF THE REEF.

A fearful night closed the third day of September, 1827. Along the whole coast of Florida, from St. Mary's to the Escambia; along the entire inland reef, from Key Biscayne, to Las Isles Bontugas, there was nothing but one continued sheet of foam—one long range of roaring breakers. At sea, the hurricane swept all before it; on shore, the tall trees writhed and creaked, bowed and fell before its blast, which was like the breath of desolation.

Upon the low marshy shore of Key Taverner, at the mid hour of this wild tempestuous night, stood Jacob Housman, the wrecker, with a night glass in his hand, scanning the horizon whenever the vivid flashes of lightning broke from the clouds and illuminated the sea-ward distance. In a little cove at the back of the island, sheltered by the thick mangrove growth, and perfectly secure from the force of the gale, lay the "Letitia," his wrecking sloop, with her crew on board ready for service.

"D—!" muttered Housman, impatiently, as he glanced along the range of the reef with his glass; "not a wreck to-night! not one keel ashore, and it's the best night of the season! The wind's a point or two too far to the north to blow 'em fair on. I don't like it, but I'm afraid we'll have to use the lights, if any thing heaves in sight! I wonder if old Blocks and his gang are awake and on the lookout?"

The wrecker drew a dark lantern from under his rough pea-jacket, and taking from his pocket a fusée of sulphur, touched it to the light. For a moment it threw out a rich blue haze that completely illuminated the beach and breakers for some distance around, and the wrecker extinguished it. As soon as he had done so, he looked towards Key Rodriguez, an island about three miles to the north and eastward of that on which he stood. In a moment a blue light blazed out on 'Rodriguez,' showing a group of persons standing on the outer points of the island, and the mast-head of a schooner in the mouth of the creek which runs through Largo, back of it.

"It's all right," again muttered Housman, raising his glass and sweeping the horizon once more. He was just dropping his glass at the end of the flash, when something met his eye to seaward, and he again raised it, waiting for another flash of light. It came.

"A sail, by all that's lucky!" shouted he. He awaited another flash, and then attentively scanned the object in view. His face wore a mere satisfied look, and he again spoke:

"A ship, hull tipped and low in the water! She's an outward bound New Orleans and New York packet. Dry goods and hardware, with some fancy fixings—that's her cargo, and it'll pay a fellow for his trouble in saving some of it, if the crew or owners don't get ashore to bother honest men with their freight lists and protests. But she'll soon make the land, and if we don't show 'em lights they'll be hauling off, and go clear. Let's see. Shall I show 'em the Cape? or Sand Key and Key West? They're too far south for the cape, and they're fools if they don't know it. We'll try 'em with Sand Key and Key West, and then they'll aim to make a harbor and that'll plump 'em on the 'Hen and Chickens!' Good, we'll try it."

Again the wrecker brought out his lantern, and this time he set fire to two blue lights. In a moment it was answered on Rodriguez with three similar lights, and as they went out, a clear, steady, white light was shown in the same place, which looked precisely like the light of the light-house. Then the wrecker raised a little tripod, something like a surveyor's, placed a machine which lay near him upon it, and lighted a brilliant reflecting lamp within it. He then wound up the machinery, which seemed to work on the principle of a clock, and the work was done. The upper part of the machine turned on a pivot and one part only being open, it would by turns, obscure and exhibit the light within, making the very appearance of the revolving light which has stood for years on Sand Key. The distances of the islands and the peculiarities of the two lights were well calculated to deceive the most experienced mariner, especially when seen at night, when distances cannot be calculated with certainty.

As soon as the lights were up, Housman drew a boatswain's call from his pocket, and blew a shrill whistle, which was immediately answered from the sloop in the cove. In a few minutes a man came stumbling through the darkness in the same direction.

"Do you want me, captain?" said the new comer to Housman.

"Yes, Cozzens, there's a craft outside that I'm telling in. It blows too heavy to think of getting aboard of her; she'll go to pieces on the outer reef, but we must man the boats and look out that nobody ever gets ashore from her to tell about these lights. We can pick up every thing that floats, to-night, and when the blow is over, our divers'll get the heavy things out of her. It's a clear rock bottom where she'll strike, if she runs in thinkin' this to be Key West. Man the boats and keep a bright look out! Send my boat's crew here with the

* The light house of Cape Florida stands on Key Biscayne, is a single light, and was destroyed in 1837, by the Indians.

† The light houses of Sand Key and Key West are on separate islands, about seven miles apart. The former was a revolving light, the latter a fixed one. Both were destroyed in the late gale, September, 1836.

boat; I'll go out and lend a hand after she strikes. 'Aye, aye, sir!' said the man and departed.

The wrecker again raised his glass toward the ship, which now, in the intervals of light, could be seen even with the naked eye. She was under a close-reefed main topsail and storm-stay-sails, and evidently had made out the lights, for she was heading right in towards the breakers, holding the very course which should have led her safely into Key West, between the two lights, had she been off that place.

A smile of hellish exultation played over the face of Housman, as he saw her bounding on to destruction. What to him was the lives of her crew and passengers? Nothing! when compared to the plunder which he expected to acquire.

The boats of the wreckers were now preparing to leave the island. The gale was still at its height; demons seemed shrieking through the air; the sea was white with foam; yet, on, with her spars braced and her sails almost bursting from each strained yard, came the ill-fated ship.

She was almost in the breakers, and then her crew seemed to have discovered their danger; for she yawed in her course, and seemed to try to come close hauled to the wind. But it was too late! She was helpless in the huge rollers. A moment, she pitched heavily, broadside on; then the breakers were around her, and she swept swiftly on to the rocks. She struck. Her tall spars pitched heavily forward into the boiling mass. And then could be seen black specks spotting the foam, as her planks began to part from her hull. The hull could be seen rising and falling heavily for a moment, amid those rocks, and then nothing but a few fragments floating about was left of the noble ship, which so lately had careered over the ocean in all her strength and beauty. Inside of the breakers, in the smooth water, could be seen the wreckers' boats pulling hither and thither toward the dark specks in the foam, and now and then an oar blade could be seen to rise in the flashing gleam of the lightning, and after it came down with fearful force upon one of those black specks in the foam, the speck would disappear. Oh, it was horrible! Man was hurrying death in his own work, even when death was sure!

It was an half hour after the wreck had gone to pieces. Two or three dead bodies had been swept upon the beach, and these the wreckers had pilaged and stripped, and there on the cold wet sand they lay, naked and unburied. Scattered along the beach, lying to and fro, gathering up all the things that floated ashore, were the wreckers.

"A pretty good night's work, Cozzens!" said Housman to his mate, as they strolled up toward the head of the island. "Do you think all the crew have gone to Davy Jones?"

"Well, I'd wonder where else they'd go to, captain on such a night, in such a sea as you is!"

"I expect you are about three thirds right! Well, the lights are out and all are safe now. I wish it was day so that we could see how much of a raise we've made. Hullo! what's that in the edge of the surf there? It's alive, and I'm sure none of our gang are this far up. Wade out to it, Cozzens, and see what it is. Here take this bit of rock along with you. Remember our lights, and 'dead men tell no tales.' Eh, boy? That's the motto for money!"

The man picked up the large stone that Housman had pointed to him, and waded out into the surf a few yards, where a human being was faintly struggling towards the shore.

"Is it one of us?" shouted Housman.

"No!" said the mate, "it's a woman, and by hock, she's got a diamond on her finger that I want!"

As the brute roughly dragged her through the surf, the poor creature screamed fearfully, for she had heard his words, and knew that friends spoke not thus.

"Why don't you hush her up?" shouted Housman, angrily. "We don't want no more here to share with us!"

"I hate to strike a woman!" growled the man.

"Strike her down!—strike her down! I wouldn't spare my mother, if it was her!" again cried the wrecker, maddened as she shrieked again and again for help. "You—milk sop, must I do it for you! continued the wrecker, as he rushed toward the girl and snatched the rock from the trembling mate.

"Oh, God! Jacob! bro—," screamed the young girl, as a lightning flash lit up the faces of the parties. Her words were cut short by the crushing weight of that fearful blow, but the next instant he that gave it fell powerless upon her corpse.

"Oh, God!" he groaned in the bitterness of agony, "Oh, God!" my only sister! Irene! Irene! Oh, God! just, but awful is thy punishment!"

Jacob Housman never smiled after that night. He continued in the wrecking business, grew rich, but never smiled more! Misfortune at last came upon him. During one night in 1839, he lost nearly all of his property. Indian Key, which belonged to him, was taken and burned by the Indians, and he had but a single wrecking vessel left on the reef. Within two months, he was crushed to death between his boat and the side of a wreck which he was boarding, and this was the last of 'THE WRECKER OF THE REEF.'

In the summer of life, men keep digging and filling ice-pits, as well as circumstances will admit; so that, in their winter, they may have something in store to give them coolness.

FAITH AND HOPE.

One morning as the sun arose, two spirits went forth upon the Earth.

And they were sisters; but faith was of mature age, while Hope was yet a child.

They were both beautiful. Some loved to gaze upon the countenance of Faith, for her eye was serene, and her beauty changed not; but Hope was the delight of every eye.

And the child sported in the freshness of the morning; and as she hovered over the gardens and dewy lawns, her wings glittered in the sunbeams like a rainbow.

"Come, my sister," she cried, "and chase with me the butterfly from flower to flower."

But her sister was gazing at the lark, as it arose from its low nest and warbled among the clouds.

And when it was noon, the child said again; "Come, my sister, and pluck with me the flowers of the garden, for they are beautiful, and their fragrance is sweet."

But faith replied: "Nay, my sister, let the flowers be there, for thou art young and delightest thyself in their beauty. I will meditate in the shade until the heat of the day be past. Thou wilt find me by the fountain in the forest. When thou art weary, come and repose on my bosom."

And she smiled and departed.

After a time Hope sought her sister. The tear was in her eye; and her countenance was mournful.

Then Faith said: "My sister, wherefore dost thou weep, and why is thy countenance sad?"

And the child answered: "Because a cloud is in the sky, and the sunshine is overcast—see the rain begins to fall."

"It is but a shower," Faith replied, "and when it is over, the fields will be greener than before."

Now the place where they sat was sheltered from the rain, as it had been from the noon-tide heat. And Faith comforted the child, and showed her how the waters flowed with a fuller and a clearer stream as the showers fell.

And presently the sun broke out again, and the woods resounded with song.

Then Hope was glad, and went forth to her sports once more.

After a while the sky was again darkened, and the young spirit looked up, and behold, there was no cloud in the whole circle of the heavens.

Therefore Hope marvelled, for it was not yet

And she fled to her sister, and cast herself down at her feet, and trembled exceedingly.

Then Faith raised the child, and lead her forth from the shade of the trees, and pointed to the sun and said:

"A shadow is passing over the face thereof, but no ray of his glory is extinguished. He still walketh in brightness, and thou shalt again delight thyself in his beams. See, even yet his face is not wholly hidden from us."

But the child dared not look up, for the gloom struck upon her heart.

And when all was bright again, she feared to wander from her sister, and her sports were less gay than before.

When the eventide was come, Faith went forth from the forest shades and sought the lawn, where she might watch the setting of the sun.

Then said she to her young sister: "Come and behold how far the glories of the sunset transcend the beauties of the morning. See how softly they melt away, and give place to the shadows of night."

But Hope was now weary—her eye was heavy, and her voice languid. She folded her radiant wings, and dropped on her sister's bosom, and fell asleep.

But Faith watched through the night—she was never weary, nor did her eyelids need repose.

She laid the child on a bed of flowers, and kissed her cheek. She also drew her mantle round the head of the young sleeper, that she might sleep in peace.

Then Faith looked upward, and beheld how the stars came forth. She traced them in their radiant courses, and listened to their harmonies, which mortal ear hath not heard.

And as she listened, their music entranced her soul.

At length a light appeared in the East, and the sun burst forth from the portals of the heavens. Then the spirit hastened to arouse the young sleeper.

"Awake! O my sister! awake!" she cried, "a new day hath dawned, and no cloud shall overshadow it. Awake, for the sun hath arisen which shall set no more."

The grand prize of the royal lottery at Havana—the one hundred thousand dollars—was drawn by fifty colored persons, most of them slaves. They had joined to buy three whole tickets, and gave one dollar each for that purpose.

A State Convention of colored persons in New York, who have received grants of land from Gerrit Smith, Esq., assembled at Ithaca, "to take into consideration the new circumstances in which they are placed by the munificence of the great grantor."

The Corresponding Secretary of the American Peace Society, has issued an appeal to the friends of peace throughout the United States, to make such exertions as they are capable of, for bringing the Mexican war to a speedy close.

WHAT IS COURTING? It is a hard problem—one of the hardest in the world—to draw the exact line between mere polite attentions or courtesies and real genuine, bona fide courting; but Corporal Streeter, who has had great experience in love matters, and is a very knowing "un" among the girls, gives the following excellent rules by the aid of which the young and artless maiden may be expected to decide promptly and correctly on the matter. He says:—

First, then—if a young fellow greets you in a loud, free and hearty tone—if he knows precisely where to put his hat or his hands—if he stares you straight in the eye with his own wide open—if he turns his back to you to speak to another—if he tells you who made his coat—if he squeezes your hand—if he eats hearty in your presence—if he fails to talk kindly to your mother—if he sneezes when you are singing, criticises your curls, or fails to be very foolish in fifty ways every hour, then don't fall in love with him for the world; if he only admires you, let him do or say what else he may. But if he be merry with every one else, but quiet with you; if he is anxious to see that your tea is sufficiently sweetened, and your dear person well wrapped up when you go out in the cold; if he talks very low and never looks you steadily in the eye; if his cheeks are red; or if he be pale and his nose blush, it is enough; if he romps with your sister, sighs like a pair of old bellows, looks solemn when you are addressed by another gentleman; and in fact, is the most still, awkward, stupid, yet anxious of all your male friends, you may go ahead and invoke the shafts of Cupid with perfect safety, and make the poor fellow too happy for his skin to hold him.

GOOD WIFE. That young lady will make a good wife, who does not apologise when you find her at work in the kitchen, but continues at her task till the work is finished.

When you hear a lady say, 'I shall attend church and wear my old bonnet and every day gown, for I fear we shall have a rainstorm,' depend upon it she will make a good wife.

When a daughter remarks, 'Mother, I would not hire help, for I can assist you to do all the work in the kitchen,' set it down that she will make somebody a good wife.

When you overhear a young woman saying to her father, 'Don't purchase a very expensive or showy dress for me, but one that will wear long,' you are certain she will make a good wife.

When you see a female rise early, get breakfast and do up her mother's work in season, and then sit down to sew or knit, depend upon it, she will make a good wife.

When you see a female anxious to learn a trade, so as to earn something to support herself and perhaps assist her aged parents, you may be sure that she will make one of the best of wives.

The best qualities to look after in a wife are—industry, humility, neatness, gentleness, benevolence and piety. Where you find these there is no danger. You will obtain a treasure, and not regret your choice to the latest period.—Portland Tribune.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, Dec. 29, 1846.

MR. EDITOR—Perhaps you and your readers may like to hear what is going on in this great city of Boston, and having a leisure moment from business, this being the dull season, and an inclination to commit my thoughts to paper, I embrace the opportunity.

In the first place, the Old Colony Rail Road have a meeting this week for choice of Directors, etc. I understand the present President declines a reelection and I hope the choice will fall on one who will recommend a liberal and enlightened course. Such a course will in my opinion be of great benefit to the stockholders. The fact is, notwithstanding the present prices are as low as the average of roads, still I believe a greater reduction would be great advantage to the stockholders. I think if the prices to Quincy and the vicinity be fixed as low as on the Worcester trains to Newton, it would induce a great many to move in that direction and consequently very much increase the permanent receipts of the road. I don't intend any censure to the present board, as I believe a liberal view has generally actuated them in their direction. I hope yet to see my native town a suburb of the city of my adoption and real estate bear a proportional price.

In the absence of brisk business, the raising of the several corps to take part in the Mexican war is at present a cause of some excitement. They are generally filling up well and you may rely on it, notwithstanding the opposition of our friends the whigs, Massachusetts will be represented at the taking of the "Halls of Montezuma." Yes, the sons and grandsons of the heroes of Concord, Lexington and Dorchester Heights will be true and an honor to their birth. It shall not be said of the sons of the old Bay State that in a contest where the honor of our country is at stake, that they were behind the sons of our sister States in striking that blow which shall rebound to our country's honor. Yes, their bones shall be found bleaching upon the same sands with those of the sons of the western, southern and middle States who have so promptly answered the call of the constituted authorities, and the same stigma will rest upon the federalists of Massachusetts as has so justly rested upon them for the same course pursued in the last war. And notwithstanding their course is so odious to the people, the democratic party in this State has exhibited a great falling off, for the past two years, and why? It is because the men put forth as the leaders of that party in this State have been false to their trust. Yes, Marcus Morton, as the administration leader of New England democracy, has pursued such a course as to produce a feeling of disgust and general apathy in the ranks of the democratic party. He retains in office the rankest federalists and turns out democrats who have ever been ready to spend time and money and labor to advance the cause of democracy, and for no other reason but that they were opposed to the nomination of Martin Van Buren on the ground that they did not believe it possible to elect him, and filled their places by a set of time-serving politicians of his own stamp, who are totally unfit to discharge the duties of their office; so much so, that I understand that the merchants of Boston are about to send a memorial to the Secretary of the Treasury, stating that they have no objections to men, on the ground of political opinions, but that they feel they have a right to have men who have general intelligence enough to know a ship from a sloop, which is not now the case; and you may rely upon it that some step must be taken by the young democracy to retrieve their lost ground, and I am happy to see it recommended in several of the country democratic papers to call a mass convention this winter for a new and thorough organization of the party. It must be done if we mean to do any thing in the contest of '48. The fact is, we must have new leaders; Marcus Morton and company must retire and leave the party in the hands of men who are not yet filled with vindictiveness, as he has shown himself to be.

Yours, D.

LETTER FROM THE WEST.

LOUISVILLE, (Ky.) Dec. 23d, 1846.

MR. GREEN—As some length of time has elapsed since any communication of mine has been honored with a place in your columns, I thought I would send you a hasty sketch of what is taking place in Louisville and vicinity.

The Mexican war is still agitating the public mind from east to west. Already have the members of Congress commenced taking the matter in hand; those favorable to the present administration attempting to throw the weight and burden of it upon the opposite party, by what show of reasoning is more than I can possibly imagine or conceive. The whigs, too, are still anxious that the administration should continue to 'take the responsibility.' But every philanthropic heart, of whatever party he may be connected, expresses the wish that the war may, as soon as practicable or possible, be brought to a speedy close. This country, we all thought a year or two since, was too far advanced in Christianity and civilization, to engage in such bloody and uncalled for hostility. For one, I am perfectly willing that those who were the prime movers of it, may have all the glory arising from it. It is true that the difficulties with Mexico did not originate with the present administration, but during the two previous ones. But nevertheless, our present chief Magistrate seems to have advanced the matter mightily to its present state. It is not within the power of any pen to spread out to our view the amount of suffering which this war has been the offspring of. The agony of a mother at the loss of a son, of a sister at the untimely death of a brother, or of a wife at the loss of the partner of her bosom. Many were the tears which I saw coursing their way down the cheeks of a fond wife, at the departure of her husband from this city to the seat of war. On one occasion, as I, with many others, were beholding the troops, my attention was drawn towards a couple, whom I took to be man and wife. As the drum gave the signal for them to move she expressed herself in these words—"Oh!" (calling him by name) "this will be the last time that I shall ever lay eyes upon you!" and turning around buried her face in her handkerchief, and with a heavy sigh made her way towards her now lonely home. But enough. May God speed the day when this unholy war shall end.

We have had but little severe cold weather with us as yet, although we cannot tell what is in store for us. Last season, at this time, the Ohio river was closed with ice, and navigation entirely suspended. For the last two weeks the river has been very high; for a few days it overflowed the street fronting it. It falls very fast, however, after it commences. This season has proved a fatal one to the steamboats on this and the rivers below. Often do I see a number of boats at the wharf, about pushing out for their destination, every one on board looking joyful and happy at the prospect of soon reaching their homes in safety; and the next news will be that such and such a boat has run into a Polk Stalk and sunk. New ones are, however, continually being built to take the place of the old ones.

The temperance question is beginning to agitate the public minds of this city to some extent. The city election takes place next May; it is thought by a goodly portion of the voters that a number of the present City Council should have the privilege of staying at home for the future. A majority of them seem willing, for the small sum of one hundred dollars added to the treasury, to license that which will have the tendency to jeopardize the health if not the lives of as many of their fellow citizens. The people think and say that there are too many Coffee Houses; and yet there is not a regular meeting of the Council held, but what an application is made for a license to sell liquors, and it is readily granted.

The Sons of Temperance are increasing rapidly. It is but a few months since the first Division was opened, and at present there are seven or eight with about one thousand members! A paper was started about three months since, under the auspices of the Order, and its prospects are good for its continuance.

Christmas is nigh at hand and the negroes are cutting up all sorts of antics in anticipation of the day. They commenced about a week since firing off squibs and crackers, and will continue to do so until new year's day, when it ceases. On that day hundreds of them may be seen gathered around the Market House, ready to let themselves for the following year. Others to be sold, anxiously beholding the person who is to be their future master. If they can only avoid going down South it is the most they care about. But if, on the contrary, they find that their new master belongs down the river they make known their grief at once. This 'peculiar institution,' I hope to see abolished in this State. It is operating against its best interest, and it behooves the people of this State to take some lawful and just measures for its ultimate overthrow. So far as my knowledge and observation extends, the negroes of this city are as a general thing, well treated; and it certainly would amuse some of your readers to take a walk with me on some warm evening, especially Sunday, and see the little negro and white children all playing together in front of the dwelling-houses, each alike enjoying themselves.

By the time this is published, New Year's day will have just past. It well becomes us to look back and see what sad changes time has wrought amongst our kindred and friends, during the space of a year. About two years since I left Quincy for the west, not knowing when it would be my good fortune to behold the many familiar faces of those kind friends and acquaintances whom I have left behind. In reading your paper from week to week I notice the departure of one and another to that bourne from whence no traveller returns. We may well enquire when shall we be taken?

I have spun a few ideas over considerable paper. You must take them for what they are worth. If this proves acceptable I will send 'one more of the sort' soon. In haste,

J. S.

P. S. We received news this morning that Santa Anna was at Victoria with ten thousand men, and that they expected some hard fighting soon. By next arrival we think we shall have the news of a battle.

REFLECTIONS ON THE PAST YEAR.

The old year has departed, and we stand upon the threshold of the new; what more appropriate time than this to pause and reflect upon our past lives, and as we do so, make new, high and noble resolves for the future. It is a sad and also a joyous occasion. I think there are none of us, who can look back upon the events of the old year, as they have transpired in their various shapes, to each one of us, but we shall find much that is fraught with pleasure, and the recollections of it would remember and cherish, and much, also, that would be much better forgotten. To many it has been a season of peculiar happiness, no clouds may have passed over us, to mar our pleasure, and gaily and heedlessly have we lived, paying no thought (it may be) to the future—thinking not of our future welfare—regarding the present, only as the all in all to us, and instead of laying up for ourselves treasures in Heaven, have like the slothful servant, "hid our talent in the earth," and lived on in present happiness and ease.

To many, the departed year has been one of great sorrow. Sickness, it may be, has laid its hand upon some, and racked them with pain; and, to many, grim Death has appeared, entering into the bosom of our families, and without mercy laid his ruthless hand upon father, mother, sister or brother. Many it would seem, have had more than their portion of sorrow. Behold the mother and sister, who appear before us, robed in sackcloth. From them, the old year has swept away a dear and beloved son or brother—their staff and support—the object of their heart's fondest affection. Turn to yonder house of mourning! behold the scene! Within a few weeks of one another the husband and son, mother and daughter, have departed to heaven, their final resting place. But it is said, every sorrow brings with it its joys, for the ways of God are just. Let not the afflicted fall into despondency, but with contrite hearts, and holy aspirations, enter upon the new year with their dependence placed on God, and not on man. Aye, yes! look up thou afflicted one, the new year will bring its joys and heavenly balm. Look up into the smiles of their Creator. Remember they have not gone from you forever, they are for you, treasures laid up in Heaven, where moth and rust will not corrupt. Look to yourselves, keep your own souls pure, so that you may rejoice again, in the sunshine of eternity.

To the young, the old year has been full of temptations; many have fallen under them. Many more have undoubtedly fallen into the snares laid for them, and only by strong efforts extricated themselves. The new year will bring with it new inducements to sin, but those who have been warned; let them take warning still. Beware of the wolves in sheep's clothing, who are ever on the alert to entrap the unsuspecting. Many a young man has found his ruin the past year, in the bar room, and bowling saloon, and in the company of the unprincipled; many more are in the same path to ruin. Oh! then, thou young man, beware! The show is tempting but the reward is misery. Now is the commencement of a new year, pause and ask yourself the question—am I doing right. Your conscience cannot be so hardened, but it will answer, no. Then with one strong and manly effort, throw off your shackles, and begin the path of virtue.

Do not forget the printer when paying your debts; a little money now will cheer him, and he will labor for your edification with a willing mind.

CONGRATULATORY. With this number we commence upon the eleventh year of our labors. We hope that our present subscribers will continue to cheer us by their support, and that a goodly number in addition will become our patrons for the year upon which we have just entered. Our humble efforts shall be devoted to render the Patriot worthy of their support and confidence.

COURT AT DEDHAM. The present session of the Court of Common Pleas, at Dedham, will be brought to a close to-day. We find no synopsis of its proceedings in the Dedham paper of yesterday, and conclude that our brother editor must have been much engaged.

We learn from a townsman, that the jury did not agree in the case of Wood vs. Veazie, in relation to a piece of land.

In the case of slander, where one of the parties reside in this town, and the other in Milton, we understand that the defendant was mulcted in about twenty dollars, fine and costs.

PRESENTS FOR NEW YEAR. The season of New Year's gifts has arrived, and at no place can a more varied and beautiful selection be found than at the Quincy Bookstore. The assortment consists of annuals, an excellent variety of elegantly bound books on miscellaneous subjects, toy books, and other appropriate tokens of remembrance. A large collection of toys to please the juvenile mind may also be obtained. At this "gift giving time" no one should fail to bestow some small memorial of friendship upon those whom they love and esteem; therefore call where these suitable mementos can be purchased. [See advertisements.]

LIST OF DEATHS. We have been unable to procure a full list of deaths, for the year 1846, for this week's paper, but shall endeavor to publish it the ensuing week.

CORRESPONDENCE. We are in the hopes that our friends in Boston and in Louisville, (Ky.) will continue their favors to they have intimated. Their communications, which appear to-day, are of interest. Our readers will bear in mind that they express their sentiments.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION. At the second trial, Hon. Daniel P. King (whig), has been chosen a member of Congress from the second district in this State. Hon. John G. Palfrey, (whig), now Secretary of State, has also been chosen in the fourth district. The Massachusetts delegation is now full and composed of all whigs.

MEXICO. No news of any movement worthy of notice. Every day's mail is expected to bring intelligence of a severe conflict. Each party is preparing for a struggle.

CONGRESS. As yet no business of any particular interest has occurred in either branch. Senator Barrow of Louisiana died in Baltimore, a few days since, after a short sickness. This has engrossed one or more days of Congress.

VESSEL OF WAR LOST. The United States brig of war Somers, which was blockading Vera Cruz, in attempting to head a vessel supposed to be running the blockade, was capsized and sunk. She was about two miles from the Castle of St. Juan d'Ulloa, and a mile and a half from the English, French and Spanish ships of war, at the time of the accident. Out of seventy-five souls on board thirty-eight were lost, including two officers, Passed Midshipmen H. A. Clemson and J. R. Hynson. The other officers and crew saved themselves by clinging to some of the spare spars that floated till boats from the foreign ships of war took them off.

GOVERNMENT WAGONS. Mr. Warren Mansfield of Braintree, has recently manufactured over forty heavy wagons intended for the Government service in Mexico, in the short space of eighteen days after he had received the order. Mr. Mansfield has every thing in readiness about his premises, and possessing himself a large share of energy and business talents, can accomplish an immense amount of work, in a very short time, in a truly workmanlike manner. Success attend him.

MURDER PREVENTED. The Duel which was anticipated, between R. B. Bayly of Virginia, and Garrett Davis of Kentucky, both members of Congress, will not take place. The Police of Washington City, getting wind of the affair have placed the former under bonds of ten thousand dollars to keep the peace of the District for the term of one year, and not to leave the district for that term, for the purpose of fighting a duel.

Do not forget the printer when paying your debts; a little money now will cheer him, and he will labor for your edification with a willing mind.

MARRIED.

In this town, 31st ult., by Rev. Mr. Lunt, Mr. JOHN WATKINS of Dorchester, & Mrs. HARRIET E. MARSH of this place.

Our kind wishes for the favor accompanying the above notice.

They now are one—the sacred vow
That made them such is spoken;
Nor, till at death's command they bow,
May this strong tie be broken.

And through life's pleasures sharing,
May they make each other's blessing,
Mutual every burden bearing,
Let God's blessings on them rest.

DIED.

In Boston, 24th ult., Helen Mary Curtis, youngest child of William H. Cox, formerly of this town, aged 20 months.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is ample sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDER connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

POETRY.

A FAREWELL TO THE YEAR.

Hark! friends, it strikes; the year's last hour,
A solemn sound to hear;
Come fill the cup, and let us pour
Our blessings on the parting year,
The years that were, the dim, the grey,
Receive this night with coral hymn,
A sister-shade as lost as they,
And soon to be as grey and dim;
Fill high; she brought us both of weal and wo,
And nearer lies the land to which we go.

On, on, in one unwearied round,
Old Time pursues his way,
Groves bud and blossom, and the ground
Expects in peace her yellow prey;
The oak's broad leaf, the rose's bloom,
Together fell, together lie,
And undistinguished in the tomb,
How'er they lived, are all that die;
Gold, beauty, knightly sword, and royal crown,
To the same sleep go shorn and withered down.

How short the rapid months appear
Since round this board we met,
To welcome in the infant year,
Whose star hath now forever set!
Alas! as round this board I look,
I think on more than I behold,
For glossy curls in gladness shook
That night, that now are damp and cold;
For so no more those lovely eyes shall shine—
Peace to her slumbers! down your tears in wine.

Thank Heaven, no keener unblest am I,
Before the time to tell,
When moons as brief once more go by,
For whom this cup again shall swell.
The hazy mowers stude space,
Not crops alone the ripened ear,
And we may miss the merriest face
Among us, 'gainst another year;
Who'er survive, be kind as we have been,
And surmise of friends that sleep beneath the green.

Nay, drop not! being is not breath;
'Tis fate that friends must part,
But God will bless in life, in death,
The noble soul, the gentle heart,
So deeds be just and words be true,
We need not shrink from nature's rule;
The tomb, so dark to mortal view,
Is heaven's own blessed vestibule,
And solemn, but not sad, this wine shall flow,
Though nearer lies the land to which we go.

THE FAREWELL.

Fare-thee-well! the word is spoken—
Lips have breathed the last adieu—
Hearts have bled o'er pleasure broken,
Pure as friendship ever knew;
Fare-thee-well!—may absence find thee,
Still the same as now thou art;
Trembled thoughts of those behind thee,
Dwell forever near thy heart.

Looks lit up with hope may meet thee
In some far and stranger land,
Welcome smiles of pleasure greet thee,
Eyes of love and voices bland—
But, when brightly pass before thee,
All the joys of Fashion's train—
Memory's magic charm steal o'er thee,
Bear thee to thy home again.

Hearts drink agony to sorrow,
Whence to-day, their solace springs—
Chequer'd scenes of light and sorrow
Mark the course of human things.
Soon alas! the fairest roses
Lie dissolved of all their bloom—
And life's pageantry discloses,
But a pathway to the tomb.

Spirit-sentinels, protect thee,
Till thy final hour may come;
Faith unwavering then direct thee,
To thine amaranthine home—
Where with songs of joy and gladness,
Friends may walk the pearly shore;
And the parting word of sadness
Stir the depths of grief no more.

ANECDOTES.

A Yankee, boasting an inveterate hatred of every thing British and living in a house with a colonist family, took every opportunity to have a slap at brother Bull. "You are arguing," said the colonist, "against your ancestors." "No, I am not," "Who was your father?" "A Yankee." "Who were your forefathers?" "Yankees." "Who were Adam and Eve?" "Yankees, by thunder!"

"Are you unwell?" said a wag, the other day, to a fellow whom he met and who had a very ugly "phiz." "Unwell?" was the quick reply, "why I never felt better in my life! what do you see ailing me?" "O, nothing," said the wag, "I only see that you look very ill—or in other words that you are a very ill looking fellow."

A lady, who had boasted highly to a dinner party of the good manners of her little daughter, addressed him with—Charley, will you have some more beans? "No," was the ill-mannered reply. "No," exclaimed the astonished mother, "no what?" "No BEANS, ma'am," said the child.

"Jeemes, who was the oldest man?"
"Doesn't know, sir."
"Well, who was the oldest woman, then?"
"Ann Tigberty, sir."

"Jane, you must not learn Arithmetic." "Why, mamma?" "Because, my dear, in looking through your books, yesterday, I saw that the fractions were vulgar!"

"This is George the Fourth," said an exhibitor of wax work for the million, a penny each, pointing to a very slim figure with a theatrical crown on his head. "I thought he was a very stout man," observed a spectator. "Werry likely," replied the man shortly, not approving of the comment of his visitor; "but if you had been here without wittles half so long as he has, you'd been twice as thin."

MISCELLANY.

A DREAM, NOT ALL A DREAM.

In 1834, when I was yet a youngster before the mast, I took a trip to Tampico, in a little trading schooner called "The Ella," commanded by a jolly skipper from Florida, one Mat Martin, a dark skinned Spanish creole, who "for short" was by his friends always termed "Nig." This schooner generally carried out dry goods and provisions on her owners account, but I always had an idea, (which I kept to myself), that she "tonned" more than her register made her responsible, and that her hold always contained more goods than could be found on her manifest.

But to return. We were only nine days on our run from New York out to the mouth of Tampico river; and about noon on the tenth day we stretched in over the bar, with a leading wind, that would easily have carried us with a flowing sheet up to the town, which was nearly twelve miles above—
but for reasons best known to himself, the captain anchored as soon as we passed the fort and rounded Point Tampico, just above and out of reach of its guns. The revenue boat from the guarda costa came on board before our sails were furled, and the custom house officers overhauled our papers and manifest. They seemed a little suspicious, and one of the officers was left on board to watch us, while the rest went aboard their own craft, which lay nearly half a mile further down the river, under the guns of the fort. As soon as dinner was ready the captain invited the revenue officer down in the cabin to dine with him; and as they went below,
the former winked his large laughing eye at the mate, and I knew well that there was fun in the wind. As soon as the captain and Mexican had got below, the mate slipped into the small boat and sculled ashore. I saw no more of him until after dark that night. In the mean time I could tell by the lively voices in the cabin that the officer and captain were getting along very well together, and once in a while the tinkle of meeting glasses and a jolly song spoke of "spirit potential" that was playing upon the hearts and senses of both parties.

As night came on hilarious were the tones and more varied the sounds which arose from the cabin,
and it appeared that while twilight began to get blue above, they were fast getting "blue" below.
First I could hear our Mexican spluttering out a Spanish Bacchanalian glee; then Captain Martin would give a touch from a sea song, or a specimen of "nigger" melody. At last, a little after dark, with a real Havana in each of their mouths, they came on deck, the skipper and the watcher. Both were decidedly and unequivocally drunk; if one might judge from their walk and conversation; but I could see that the captain was shamming, although the "spiritual reality" was visible in the Mexican.
He seemed however to retain some shrewd notions
of his duty, and to know that as night was over us,
if we intended to smuggle, it was necessary for him to keep his eyes open. So he seated himself on the taffrail with an air of drunken dignity; and as he hummed a Spanish barcarole, kept watch over the movements of the crew about the deck, glancing
now and then up and down the still river.

As the night advanced I saw that Captain Martin began to look uneasy and anxious, although he pretended to be even more drunk than his guest and spy. At last, when it was near midnight the Mexican became less frequent in snatches of song,
and the "liquor drowze" seemed to be coming over him. He would all unwillingly close his eyes, and then his head would make a long slow bow toward some being imaginary or invisible, until the chin rested on his breast, when up it would fly, as if a bee had stung it, and slowly, drowsily the eyes
would open to the accustomed watch.

Capt. Martin now laid down beside the Mexican,

and pretended to fall into a sound sleep, attesting
the same by a long, loud and regular snore. This threw the Mexican completely off his guard, and wrapping his watch-coat closer around him, he followed suit; and then the twain seemed to be trying which could snore the loudest. When the Senor Mexican had fairly got under head-way, the Captain rose lightly from the deck, and passing forward took the lantern from the binnacle and held it for a minute over the bows. Presently I saw several dark objects coming out from under the shadow of the land, and in a few moments, more than six large native canoes were along side of us.
In the first one that boarded us was the mate and a merchant whom I well knew to belong to one of the best houses in Tampico. The boats came noiselessly along-side, and their crews crept steadily on board. Without a sound the hatches were raised, and package after package of rich dry goods was passed up from the hold and over the side into the boats, by the tawny, half naked rascals.

The boats were nearly all loaded, when I, who had been placed to watch the sleeping revenue officer, saw him open his eyes and before I could move or speak he saw and comprehended all that was going on. Springing to his feet he shouted,
"Guarda costa!—contrabandistas!"

One bound from where he stood by the main hatchway to the taffrail, and our captain was by the side of the officer, with his brawny hands encircling
his wind pipe from which proceeded so much noise.
The Mexican, tried to draw his sword, and struggled manfully to get free from the choking grip;—
but Captain Martin knew that the entire loss of his vessel and cargo would follow detection, and he was not disposed to trifle. Raising the Mexican in spite of his kicks and writhings, in his strong arms
he coolly pitched him overboard. It was quite dark and as the tide was ebbing slowly downward, he passed out of sight instantly; but for a few moments we could hear him splashing and gurgling in the water, and trying to shout. Then all was still again. We knew not whether he had sunk or gained the shore; nor, tell the truth, did we much care.

"Bear a hand, boys!" said the captain tunable in these packages; get the rest of the goods into the boats, and let them get ashore. If that diago has not drank too much water, he may give us some trouble about this matter yet.

In a few moments, the last package to be smuggled was passed into the boats, the "patron" had made the purchase, counted out the pay in doub-loons, the canoes pushed off, and soon vanished up the river. In a few minutes our hatches were replaced, the decks cleared up as before, and the crew
retired to their berths, with orders to be sound asleep and not to wake up on any account.

All this was scarcely arranged, when the dash of oars coming hastily up the river was heard, and in another moment an armed boat from the guarda costa was along-side. At the first sound of the approaching boat, Captain Martin had lain down where he first pretended to go to sleep, and he was snoring louder than ever. Even the curses, many loud and deep, of the angry Mexicans failed to arouse him from his deep slumber. The officer who had been thrown overboard, still dripping
from his involuntary bath, rushed aft, and with no gentle means tried to arouse the sleeper. At last,
the captain, gasping and scratching, slowly opened
his eyes, and as he yawned and scratched his head, coolly asked what was the matter, and what was wanted. Then came a scene! All the Mexicans cursing and swearing, and threatening and carlooning
at once pointing to the officer who had been taking a midnight swim all alone by himself, who with voice louder than the rest, swore that he should have drowned if St. Antonio had not made the sentinels hear his voice aboard the guarda costa, and caused them to send him a boat. The captain could not be made to understand what was the matter, and when he was charged with having thrown the revenue officer overboard, and with smuggling boats along-side, he raised his hands in holy horror towards the stars, and indignantly replied. "Its all a d—d lie!"—Why, said he to the other officer of the guarda costa, "that gentleman dined with me, we drank pretty freely, and then came up from the cabin when both of us laid down here to sleep. I did not wake up until now;
he must have been dreaming, and fallen overboard
in his sleep. You all saw that I was sound asleep when you came aboard; how then could I have thrown him overboard? The idea is absurd, nonsensical, the whole story improbable—yes impossible? See my hatches are all battened down, just as they were when you were on board, when I came in from sea to-day; nothing has been moved,
my crew are all asleep. He must have been dreaming; and while he dreamed of smugglers and the like of such, he must have fallen overboard. He knows very well that he was "as drunk as a Lord."

The story of the captain was well conceived, and told with still better effect, among all the revenue officers, save the victim himself, who called upon every Saint in the calendar to come down and swear that his story was true. But the perfect order and quietude of our vessel; the crew all sound asleep, the hatches battened down just as they were in the morning; the honest indignation of our sleepy captain, and the acknowledgement of the victim that he had been very drunk compared bad
with his own story, and the yarn of Captain Martin was believed. The "soaked" official was taken back to his own vessel, to be tried, and punished

for sleeping on his watch while another officer was left in his place to keep us from smuggling. When daylight came we weighed anchor and sailed up to the town, where we honestly discharged the cargo per manifest, paying honorably all charges and duties thereon.

Captain Martin only cleared five thousand dollars
by the trip, and we have often laughed since of the scene I have described, especially the Mexican's Dream, which was not all a dream.

NEB BUSTLINE.

A LOVE SCENE.

Paris is the place for romantic adventures. One night, some months ago, a young officer of a cavalry regiment was returning to his lodgings late at night,
when he saw on one of the bridges a young woman
of considerable beauty, but clad in the mean garments of a work woman, preparing to plunge into the river. He seized her and threatened to take her to the station-house. She supplicated, however, so earnestly to be let alone, that the officer consented to release her, first, however, exacting a solemn promise that she would not repeat her attempt. She hurried away; but the young soldier deemed it right to follow her. Luckily it was, that he did so; for no sooner did she believe herself free from observation than the unhappy girl plunged into the river. The officer was close upon her and,
with some difficulty, and not without danger, succeeded in dragging her to land. This time he insisted upon accompanying her home. With extreme reluctance, the would-be-suicide led him to a miserable lodging in the most wretched part of the town. Knocking at the door, an old woman appeared, to whom the officer related what had happened. "Ah, madam!" she cried, "it was for that, then, that you borrowed my clothes!" and she then went on to relate to the young officer that the pretended unknown was no other than the daughter of a nobleman of the highest rank, and that she had that night come to borrow the dress in which she appeared, in order, as she said, to avoid discovery in a love adventure. In proof of the truth of the story, the old woman pointed to the young lady's dress, which she had left on assuming her coarse attire. This naturally excited the young man's curiosity to the highest pitch. He insisted on accompanying the young lady to her father, to whom he related all that had taken place. Warm thanks were, of course, heaped upon him, and he was invited to the house, at which he subsequently became a constant visitor. An intimacy sprang up between him and the young lady, which ripened into affection, and the affection resulted in a marriage, celebrated a few days ago. This tale is true, strange as it may appear. It has, of course, created an immense sensation in the upper circles of Parisian society; and at present it is said that all young unmarried ladies are bent on attempting to commit suicide at midnight, in the hope of being saved by a handsome officer of huzzars. It is so romantic! and whatever is romantic has immense popularity in Paris.

A HUSBAND IN A HAT.

The Marquis of Contingue was still living—a charming route of the Regency of Louis XV.—
who had supped with Voltaire, lived with Sophy Amould, and fought a duel with Richelieu a universal man. The Marquis was not old—45 only;
but his life of excitement had burnt like wax candles carried about, and which are rapidly consumed
by constant movement. He was a complete man, of whom nothing further could be made—but a husband or some other magnificent thing.

Contingue was rich—well at the Court, passed for clever, for he had for five years had a man of letters for his Secretary, and so adulation everywhere awaited him. All marriageable damsels experienced tender emotions at his appearance, the mothers praised him, the fathers, brothers, uncles were charmed with him. Of the cousins only did he seem the personal foe.

Contingue understood all this perfectly; and he had for some time been thinking of settling down.
In the midst of festivities and enjoyments, infirmities
were overtaking him—elegant and perfumed
infirmities that he still concealed under black velvet
—but which admonished him of the need he would have of the tender care of a wife. The difficulty was in the choice. The Marquis knew the world well enough to understand that a young person who marries an old man, only marries a position in society. In those cases he knew the choice was determined by the fortune and the marriage outfit,
and the husband was merely included as surplusage
—an inevitable inconvenience. He thought of all this, and often scratched his head, and was lost in reflection. But time passed. Delay but increased the difficulty—for the security of the husband is precisely in the reverse ratio of his years.

At last the Marquis came to this resolution. It was to leave the matter to chance. Chance had often favored him, and at any rate, there was originality in the scheme. He went to a brilliant party at the Princess de Lamballe's. All that was beautiful and noble was there assembled. M. de Contingue was announced. He entered gravely—his eyes uplifted—his sword pointed upwards—in short, with the air of Leluin in Orestes. A general burst of laughter saluted him. Nothing disconcerted, he said "I come, ladies, to consult Destiny. Herein are an existence and the heart of a man," and he partially opened his folded hat, filled with tickers. "Here are an income of one hundred thousand francs and a dowry; but a single one of these tickets is marked, and it is to be the winner; approach, ladies, and draw."

The young persons entering into the joke and unconscious of the nature of the lottery, surrounded him and each drew a ticket. The marked one was drawn by Mademoiselle de Merepoix, a handsome brunette of twenty-five.

"Mademoiselle," said the Marquis seriously,
"what you have won is a husband. I put myself and my fortune into this hat; accept the one and the other, for both belong to you."

At first there was laughing, but it was seen the thing was in earnest; and Mademoiselle, who was not rich and had not sighed for some time, swooned with delight.

Three years afterwards, the Marquis was an emigrant in Germany, and his wife was in England.

THE STORY OF TOM SPOONS.

"I never undertook but once," said Tom, "to set at naught the authority of my wife. You know her way—cool, quiet, but determined as ever grew.
Just after we were married, and all nice and cozy,
she got me into the habit of doing all the churning.
She never asked me to do it, you know, but when she—why it was done just in this way:—
She finished breakfast before me one morning, and slipped away from the table, she filled the churn
with cream, and set it just where I couldn't help seeing what was wanted. So I took hold, regular enough and churned till the butter had come. She didn't thank me, but looked so nice and sweet about it that I felt well paid. Well, when the next churning day came, she did the same thing, and I followed suit and fetched the butter. Again and again it was done just so, and I was regularly in for it every time. Not a word said you know of course. Well, by and by, this began to be rather irksome. I wanted she should just ask me, but she never did, and I couldn't say any thing about it to save my life, so on we went.

At last, I made a resolve that I would not churn another time, unless she asked me. Churning day came, and when my breakfast—she always had good breakfasts—when that was swallowed there stood the churn. I got up and standing a few minutes just to give a chance, put on my hat and walked out of doors. I stopped in the yard to give her time to call me, but never a word said she, and so, with a polished bow, I turned on my heel, and went town, up town, and all over town, and my foot was as restless as was that of Noah's dove. I felt as if I had done a wrong. I didn't exactly feel how—but there was an indescribable sensation of guilt resting upon me all the forenoon. It seemed as if dinner time would never come; and as for going home one minute before I would as soon have cut my ears off. So I went fretting and moping about town till dinner hour came. Home I went, feeling very much as a criminal must, when the jury is out, having in their hands his destiny—life or death. I could not make up my mind exactly how she would meet me, but some kind of a storm I expected. Will you believe it?—she never greeted me with a sweeter smile—never had a better dinner for me than on that day; but there stood the churn, just where I left it! Not a word was said, I felt confoundedly cut, and every mouthful of that dinner seemed as if it would choke me. She didn't pay any regard to it, however, but went on just as if nothing had happened. Before dinner was over, I had again resolved, and, shoving back my chair, I marched to the churn and went at it in the old way. Splash, dip, rattle, I kept it up. As if in spite, the butter never was so long coming?
I supposed the cream standing so long, had got warm, and so I redoubled my efforts. Obstinate matter—the afternoon wore away while I was churning. I paused at last from real exhaustion, when she spoke for the first time—"Come Tom,
my dear, you have rattled that butter-milk quite long enough if it is only for fun you are doing it! I knew how it was in a flash. She had brought the butter in the forenoon, and left the churn standing with the butter-milk in for me to exercise with. I never set up for myself in household matters after that!"

QUINCY PATRIOT.

And when the cold unfeeling world casts us off, and we are left desolate, she is ever ready to receive us to her bosom and heal our wounds. Many is the man that has been saved from hopeless misery by the loving kindness of woman. Again! it is that which always bears the cry of sorrow and anguish, and with ready hands relieves the needy sufferer. Surely, were it not for her, this earth would be a Hell, instead of the beautiful and pleasant place we find it. Let not then heedless man think slightly of them. But instead of returning their love with unkindness, (as is often the case) do all in his power to elevate and increase their happiness, for surely

If such are woman's powers, woman's sphere, And such her ways, what more can man revere. Yes! let us look up to her, for an example of purity and truth; enable her to feel that she is respected and esteemed—not placed here to slave out a poor existence, and then die unwept for; but to fulfill a higher and nobler end—as our helpmate and bosom companion—God's chosen ones to save men from sin and fit them for Heaven, our final resting place.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DEAR SIR—To remedy the loss of the Patriot to us who do not countenance going to the Post Office on Sunday, some measures should be taken. Why not establish a depot at the Railroad Office? It would save travel and our consciences and add to the 'circulation,' an item in an editor's account. Think of it.

South Cove now has become, as indeed it always was geographically, the centre of the city. We have now some of the most costly dwellings recently erected and some of the most 'genteel streets' to be found in the city, for you know with us, the elite are known by the name of the street they live in. Then the out of town ladies who come daily to promenade Washington Street, find their Depot on the Cove, and hence we have built up and are considered the most 'regular' part of Boston. We shall soon have the new Depot for Old Colony road, which will be another ornament, and, by the way, I am glad to see the re-election of the old board of Directors on that road as well as of the President who I have long known as one of the most zealous and persevering men that we have here. The stockholders may consider themselves fortunate in longer securing his services.

The past week has been a busy one and to butchers, bakers, hatters and tailors, the new fashion of imitating the 'Yorkers' was beneficial, for many of their customers were found at home on that day which heretofore could never be found at all, and got a dun as well as a call. I will give credit, as in general they paid up pretty well. Our streets are in an awful condition; almost impassable for ice and snow. No one knows who has the care of them although the City Marshal prosecutes for ice or snow, in however small quantity, that is found on a sidewalk. Laws in this city require much talent to conform to.

Our new City Government organized on Monday, and the Mayor, in his message, said—that in twenty months we should have 'the water'; that the money to pay the water debt with could not be obtained in Europe—Squire Rollins couldn't talk it into them—they don't like American Stocks; that the City lands will pay the water debt if properly managed; that our population has doubled within the past twenty years; that the city should establish a Gas manufactory to light the streets instead of relying on the Gas Company; that our police should be composed of men of high character and its head have his salary increased, [isn't it modest?—he is the head]; that in widening streets the abutters should help pay the expense; that common sewers should be converted into manure manufactory to supply the neighboring towns with an article out of which he says money is to be made; that the Flats should be filled up for the new Jail; that our Harbor should be protected by measures being taken to preserve the Islands from being washed away; that an assistant Superintendent should be appointed to walk over sixty two miles of pavement, which is altogether too much for any one man to perform; that no complaints of any importance had been made of the Fire Department; that the Public Garden would be open every day and night except when the plebeian people wished to go there on a holiday, then they would be taxed; that the beautiful Common should be looked after; that if the blessings of Providence rested upon us we should in all human probability stand as long as the brick School Houses will stand that the city are building in frosty weather for the sake of giving the job to a man who is busy at other seasons—so you see, all in all, we are 'doing well'.

I was pleased to see your correspondent D., in the last Patriot, give some idea of the sympathy which exists between Marcus Morton and the party here. The old man has lost caste with them and is weak enough to believe that by taking a medium course between his old friends and the whigs, that he will conciliate the latter. It is the third time that finally convinces, and it is so in this case. He has sought favor twice before without success and yet don't give it up. He even refused to give a few paltry dollars out of the six or eight thousand dollars salary which he receives towards the Volunteers, because he had heard that Col. Charles G. Green would deliver it with a speech. Green, you know, was formerly his bosom friend and aid. The course lately pursued by Mr. Morton and for what? He has made a mistake in that movement.

The seventh Company is about ready to be mustered into services for the war, and at this rate Boston will yet give a good account of herself. Col. William P. Winchester has not in his absence from home forgotten his military friends. The volunteers have received from him one hundred dollars. He is now in Cincinnati, Ohio. If he was here he doubtless would be elected Colonel, and an able and efficient one he would make.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 9. 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

QUINCY GUNNERS. We have heard of people being born with silver spoons in their mouths, and if that saying be true, we may safely assert that some of our Quincy Boys are born with a gun in their hands.

"For fifty miles the country round about," they are known as active and successful sportsmen, and every species of wild fowl that frequent our shores and bays are daily brought home as evidence of their skill. It is not often, however, that they make excursions without the limits of this Commonwealth, but a week or two since, Messrs. George Curtis and Thomas Hayden, 2d, started for New Hampshire, (where they were joined by Messrs. Peter W. Jones and Ambrose Pierce), armed and equipped for the pursuit of larger game than our shores afford. In Dalton—about eighteen miles beyond the Notch of the White Mountains—they pitched their tent and by their united skill they captured twelve noble deer in the space of five days, five of which were taken on Monday last. With such signal success, they are doubtless much elated, and, if such are to be the results of these expeditions, the Granite State will have many delegations from our Granite town.

GUIDE TO PLYMOUTH, AND RECOLLECTIONS OF THE PILGRIMS, by William S. Russell.

Such is the title of an interesting and instructive work, just published. Of the many volumes relating to the character and achievements of our Pilgrim Fathers, we know of none that presents their history in so clear and satisfactory a light as this publication.

Mr. Russell, the author, was peculiarly qualified for the task which he has so faithfully performed. Inheriting the virtues as well as the blood of the Pilgrims, he has devoted the leisure of many years to researches on the subject. Through his wife too, who is a lineal descendant of Gov. Winslow, and by the aid of her friends, he has had access to the best sources of information, all of which he has well improved in the compilation of this work.

The book is admirably designed for those who, on visiting Plymouth, wish to trace out the memorable localities in and about that ancient town. As a history of the origin of our republic, it deserves a place in every family. The allusions which the work contains to incidents which occurred in our own vicinity, to men who were conspicuous in our early history, to Mount Wollaston and Weston's Plantation at Weymouth, are just and appropriate. Every one especially who derives his origin from the Old Colony should have the work in his possession. Copies of it may be seen at the Quincy Bookstore.

GENERAL COURT. The Legislature of this Commonwealth assembled on Wednesday last. Hon. William B. Calhoun was elected President of the Senate; and Hon. Ebenezer Bradley of Newburyport, on the second ballot, was chosen Speaker of the House. Benjamin Stevens has been on the part of the House unanimously elected Sergeant at Arms. Rev. George Richards has been chosen Chaplain of the Senate.

In the House, Hon. Caleb Cushing moved that the State appropriate twenty thousand dollars in aid of the volunteer regiment raised for Mexico, which motion was laid on the table by a vote of 171 yeas to 61 nays.

OLD COLONY RAIL ROAD. The annual meeting of the corporation was held in Boston on Wednesday last week, at which the old Board of Directors, consisting of Nathan Carruth, Uriel Crocker, Josiah Quincy, Jr., John Sever, Jacob H. Loud, Isaac L. Hedge, and William Thomas, was re-elected. At a subsequent meeting of the Board, Nathan Carruth, was re-elected President; Jacob H. Loud, Clerk; George N. Fletcher was chosen Treasurer.

PRIZES CONDEMNED. The American brig Plymouth and the Mexican schooner Telegraph, prizes taken by the Gulf squadron, have been condemned at New Orleans.

SAVINGS INSTITUTIONS. The amount of money deposited in the various Savings Banks of this Commonwealth, amount to nearly eleven millions of dollars, the deposits belonging to about sixty three thousand individuals. There are thirty eight Savings Institutions in the State, of which the average dividend for this year has been four and a half per cent, amounting in the aggregate to $345,443. The average of the dividends for the last five years, has been five and a quarter per cent. per annum, and the annual expenses less than thirty thousand dollars.

JOSEPH W. ROBERTSON, BRYANT B. NEWCOMB.

New Portland, Nov. 4, 1842.

Mr. Pratt: Sir—I wish you to send me three bottles of JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT; and in this connection, I would say, that I deem it an invaluable medicine, and an article that no family should be without for a single day. I have used it for two years in my family, and have always found it a quick and efficient remedy for tightness of the lungs produced by long protracted colds, which produce the short hacking cough, the precursor of Consumption, in which it so frequently terminates in this climate. If properly and seasonably administered, it will effectually break up the most violent colds, and thereby prevent the many violent fevers, so frequently consequent upon them. I would most cheerfully recommend this medicine to the public in all cases of that nature, as invaluable. JOHN H. WEBSTER.

DR. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY.
It was known many years ago that the wild cherry tree of this climate possessed valuable medicinal properties. Indeed this fact was known to the aborigines, and the decoction of the leaves or bark of this tree has ever been regarded by their physicians as one of the most effectual remedies in many diseases. This fact, several years since, arrested the attention of Dr. Wistar, a highly respectable practitioner of Virginia. He investigated with care the healing properties of the wild cherry—tested its effects when administered alone, and when in combination with other remedial agents. He found that its natural virtues might be greatly improved, and by combining it with ingredients, whose properties were well proved and generally recognized, a medicine was produced which constitutes a remedy of great value in pulmonary affections, and diseases of the chest and throat—diseases which are proverbially prevalent in our cities and large towns, and often prove fatal swelling the bills of mortality to a much greater extent than is the case with most others. We had almost said, that all classes of diseases—Boston Mercantile Journal.

DANIEL BAXTER,
JOSEPH W. ROBERTSON,
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB.

New Portland, Nov. 4, 1842.

Mr. Pratt: Sir—I wish you to send me three bottles of JAYNES' EXPECTORANT; and in this connection, I would say, that I deem it an invaluable medicine, and an article that no family should be without for a single day. I have used it for two years in my family, and have always found it a quick and efficient remedy for tightness of the lungs produced by long protracted colds, which produce the short hacking cough, the precursor of Consumption, in which it so frequently terminates in this climate. If properly and seasonably administered, it will effectually break up the most violent colds, and thereby prevent the many violent fevers, so frequently consequent upon them. I would most cheerfully recommend this medicine to the public in all cases of that nature, as invaluable. JOHN H. WEBSTER.

DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

It was known many years ago that the wild cherry tree of this climate possessed valuable medicinal properties. Indeed this fact was known to the aborigines, and the decoction of the leaves or bark of this tree has ever been regarded by their physicians as one of the most effective remedies in many diseases. This fact, several years since, attracted the attention of Dr. Wistar, a highly respectable practitioner of Virginia. He investigated with care the healing properties of the wild cherry—tested its effects when administered alone, and when in combination with other remedial agents. He found that its natural virtues might be greatly improved, and by combining it with ingredients, whose properties were well proved and generally recognized, a medicine was produced which constitutes a remedy of great value in pulmonary affections, and diseases of the chest and throat—diseases which are proverbially prevalent in our country, and in large towns, and often prove fatal swelling the bills of mortality to a much greater extent than is the case with most others. We had almost said, all other classes of diseases—Boston Mercantile Journal.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present the most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we should be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading to a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c., and we encourage every one to patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign.

POETRY.

THE UNKNOWN WAY.

A burning sky is o'er me,
The sands beneath me glow,
An onward, onward, wearily,
In the sultry morn I go.

From the dusty path there opens,
Eastward, an unknown way;
Above its windings, pleasantly,
The woodland branches play.

A silvery brook comes stealing
From the shadow of its trees,
Where slender herbs of the forest stoop
Before the entering breeze.

Along these pleasant windings
I would my journey lay,
Where the shade is cool and the dew of night
Is not yet dried away.

Path of the flowery woodland!
Oh whither dost thou lead,
Wandering by grassy orchard grounds
Or by the open mead?

Goest thou by nestling cottage?
Goest thou by stately hall,
Where the broad elm drops a leafy dome,
And woodbine flaunts on the wall?

By steep where children gather
Flowers of the yet fresh year,
By lonely walks where lovers stray
Till the tender stars appear?

Or haply dost thou linger
On barren plains and bare,
Or clamber the bold mountain side,
Into the thinner air?

Where they who journey upward
Walk in a weary track,
And oft upon the shady vale
With longing eyes look back?

I hear a solemn murmur,
And listening to the sound,
I know the voice of the mighty sea,
Beating his pebbly bound.

Dost thou, oh path of the woodland!
End where these waters roar,
Like human life, on a trackless beach,
With a boundless sea before?

TAKE IT EASY.

Take it easy! Life at longest,
But a lengthened shadow is;
And the brave, as well as strongest,
Dare not call to-morrow his.

Take it easy!—for to-day
All your plans of wisdom lay.
Take it easy! Done with fretting;
Meet your neighbor with a smile;
From the rising sun to setting,
Live the present all the while.

Take it easy! Every now Make in reference to 'now.'
Take it easy! What is hidden,
Or is wrong, or seemeth so,—
Leave it as a thing forbidden,
Out of which a curse may grow!

Take it easy! Never pry
Into what will cause a sigh.
Take it easy! Daily turning
To the monitor within;
On its altar, always burning,
Keep an incense free from sin!

Take it easy! Never hear
While you keep a conscience clear!
Take it easy! Ever leaning
To the side of truth and right;
Happiness from virtue glowing—
Peace of mind from wisdom bright!

Take it easy! For, at best,
Life is but a sorry jest.

ANECDOTES.

A tailor, while travelling on the lakes, was asked by a Yankee where he lived, and what his business was, &c., to which he replied that he lived in Toledo, and that his profession was sitting on the smooth side of poverty, and jerking out the cords of affliction. An exchange replies: "We've been there and found it pretty tough work, sometimes, to 'jerk' the hard knots through."

Where are your quarters, Flanagan? said a captain to one of his volunteers—a son of the sod. "Oh, Captain, jewel," said he, "niver mention it; I've been inrouled now for a week; I spint the bounty this night, and a devil a quarter did I see since—not so much as a tin cent piece."

"O mother," said a very little child, "Mr. S. does love me Lucy—he sits by her—he whispers to her—and he hugs her." "Why Edward, your aunt does not suffer that, does she?" "Suffer it, yes moths, she loves it."

"Do you know Mr. B.?" "I do." "What sort of a man is he?" "In the morning he is a wise key barrel, and at night he is a barrel of whiskey!" "Ah, indeed?"

"Well, my lad," said a postmaster to a boy who had rapped at the delivery, "what will you marry me?" "Here's a letter, and she wants to have it go along as fast as it can, 'cause there's a feller wants to have her here, and she's courted by another feller what ain't here, and she wants to know whether he's goin' to have her or not."

A lady who was suffering under a slight indisposition told her husband that it was with the utmost difficulty she could breathe, and the effort distressed her exceedingly. "I wouldn't try, my dear," soothingly responded the kind husband.

The following plan of courtship was adopted by a couple recently. "Miss Adeline, will you marry me?" "Well, Thomas, I s'pose I must." "I'll be much obliged to you if you will." Then he kissed her, and she kissed him, and the business was settled right off.

MISCELLANY.

TRIALS OF A YOUNG LOVER.

It was a cold, blustering night, early in the year 18—, that a man was seen standing in one of the principal streets of the city of B——; the bells
had tolled the hour of nine, and the men of business were returning to their comfortable homes and cheerful fires, with their countenances lighted up with smiles, and anticipating a few hours of sweet repose—who does not rejoice when returning night assures them of a few hours liberation from their daily labors?

The individual before mentioned stood as if heedless of storm that raged around him. A close observer might have noticed that sorrow had left its stamp upon his manly brow. But see! a tear has started from his dark blue eye and is coursing its way slowly down his cheek. Why that look of sad despair? Why stands he there shivering with the cold, when so many stately mansions might afford him a shelter from the chilling blast? Alas!
the unfeeling occupants of those magnificent dwellings have refused to shelter the forlorn wanderer;
they have driven him from their doors without one kind word or look to cheer him in a stranger land.
O, ye cold-hearted men of wealth, why do ye not consider the wretchedness of your fellow beings, and try to alleviate their sufferings? Knowest thou not that at some future day thou wilt be rewarded according to thy deeds? O, man of affluence, stop and think ere thou turn'st a deaf ear
to the entreaties of the suffering poor, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

But see! the increasing storm has aroused him from his sad reverie, and he is hastily retiring into a more obscure part of the city; he stops before a small but comfortable dwelling. "Shall I enter?
No! I cannot bear the chilling words and freezing looks of man; I will brave the storm and perish beneath its wrath before—"

At this moment a piercing blast of wind caused his resolution to waver, and he unconsciously ascends the steps; he pauses—he knocks. With what breathless anxiety he awaits the appearance of a light or some benevolent person to invite him in. The door is opened, and a young girl whose countenance is the very picture of health, timidly inquires his errand.

"Miss," said he, "your looks assure me that I have nothing to fear. I beg of thee a night's lodging, so that I may rest my weary limbs secure from this pitiless storm."

She replied that Mr. Marlow and his wife had gone to spend the evening with a friend, and that she expected they would shortly return. She, therefore, invited him to come in and warm himself, while she prepared him some supper, which invitation he gladly accepted. After having placed a chair before the fire for him, she left the room,
but soon returned with a pair of dry shoes and stockings and requested him to put them on. We will leave him to enjoy a hearty supper while we glance back at his early life.

Frank Seymour—for such was his name—was an only son of wealthy parents, who were natives of S——, Frank was the idol of his mother's heart and the pride of his indulgent father. His father's purse was ever at his command,—his every wish was gratified. Perhaps some of my readers will say that he must have been a spoiled child, but such was not the case; he was naturally of a mild, pleasant disposition, too noble to abuse such privileges, and, instead of squandering his money in reckless dissipation, he gave it to the poor and needy, and his ear was ever open to the voice of want and suffering. Fathers pointed to him as an example for their sons; mothers had often hinted to their daughters that such a son-in-law would be very acceptable, and many an anxious mother had endeavored to obtain him as such; but notwithstanding all their attacks he remained "fancy free."

It was at the close of a lovely day in the pleasant month of June; the day had been unusually warm until near nightfall, when a gentle breeze arose to fan and refresh weary man. Frank being invited by the reviving air, sallied forth to enjoy an evening
ramble, and sauntered along, not knowing whither
he went, till he had reached a beautiful grove.
He seated himself beneath the boughs of a large spreading oak, and was soon lost in contemplation.
The silvery moon sailed high as if proud of her lofty abode, and so brightly did she shine that scarcely a star was visible. While sitting there he was startled by a musical voice exclaiming,

"How beautiful! how beautiful! The works of nature surpass the works of art!"

He arose to behold the fair speaker, and what was his surprise on seeing a lovely girl seated at a short distance from the place he occupied. She was apparently about seventeen, with a countenance too lovely for pen to describe. The rustling of leaves which was occasioned by Frank's rising, had startled her, and she was hastily retiring when he approached and bade her not be alarmed. He learned, by conversation, that she had sauntered forth to enjoy the cool and balmy air. After having admired the beauties of nature awhile he offered to escort her home, but she respectfully declined;
he then begged permission to call on the following day at her father's residence, which was a short distance from the grove; after some hesitation she granted his request.

The next afternoon found him seated in the snug little parlor of Mr.——. He was engaged in pleasant conversation with Caroline, the young lady
he had met the evening before, and her mother.

After having spent an hour agreeably, he arose to take his departure. Mrs. M. and Caroline invited him to call again, and he of course promised so to do.

It is enough to say that Frank Seymour's heart
was no longer at his own disposal.

Mr. M—— was not what the world would call a poor man, neither was he rich; but he had enough of this world's goods to make him and his family comfortable, and that was all he required.
Caroline was his only child; and he had endeavored to give her a good education, and he was gratified
at her improvement in mind as well as in person.

Having thus far given a description of our heroine, we will resume our narrative.

It was about one year from the time that Frank had met Caroline in the grove, that he was again seated in Mr. M——'s parlor. Caroline had just given her consent to become his, and the bridal day was named. What happiness he anticipated. But alas! he knew not how soon that happiness was to be dashed from his lips. About this time the cholera began to rage in S——, and fearful were the ravages made by this contagious disease. Hundreds were daily swept from the world of mortality,
and many who were one short hour before in good health, were hushed in the long, deep repose of the dead, never more to be awakened till the trumpet's sound shall arouse them from their graves. The fell destroyer had entered, and taken from Frank a kind father and an affectionate mother; thus he was left an orphan with an independent fortune.
What is wealth when compared to near and dear friends? It is nothing! Would it were at the bottom of the sea, if purchased by the death of earthly friends. Was there no kind friend to comfort him in this hour of bitter sorrow? Yes! there was one who tried by consoling words to soothe his wounded heart. It was Caroline. She sympathized with him; and deeply did she mourn the loss of his parents; but alas!—she was not long permitted to share his joys and sorrows. Ere the dawn of another day, she too lay sleeping beneath the cold, cold sod, and the last word she uttered was the name of him she so fondly loved.

This last affliction was more than he could bear;
he immediately embarked, unconscious of what he did, for America. During his voyage he was shipwrecked and taken on board of another vessel which was bound on a different route; and after sailing over the mighty deep five long months, he at length arrived safely in the city of B——.

It was on the evening of the same day of his arrival that we find him standing unsheltered from the storm. About ten o'clock Mr. Marlow and his wife returned, who willingly granted our hero a night's repose beneath their humble roof.

Early the next morning our hero arose with a lighter heart, and sought an interview with Mr.
Marlow, who offered to give him employment, and the offer was cheerfully accepted. About a fortnight afterwards he wrote a letter to an old and faithful servant, that belonged to his father when living, requesting him to settle his affairs in S——, but charged him not to sell the home of his childhood.

Although Mr. Marlow thought him to be a poor man, it was quite the reverse; he was the richest man in S——. He had often been noticed to pass more than common attention upon the young girl who gave him admittance on that long to be remembered night. Why was it? Dear reader, it was because she strikingly resembled his departed Caroline. Yes, she was the very image of that lovely girl, and she too had the name of Caroline.

To be brief, I will merely state that he sought
the hand of Caroline Shepard and was rejected.
Although of a benevolent disposition, Caroline was a haughty, ambitious girl, and looked upon Frank as a poor man. But had she known the extent of his wealth, she would have gladly accepted his offer, for he had never told of his wealth until rejected by Caroline. He then told the proud aspiring girl that had she consented to be his, she could have sweetly reclined upon the lap of luxury. A thunder bolt could not have startled her more than this piece of intelligence, but it was too late to repent. He gave her a gold ring, the gift of his dying mother, and bade her farewell forever.

The next week he was on his way to his own native isle, and when he arrived at his paternal home, fond recollections of the past crowded upon his memory, and he fain would have lingered around the scenes of his early life forever. But soon the sweet illusion vanished and he awoke to the sad reality. He remembered the death-bed scene of his beloved father and affectionate mother,
and a tear fell in remembrance of the departed.
He directed his steps towards the grave-yard where lay the mortal remains of Caroline; and as he entered, a solemn stillness seemed to reign around;
he would not disturb the silence by a breath; and as he approached that lowly mound his bosom
heaved with strong emotion, for there his fondest hopes were buried.

We will now leave our hero awhile and follow Caroline Shepard as she treads the thorny path before her. She married a Mr. Smith, who died five years after their marriage, leaving her entirely distressed, with two children to support.

She had just recovered from a severe fit of sickness and was meditating upon the past, the present and the future. She had that day spent her last cent for necessities, and poverty stared her in the face. That night she prayed—it was the first time that this haughty woman had ever prayed—bitter tears rolled down her care-worn cheek, as she arose.

She was reflecting upon her past life, when a loud knock startled her from her reverie; she opened the door and a man inquired if Mrs. Smith lived there.

"Yes sir; that is my name," she replied.

He gazed upon her as if doubting what she said,
for sickness and sorrow had reduced her to a mere shadow of her former self. He cast a look of sadness at her, but she did not recognize him; he gave her a small bundle and retired. She opened it and found it to contain two fifty dollar notes and a letter directed to herself; she broke the seal and read
the following words:

"Five years ago this night you protected me from a fearful storm; you spoke cheering words to me and I have never forgotten it, and now I have come to your relief. You will find enclosed in this letter two fifty dollar notes; take them and feed your starving children. You may expect this sum on the same evening of every year, which you may dispose of as you think best. FRANK SEYMOUR."

Her feelings can better be imagined than described; she never more saw Frank; he shortly afterwards returned to S——, and married a lady of his early acquaintance, but he never forgot his first or his second love. He dwells in his father's house, and there we will leave him to end his days
in contentment and happiness.

We will follow Caroline longer, and then bid her farewell. A few weeks after she received the money from Frank, her youngest child, a bright, promising boy, was scalded to death by falling into a tub of boiling water. O, the agony of that moment! the affliction was greater than the mother
could bear; she swooned, and it was long ere returning consciousness reminded her of the awful death of her lovely boy. Disease has now fastened itself upon her delicate frame, and she totters upon
the verge of the grave.

Thirteen long years have rolled past, and Caroline still lives. She has again married and now resides in the flourishing village of Caloville. She looks forward with a longing desire to the time
when death shall close her earthly pilgrimage.

AMUSING INCIDENT. An English paper relates, that, at a soiree dansante given by an amiable and accomplished lady, a young officer of engineers attached a small portion of the gun cotton to the back part of the dress of a lady remarkable for enbonpoint in that fashionable article denominated a bustle. The lady had just seated herself, after having danced round twenty couple con spirito, to the tune of Sir Roger de Coverly, when a most alarming explosion took place, arising, it is supposed, from the ignition of the inflammable material by the extra heat communicated in the dance,
or from the force with which the lady deposited her person on the bench. Certain it is, however, that the bustle was torn with violence from its moorings, and carried with tremendous force through the folding doors of the apartment communicating with the upper room, which had just been thrown open, prostrating, in its awful passage the colonel of a regiment, and an elderly countess whom he was handing in, and depositing itself finally in a tureen of white soup at the head of the table.
Serious apprehensions were entertained for the safety of the lady upon whom this mischievous practical joke had been played, but upon her being removed to an adjoining apartment and examined by a medical gentleman, it was ascertained that she was only slightly singed in person, although her dress considerably burned. Her escape, from more serious injury is, indeed, wonderful. It is said that the young engineer has been recommended to retire; and to exercise his talents and ingenuity in the construction of bomb-proof bustles.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

We have not unfrequently called attention to this article in the columns of our paper, and we have done so with the full confidence that it was a good one, and deserving the patronage of the public.
We have had a chance to witness its effects upon some of our friends, which in addition to the high eulogiums passed upon it by our brethren of the press, not in paid puff, but in honest candid statements, from having derived a benefit themselves,
makes us desirous of advising all who have occasion to resort to a remedy for pulmonary affections to avail themselves of it. We have too much confidence in Mr. Fowle, the proprietor, to believe that he would thrust this, or any other medicine upon the community, unless he had full faith in its efficacy—in confirmation of which he offers a mass of testimony from the most unquestionable sources.
Neither would we be understood as saying that this will always cure consumption after it is seated although it seldom fails to relieve the worst cases
—but at this season of the year almost every body is liable to a cold, which if neglected, will lead to fatal results—by taking this medicine, we doubt not, many lives may be saved. We are making a long story when we only intended to extract an article from the New Era, published at Portsmouth, (Va.) and edited by A. F. Cunningham, Esq. He speaks of himself and here is the extract:—

New England Washingtonian.

"We have been, for some days, suffering under severe inflammation of the lungs, produced by cold,
and irritated by speaking in public, so that throughout Saturday night, Sunday, Monday, till Tuesday,
the symptoms of the disease seemed to increase,
and the suffering was intense, without the least appetite for food. The cough was dry and hard, causing the most acute pains in the head and back.
We had fairly given up all hope of relief, when we thought of the Balsam, and we sent round to our friend, Heinrich, for a bottle. We took the first dose according to directions, and almost instantly felt a glow of healthy warmth through the system—this was at two o'clock—at five, we took another dose—at nine, another, and we soon after detected a perceptible relief in the frequency of the spasms and violent pains that had before attended them. At three in the morning we took another dose, and the phlegm though tough, yellow andropy, is ejected from the lungs with comparative ease. We feel grateful for the relief afforded, and recommend a trial of it by all who are suffering as we suffered. We have deemed it due to the medicine, and to humanity, to give this unsought testimonial to the virtue of the Balsam, in our case."

INFATUATION OF GAMING.

A Mr. Potter in the reign of Queen Anne possessed one of the best estates in the county of Northumberland; the fee of which, in less than twelve months, he lost at hazard.

The last night of his career, when he had just perfected the wicked work, and was stepping down stairs to throw himself into his carriage, which waited at the door of a well known house, he suddenly went back into the room where his friends were assembled, and insisted that the person he had been playing with, should give him one chance of recovery, or fight with him; his rational proposition was this: that his carriage, the trinkets and loose money in his pocket, his town house, plate and furniture, should be valued in a lump, at a certain sum, and he thrown for at a single cast; no persuasion could prevail on him to depart from his purpose; he threw and lost. He conducted the winner to the door, told his coachman that was his master, and heroically marched forth, without house, home, or any creditable source of support.
He retired to an obscure lodging in a cheap part of the town, subsisting partly on charity, sometimes acting as the substitute of a marker at a billiard table, and occasionally as helper at a livery stable.

In this miserable condition, with nakedness and famine staring him in the face, exposed to the taunts and insults of those whom he had once supported, he was recognized by an old friend,
who gave him ten guineas to purchase necessities.
He expended five in procuring decent apparel;
with the remaining five, he repaired to a common gaming house, and increased them to fifty; he then adjourned to White's, sat down with his former associates, and won twenty thousand pounds. Returning next night, he lost it all, and after subsisting
many years in abject and sordid penury, died a ragged beggar, at a penny lodging-house in St. Giles.

YOUTH AND THE STORM. As it was, there was a storm around them; but to the bold heart of undaunted youth the lightnings are but the fireworks of the sky, the thunder but the deep bass notes of nature's mighty music; and there is a joy—a wild, eager, enthusiastic joy—in facing the tempest and sporting amid the crash of elements. Though we may prefer the sunshine, yet we can find pleasures
in the storm; for youth—happy youth—is the true
bee which can extract sweets from all things.

FRAILTY. All men have their frailties. "As I grow older," said Goethe, "I become more lenient to the sins of frail humanity. The man who loudly denounces, I always suspect. He knows too much of crime to denounce a fellow creature unheard; a knowledge which can only be obtained by criminality itself. The hypocrite always strives to divert attention from his own wickedness, by denouncing unsparringly that of others. He thinks he shall seem "good in exact ratio as he makes others seem bad."

TEA DRINKING. While the late Mr. Gifford, was at Ashburton, he contracted an acquaintance with a family of that place, consisting of females somewhat advanced in age. On one occasion he ventured on the perilous exploit of drinking tea with these elderly ladies. After having swallowed his usual allowance of tea, he found in spite of his remonstrances to the contrary, that his hostess would by no means suffer him to give up, but persisted in making him drink a most incredible quantity. "At last," said Gifford, in telling the story, "being really overflooded with tea, I put down my fourteenth cup, and exclaimed with an air of resolution, 'I neither can nor will drink any more.' The hostess then seeing she had forced more down my throat, than I liked, began to apologize, and added, 'but dear Mr. Gifford, as you didn't put your spoon across your cup, I supposed your refusals were nothing but good manners.'"

ANECDOTE OF DR. BEN. FRANKLIN. Dr. Franklin was once in company with Dr. Priestly, with whom he was very intimate, and with a number of other scientific men, who made up a party; they were mostly members of the Royal Society, and known to each other. The conversation turned on the progress of arts, and on the discoveries favorable to human life, which remained to be made.
Franklin regretted much that no method had yet been found out to spin two threads of cotton, or wool, at the same moment. Each of the company lifted up his eyes in astonishment, at first at the thought itself, and secondly at the impossibility of executing it.
Franklin, however, insisted that the thing was practicable, and not only so, but would not long remain a mystery. He lived long enough not only to see his notion reduced to practice, but to see as many as forty threads spun by the same motion.
Had he lived till now, he would have seen a hundred spun at the same instant, by a single female with only the help of a child.

THE PRESENT YEAR. The observer of signs may look upon 1847 with a fearful face. The year begins with Friday and ends with Friday—that very unlucky day. The fourth of July comes on Sunday—very unlucky. For the first time in the "recollection of the oldest inhabitant," there will be no full moon this year in the month of February —unlucky month. Our national political day begins on Sunday, the 4th of March—unlucky day.
There will be an eclipse visible in the year—
lucky for star-gazers. But, as an offset for the whole, January is to be blessed with two full moons,
and March with a like number—this will be lucky,
and will perhaps throw light enough over the dark features of the year to overcome all evil prognostications.—Portsmouth Journal.

NUMBER OF SLAVES. "In Brazil, there are three million of slaves; United States two million seven hundred thousand; Spanish Colonies eight hundred thousand; French Colonies two hundred and fifty thousand; Dutch, Danish, and Swedish Colonies
one hundred thousand; South American Republics
four hundred thousand; Texas thirty thousand.
Total, seven million three hundred and thirty thousand."

THE REMAINS OF COLUMBUS. The Sardinian Government has, it is said, entered into a negotiation with Spain for the restitution of the ashes of Christopher Columbus. The mortal remains of this great man, after having first been deposited at Seville, were removed to St. Domingo, where they remained until 1795, when they were taken to the cathedral church of the Havana, where they now are. As the King of Sardinia has no Ambassador at Madrid, it is through the representative of the Two Sicilies that the application was made to the Spanish Government.

LOVE AND BATHING. Somebody once said—it makes no odds whom—for it is a pretty simile, and perhaps quite true—that he often remarked the young ladies take love as they take sea-bathing;
some timidly put in one foot, then with a shiver
and look of apprehension, put in a second, and then they do no more than make a trembling courtesy in the water, the element sometimes scarcely reaching the region of the heart, and then with a sneal they run to dry land as soon as possible, and shivering cry, "How cold it is!" Others, again, —shutting their seraphic eyes to the dangers of the deep—souse in, head over ears, and rising with a Nereid's glow upon their faces declare the sea
"delicious."

MENTAL CULTIVATION. The eminent Dr. George
Moore in urging the importance of mental cultivation to every one, says:—"Readers, as well as others, are bound to think, and though they feel their deficiency, still they ought to take courage
from the fact, that, if they possess any mental powers, they have always the means of getting more,
since it will grow if but rightly employed, and thus
at length, convert difficulties into delight, and exertion itself into enjoyment."

A WORD OF ADVICE. When you enter a neighbor's house, shop or store, first of all shut the door behind you; and also when leaving it, don't stand to parley at an open door with a northwester blowing into the house, but for decency's sake, for politeness's sake, for comfort's sake, pass out steadily and shut the door.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 16, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

We don't want money desperately bad, but our creditors do. And no doubt they owe you. And if you pay us, we'll pay them, and they'll pay you.

CONGRESS. In the Senate, a message from the President was received, urging a numerical augmentation and more efficient organization of the army—an increase of the officers in the regular corps, particularly in the higher grades, an authorization for the appointment of a general officer to take the command of all the forces during the war—suggesting the necessity of taking efficient measures to terminate the war before the warm season commences, and consequently the importance of immediate action—referred.

In the House, a similar message as above, was received from the President, and referred. Mr. King of New York, offered a resolution for appropriating thirty thousand dollars for a peace commission to Mexico, furnished with two million of dollars to aid the negotiation, but acting under the Wilnot proviso, that all territory acquired by the United States is to be forever exempted from slavery. Not being received by a two thirds vote it lies over a day. The bill for the ten regiments of regulars was debated. The Committee reported eight to one against the recommendation of the President for providing for appointment of substitutes for southern invalids and sinecures in the army, and for a Lieutenant General.

The bill to increase the regular army by ten regiments, after several amendments, the principal of which provides for the disbandment of the officers and men at the close of the war, was passed, 171 to 34. The House, in committee of the whole, then took up the bill to establish a territorial government in Oregon. The right to vote was restricted, at the first election, to American citizens.

OUR FORCE IN THE FIELD. The Washington Union publishes the report of the Adjutant General of the United States Army, Gen. R. Jones, from which it appears that the Regulars in the field, including officers and men, number 6013. Troops at sea and under orders to join the army, 1098. Recruits en route for the seat of war, 702. Aggregate of Regulars, 8473. Volunteers in the field, 15,745; at sea for California, 765. Aggregate of Volunteers, 16,514—amounting in all to an army of 24,984 men. Of this number there are under the orders of Major Gen. Taylor, 18,332; of whom 7,406 are regulars and 10,926 Volunteers. Under the orders of Brigadier Gen. Wool, charged with the conduct of a separate division, 2660, of whom 621 are Regulars and 2039 Volunteers. Under Brigadier Gen. Kearney, who charged with the conduct of a separate division in New Mexico, 2202, of whom 446 are Regulars and 2546 are Volunteers.

RAIL ROAD TRAVEL. We learn from the Plymouth Memorial that over the Old Colony Rail Road, from Nov. 10th, 1845, to Nov. 30th, 1846—being fifty-five weeks, there were transported, between Boston and Plymouth, both ways, 26,215 persons. Between Boston and Quincy, both ways, 48,286 persons.

The number brought into, and carried out of Plymouth, from the several stations, was 40,106. The whole number of passengers transported over the road and between the several stations was 211,563.

The whole amount received for the transportation of passengers in the same period is $108,847.64—which is an average of about forty eight cents for each passenger who travelled on the road.

DEATH PREFERRED TO IMPRISONMENT. A young lawyer at Mansfield, (Ohio), was recently convicted of the murder of his brother-in-law, and sentenced to be hung. This punishment was commuted by the Governor for imprisonment for life, on condition that the prisoner should assent thereto. This assent he refuses to give, preferring, as he says, death to a life of confinement.

VERMONT. The democratic candidate for Congress in the fourth district in Vermont, Mr. Peck, has been elected by a plurality of from three to five hundred votes over the whig candidate, Mr. Chandler.

NEW LIBERTY PAPER. The much talked of Liberty paper, at Washington, (D. C.), has made its appearance. It is called the National Era, and G. Bailey, Jr. is announced as editor.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY. At the annual meeting of the Quincy Total Abstinence Society, held last Monday evening, the following officers were unanimously chosen for the year ensuing:—President—Jonathan Baxter.

Vice President—John Hardwick.

Secretary—David B. Stetson.

Treasurer—Elisha Marsh.

Directors—George S. T. Whiting, William Pratt, Benjamin Bass, Thomas Hardwick, William Ellison, Cotton Pratt.

UNITED STATES FORTS. The forts on the seacoast are now garrisoned by four companies of artillery, consisting of two hundred and thirty two men; on the western by two companies of dragoons, six companies of infantry and seven companies of volunteers—total, two hundred and ninety two men; being less than one regiment to man all the fortifications of this country, extending from the twenty fifth to the forty-sixth degree of latitude and exceeding in population twenty millions.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANCHISE IN MASSACHUSETTS. It is a remarkable fact, that out of the three hundred and nine towns in this Commonwealth, but one hundred and sixty nine are represented in our present House of Representatives; consequently there are one hundred and forty towns which either voted not to send or were not able to elect representatives. The following will show the number of towns in each County which are not represented:—Essex County, twelve; Middlesex, twenty four; Worcester, twenty seven; Hampshire, twelve; Hampden, nine; Franklin, sixteen; Berkshire, fourteen; Norfolk, eight; Bristol, five; Plymouth, nine; Barnstable, two; Dukes, one; Nantucket, one. The one hundred and sixty nine towns and cities represented send two hundred and fifty three members, the total number in the present House of Representatives.

PUB. Doc. Our thanks are due to the Hon. Artemas Hale, a member of Congress from this State, for a copy of Hon. Charles Hudson's remarks on that portion of the President's Message relating to the Mexican war.

To the kind attention of the Secretary of State, we are indebted for copies of several interesting reports made to the Legislature, viz:—Panzer Abstract; Insurance Abstract; Returns of the Keepers of Jails and Overseers of the Houses of Correction.

THE MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT. Orders have been received from Washington, for the embarkation of the Massachusetts Regiment as soon as eight full companies are mustered in: and transports will be furnished, as soon as official notice is given to the Acting Quarter Master to that effect. It is of the greatest consequence that the companies should be at once filled up and got ready for embarkation.

VOLUNTEER COMPANIES. The ten companies of Massachusetts volunteers are now officered; and seven of them have been mustered into service; and the remaining three will shortly obtain the requisite number of men for that purpose. They stand in the following order:—Company A, Capt. Webster; Company B, Capt. Wright; Company C, Capt. Abbott; Company D, Capt. Felt; Company E, Capt. Crowninshield; Company F, Capt. Paul; Company G, Capt. Legendre; Company H, Capt. Barker; Company I, Capt. Walsh; and Company K, Capt. Whiting.

THE OFFICIAL RETURN. The following table exhibits the result of the vote for Governor and Lieutenant Governor of this State at the late election, as made known by a committee of the Legislature:

For Governor.
Whole number	101,916
Necessary for a choice	50,959
George N. Briggs (elected) had	54,813
Isaac Davis	33,139
Samuel E. Sewall	9,997
William Baylies	3,423
All others	484
For Lieutenant Governor.
Whole number	101,730
Necessary for a choice	50,866
John Reed (elected) had	54,640
George Hood	33,261
John M. Brewster	10,134
Charles W. Moore	3,425
All others	270

MEXICO. Intelligence of an interesting character has been received from Mexico. Gen. Santa Anna has left San Luis Potosi with a force exceeding fifteen thousand men, and is advancing towards Saltillo for the purpose of attacking Gen. Worth before reinforcements can arrive. It is not supposed that he will be able to accomplish his designs, as Gen. Worth has sent for aid and a force it is believed can be concentrated in season of twelve thousand men sufficient to meet the Mexicans.

There are rumors of other movements which need confirmation. A desperate battle has doubtless been fought. Maj. Gen. Scott has arrived in Mexico.

TRIAL FOR ARSON. Albert J. Tirrell has been on trial in Boston, during the present week, for arson, in attempting to burn the dwelling-house, when Mrs. Maria A. Bickford was murdered. The evidence does not differ materially from that which was introduced on his trial for murder. The plea of somnambulism will be again urged in his defence. The trial had not been brought to a close last evening.

THE VIENNESE DANCING CHILDREN. This wonderful troupe of dancing children, ranging from three to sixteen years of age and numbering in all forty-eight, are now nightly performing at the Howard Athenaeum, in Boston, to crowded houses. So universally have the evolutions of this little army been heralded and so minutely have their dances and gambolings been described, that hardly an individual is to be found whose curiosity is not excited to witness the beautiful and innocent performances of these wonderful children.

N. P. Willis thus describes their appearance before the Queen of England at the London Opera:

"At the close of the second act, the Viennese Dancers tripped upon the stage. They must have been drilled with wonderful patience to make such sudden and exact transitions. At one instance they pile up into a bower—the next they are revolving in a many spoked wheel—the next they are braiding themselves a complex wall. They seem to swallow each other and re-appear, multiply and diminish, swim and fly, with a one-mindedness, a grace, and an ease of countenance and motion that is wholly incomprehensible. And, withal, their little faces, as are round and rosy as Cupid's in a picture and they look so happy that it is contagious.

STUPENDOUS BRIDGE. It is proposed to construct a Wire Suspension Bridge across the Ohio river at Cincinnati. It will consist of two spans, meeting in the centre of the river upon a handsome stone tower two hundred feet high. Its entire length will be 1,576 feet, with the addition of 2,070 feet of approaches. The bridge floor will be sustained by a cable of wire, 11-28 inches on each side, and suspension rods. The elevation of the floor, at the tower, is to be one hundred and thirty-one feet above low-water mark and ninety feet at the abutments. The elevation at the tower will place it several feet above the highest steamboat chimneys at the highest stage of water. The cost is estimated at $374,460.

MERRIMAC. This embryo city has now two newspapers to enlighten its people. The present population is estimated at three thousand—with houses now commenced, and nearly finished, sufficient for two thousand more; and anticipates a population of six thousand on the first of April, and eight thousand at the close of the season. Such a growth to a town will be without a parallel.

THE INDEPENDENT TREASURY LAW. After the first day of January, 1847, the Independent Treasury law requires all postages at the different offices throughout the country to be paid in gold and silver—and that the Postmasters are compelled to demand and to receive nothing else than gold or silver for postage of letters, papers, etc.

RAILROADS IN THE UNITED STATES. The total length of railway now actually constructed and in operation in the United States, amounts to a little over five thousand miles, of which five hundred consists in short lines connected with coal companies and private establishments; leaving four thousand five hundred miles of swift steam conveyance. In the construction of railroads, and the electric telegraph, the United States are far in advance of Europe, in proportion to population.

WHALING. The whole trade of the various ports of the United States, has yielded, during the past year, 95,221 barrels sperm oil, 297,493 barrels whale oil, and 2,276,939 pounds whalebone, brought home in one hundred and fifty-nine ships and barques, and forty-one brigs and schooners.

PROBABLY TRUE. Somebody says, that a newspaper in a family is equal to three months time in a school each year. Go into the family where a newspaper is taken, and into those who "cannot afford it" and mark the difference of the children, and be convinced.

SUDDEN DEATHS. Hon. John Davis, L. L. D., eighty-six years of age, died in Boston on the 14th inst. He was for many years Judge of the United States District Court.

William Parsons, Esq., President of the Massachusetts Bank, in Boston, died on the 13th inst. Hon. Isaac W. Pennybacker, United States Senator from Virginia, died in Washington City, during the present week.

LEGISLATURE. The subject of appropriating money for the volunteers, has again been before the House and was referred to a Committee, of which Hon. Caleb Cushing was chairman, and a report favorable to the subject has been returned by a majority. Petition of Daniel Jagger has been presented for an act of incorporation to manufacture gun cotton.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS IN MASSACHUSETTS. We are indebted to the Secretary of State for a copy of his Fifth Annual Report to the Legislature, under the act requiring the Registry of Births, Marriages and Deaths.

The returns are not yet perfect, though they are reported to be "more full than those of either of the previous years." None have yet been made from Boston, "comprising one seventh of the population of the Commonwealth."

The number of births returned is as one to thirty nine of the inhabitants, (excluding Boston), according to the census of 1840; number of marriages one to one hundred and twenty-two; number of deaths one to sixty-nine.

Whole number of Births in the State 16,352, being an increase of 788 over the previous year. Of this number 5633 were males, 7491 were females—the remainder not stated. The greatest proportion was in Norfolk County, one in thirty-one; the next in Bristol, one in thirty-three.

In each month of the year, and in ten of the counties, there were more births of males than females.

There were 287 cases of twin births—one of triplets.

The annual convention of the Liberty Party in Massachusetts, will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 20th, 1847, at Faneuil Hall, Boston.

Dr. Lardner's marriage to Mrs. Heavyside is now said to be illegal as the first.

There are six hundred and twenty thousand young ladies at this moment receiving their education in French Convents.

The imports of Tea into the United States from China during the year 1846 was 18,502,692 lbs., and the import for 1845 was 20,762,558 lbs.

A naturalized American citizen is now mayor of Nottingham, (England.) The question came up, at his election, whether his naturalization rendered him ineligible; which being negatively decided, he was unanimously elected. The mayor of Birmingham is a brother of Harriet Martineau.

The Rev. Mr. Major, lately a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, has become the editor of The Catholic Herald, a Romanist paper, at Philadelphia.

The steamer Mohegan, which runs on Long Island Sound, recently struck on "Gangway Rock," sprung a leak, and was run ashore on Long Island. She was subsequently got off.

The "President's House," in Austin, Texas, was lately destroyed by fire.

Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Hamar, who died recently at Monterey, after a short illness, of inflammation of the bowels, was a member elect of the next Congress from Ohio. He enlisted as a volunteer, was chosen Major, and soon after received the appointment of Brigadier General from the President.

Babe, the pardoned pirate, was arrested in Liverpool, (Eng.) for knocking down the mate of a New York packet ship, who refused him as a hand.

Orders have been given to the Receiving Officers at the Custom House, in Boston, to receive nothing but Specie or Treasury Notes, in payment for moneys due the government.

The case of Mrs. Conner, who claimed to be the wife of the late Gen. Van Ness of Washington, (D. C.) has been decided against her—the jury not agreeing.

The German farmer in Pennsylvania have a notion that every nineteenth winter is so mild that farmers can plough nearly all the season. The last, they say, was that of 1827-8, consequently this must be one.

The peach trees are in full bloom at Wilmington (N. C.) They will get sadly nipped before winter is over.

It is now confidently asserted that Queen Victoria has consented to have Canada united to the American States by a suspension bridge over the Niagara.

The Baltimore Patriot says, that an individual has advertised for one thousand black cats, for which he agrees to pay two cents apiece, on delivery.

Another Anti-rent outrage has occurred in Columbia County, (N. Y.) The sheriff while attempting to serve a civil process was resisted by seventy men, and driven off the ground.

House flies, butterflies and spring birds are to be seen in the gardens at New York.

The damage occasioned by the recent freshets, in the Scioto, Miami and Mad Rivers, (Ohio,) is set down at about two millions of dollars; over one million of bushels of corn have been swept from the Scioto Valley alone. The whole country was inundated.

By the Constitution of Wisconsin, there can be no imprisonment for debt, and a citizen's opinions upon religion cannot render him ineligible for any office, or weaken his testimony in Court.

Six hundred and twenty tons of bomb-shells are at Albany, (N. Y.) destined for the Gulf of Mexico, independent of large quantities at other places. This looks like hot work.

Hon. Daniel Webster, it is said, will make a tour through the Southern States, immediately after the adjournment of Congress.

Resolutions of thanks to General Taylor, and the officers and men in the United States army in Mexico, volunteers as well as regulars, have been adopted in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives by a unanimous vote.

The President of the Eastern Railroad, has politely offered to furnish printers who intend to join their brethren in Newburyport, in the celebration of Franklin's birth day, with a free pass over the road.

The Legislature of New York has appropriated ten thousand dollars for the volunteer regiment, six thousand to be laid out in tents, clothing, etc., and the rest distributed to officers and men.

Presley Spruance, (a whig,) has been elected United States Senator from Delaware, in place of the Hon. Thomas Clayton.

A man in London, determined to spend all he made during the first year in advertising. He soon found that it was impossible, for the simple reason that the more he advertised the more he made; and, after a strenuous effort to get rid of his money in advertising, he had to give it up.

Within a short period, kiln-dried Indian meal has become a great article of export. Over twenty thousand barrels have been contracted for within ten days past in New York, for export to England.

Volunteers disabled in the Mexican war will be entitled to the same pension allowed in the regular army. The maximum for any officer is thirty dollars a month, and for a private eight dollars per month.

Virgil was so fond of salt, that he seldom went without a box full in his pocket, which he made use of from time to time, as men of the present day use tobacco.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.
 Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.
 To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

THE BLACK LACE VEIL.

"Mother," said Ellen Rutherford, a little girl of ten years old: "why did Mrs. Homer cry so when Anna Spencer was buried? She was only a servant."

"True, my child, Anna was a servant; but she was a good one, Ellen. Her duties were all conscientiously performed, and the humblest individuals may render themselves respectable in any station in which God sees proper to place them, if they choose to do so. But Mrs. Homer had other reasons, my love, for the grief you noticed. She thinks herself accessory to shortening the poor girl's life; and if you will give me your attention a few minutes, I will tell you the circumstances which have caused Mrs. Homer such lasting regret."

"It was a cold, bleak morning in the month of January, that a poor woman, was seen leading a girl of fourteen through the principal streets of this city, who stopped before the mansion of Mrs. Homer. She came to place the little girl at service, and whilst they stood waiting in the hall until Mrs. Homer could be notified of their arrival, the mother spent the interval of the waiter's absence in impressing upon the mind of her child the responsibilities of her new station.

"You will mind what I have said to you, Anna dear," she said for the twentieth time, while with the back of her hand she dashed away the tears that would come. "You will be a good girl, I am sure, and will please the lady who has been so kind to us."

The little dialogue was overheard by Mrs. Homer, who was in a small room adjoining, and when she came forward, she assured the mother her child should be kindly treated and well attended to. Anna had but partially recovered from an attack of measles, but the favorable change in her situation soon restored her to health again. For three years she continued to give entire satisfaction to her employer, while Mrs. Homer began to value her services so highly she treated her rather as an equal than in the light of a dependent.

One day Mrs. Homer purchased a very elegant black veil. Anna was sewing when she brought it home, and opening the parcel, she spread it before her. Mrs. Homer laid it over the white counterpane, to exhibit the richness of the work, and placing it in various ways of viewing it advantageously, asked Anna if she ever saw anything so elegant.

"'Tis very pretty," Anna modestly replied—the lady still looking admiringly upon it.

"Pretty," reiterated Mrs. Homer, contemptuously; "why, you could not say less were it my old one. 'Tis splendid. Lay down your sewing and look at it."

Anna did as she was desired. Piqued at the coldness of her praise, Mrs. Homer, caught up the veil and threw it playfully over her head. Anna was a pretty girl. She stood in front of a mirror that displayed the whole of her figure, and as her eye glanced upon the veil as it partly shaded her features, a look of pleased surprise was observable to Mrs. Homer.

"'Tis beautiful," she said, a deeper crimson suffusing her cheeks; "very beautiful."

Satisfied, Mrs. Homer, now folded up the veil, and laid it away in a bureau-drawer. That night her little boy took suddenly ill, and for many days he continued in a very precarious condition. Anna gained an increase of favor from the unremitting attention she bestowed upon him. It was about a week after the child's convalescence, that Mrs. Homer discovered her veil had been stolen, and though every means was instituted for the detection of the thief, she was unable to obtain the least intelligence respecting it.

Greatly as it pained Mrs. Homer, to implicate Anna, she thought it justice to the other servants that she should undergo an examination with them, although she privately assured her of an entire belief in her innocence; but from this period the girl's spirit drooped, and though every kindness was shown her, with the same confidence as before, she gave notice to Mrs. Homer, of her intention to leave, and at the end of her month departed.

Three years had expired, when one day as Mrs. Homer, was seated in her costly drawing-room, surrounded by the luxuries and comforts which wealth can always purchase, the waiter informed her a half starved-looking wretch, accompanied by an elderly woman, requested to speak with her.

Mrs. Homer's was a heart "open as day to melting charity." She bade the waiter admit them. Never had her looks rested upon so miserable an object as one of them. Her eye was sunken, her skin shrivelled away, so that the bones seemed coming through it. Involuntarily Mrs. Homer, covered her face, to shut out the sight of her. This was Anna with her mother. Throwing herself upon her knees, with her long skeleton arms extended towards Mrs. Homer, she exclaimed,

"You do not know me—you have forgotten the sinful wretch who comes to implore your mercy." The tones of the voice seemed familiar.

"Can it be Anna?" asked Mrs. Homer.

"You know me then, at last," she replied, deprecatingly; "yes, 'tis Anna, whom remorse has thus blighted. I stole your veil, Mrs. Homer, and here it is," she added, drawing it from beneath her mother's cloak, "good as the day Satan tempted me to take it. Many's the time I have determined to bring it back to you, but I could not get the courage to encounter your reproaches. Mother says you will forgive me, for I have suffered deeply for my crime; but I dare not hope it. Yet I could pray for mercy to my offended Maker if you would just say you do forgive me."

Mrs. Homer, was unable to speak, and the distressed creature continued;

"Indeed madam, though I came not here to accuse, but humbly to throw myself upon your mercy, you were to blame in tempting a poor, ignorant girl, like me, so sorely. You knew not the feelings you stirred up when you threw the veil around me; I looked so well to myself, and the veil was so beautiful. But I did not think to take it, till one day I tried it on me again, and then I could resist no longer. What I underwent afterwards, when you spoke to me so confidentially of my innocence, you will never conceive. I wanted to die, and at one time almost determined to take a bottle of laudanum you had got for little John. My mother knows what I have suffered since, and your own eyes may judge," she concluded, again extending her arms towards her.

Tears of bitter contrition bedewed the face of Mrs. Homer while listening to the girl's just reproaches. She pardoned her, my beloved Ellen; restored her to the place she formerly held in her family; and during the two years of Anna's life, for she only lived that short period after her return—Mrs. Homer, endeavored by every mark of kindness, to obliterate from her memory the transgression which had caused her such distress. Mrs. Homer, is a woman, beloved alike for her extensive charities, the amabilities of her disposition, and the refinement of her manners; and yet, my child, with all these numerous qualifications of good, fitting her in every respect to adorn the society in which she moves and is a member, Mrs. Homer, has been taught a lesson by a poor, ignorant servant girl, she will never forget,—that it is not only necessary for a woman of Christian principles to guard against temptation herself, but never to place it within reach of another."

THE GRAVE.

The grave is the best source of morality. Study avarice in the coffin of the miser; this is the man who accumulates heap upon heap; riches upon riches; see, a few square boards enclose him. Study ambition in the grave of that enterprising man; see his whole designs, his extended projects, his boundless expedients, are all scattered, and end in this fatal gulf of human projects.

Approach the grave of the proud man, and there investigate pride; see the mouth that pronounced lofty expressions condemned to eternal silence; the piercing eye that convulsed the world with fear, covered with a midnight gloom; the formidable arm that disturbed the destinies of mankind, is now without motion or life.

Go to the tomb of the nobleman, and there study quality. Behold his magnificent titles; his royal ancestors; his flattering inscriptions; learned genealogies, are all gone—gone to be lost, with himself in the dust. Let us, then,

"So live, that when our summons comes to join, The innumerable caravan that moves To the pale realms of shade, where each shall take His chamber in the silent halls of death; We go not like the slave to night, Scourged to his dungeon; but sustained and soothed By an unfaltering trust, approach our grave Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch Around him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

THE WAY LAWYERS USE FEMALES.

I instituted an action for a large amount, in the county of ——. The suit was brought upon a plain promissory note, which I was assured was founded upon good consideration, and I was curious to know what defence could be set up. I was aware that I had to deal with a wily adversary; and when I offered my note in evidence, and closed my case, I was more terrified than surprised when I heard him direct the sheriff to call Mrs. Mary Jackson. The witness appeared. To my horror, she was a perfect beauty; possessing a sweet countenance, with exquisite form. I saw at once that my antagonist had formed the same judgment of human nature that I had, and that he was about to make the experiment of washing away the obligation of a note of hand by the tears of a female witness. I knew that nothing but a desperate effort could save my client, and that her testimony must be excluded before she had time to cry.

I rose at once. "I perceive," said I, addressing the court, "that this lady bears the same name with the defendant; I therefore respectfully request that she be placed on the voir dire." This was done. "Will you be kind enough to say, madam, what relation are you to the defendant?"

"Sir," answered the lady, applying a beautifully embroidered handkerchief to her eyes. "I am his injured wife!"

"Then, of course, your honor, the lady's testimony is inadmissible."

"Oh, very well," interposed my adversary; "you wish to keep the truth from the jury, do you? Gentlemen of the jury, you see that technicalities are resorted to, to procure a verdict against my client. I hope you will appreciate it, gentlemen."

By this time the lady was a beautiful representation of Rachel of old; and one glance at the jury was sufficient to convince me that my case was ruined. I turned to my client—"You are gone, my friend," said I. "Gone!" said he; "gone?" my dear sir; don't give up my suit so coolly. I shall be made a beggar if I lose this case, and then what will become of my wife and my poor daughters?"

"Oh, you have daughters, have you? Run and bring them, my dear friend! If they come, we must countermeine. Bring them, one and all!"

My client rushed out, and as he lived but next door, he almost instantly returned, with a half dozen as pretty girls as could be found any where. My antagonist's face fell to zero.

"May I please your honor," I began, "I desire to offer some rebutting testimony."

"Rebutting testimony, C—? why, your adversary has not been permitted to examine his witnesses. What have you to rebut?"

"A great deal, your honor. The witness has given some testimony. She called herself the 'injured' wife of the defendant. Injured by whom? By my client. Injured how? By procuring this note, the subject matter of the suit, from him. Now, sir, I wish to swear the afflicted daughters of the plaintiff, against the injured wife of the defendant."

Here my fair witnesses commenced weeping bitterly, while several of the jury looked on with evident commiseration. My triumph was complete; but I determined to pay off my legal friend in his own coin.

"I do not seek, sir," continued I, "to take up the time of this court and jury, by administering the oath to all these witnesses. I am afraid their heartrending description of this nefarious transaction (of which he is remembered, they did not know a syllable,) would wound us all; and your honor and this intelligent jury would be tempted to inflict summary justice upon the base wretch who, with a heart like Caligula, and a spirit like Nero, could attempt to doom to a life of beggary, of shame, and perhaps infamy, the offspring of my unhappy—nay, too credulous, too confiding client.

Sir, in the spirit of a liberal compromise, I will swear but three of them."

Here ensued a low burst of anguish from the daughters, and a corresponding and prolonged excitement of the jury. My legal friend said that I had out-generalled him, and so he said, "C—, stop your nonsense, and take your verdict!" Of course I did so; but to show my knowledge of jury nature, I add that as the foreman passed me, he said: "I rejoice that you have gained your suit, but before you offered to swear those witnesses, your case was a very dark one."—Knickerbocker.

GOD SEEN IN ALL HIS WORKS.

In that beautiful part of Germany which borders on the Rhine, there is a noble castle as you travel on the western bank of the river, which you may see lifting its ancient towers on the opposite side, above the grove of trees about as old as itself.

About forty years ago there lived in that castle a noble gentleman, whom we shall call Baron—. He had only one son, who was not only a comfort to his father, but a blessing to all who lived on his father's land.

It happened, on a certain occasion, that this young man being from home, there came a French gentleman to the castle, who began to talk of his Heavenly Father in terms that chilled the old man's blood; on which the Baron reproved him, saying, "are you not afraid of offending God, who reigns above, by speaking in such a manner?" The gentleman said he knew nothing about God, for he had never seen him. The Baron, this time, did not notice what the gentleman said but the next morning took him about his castle grounds, and took occasion first to show him a very beautiful picture that hung on the wall. The gentleman admired the picture very much, and said, "Whoever drew this picture, knows well how to use the pencil."

"My son drew this picture," said the Baron.

"Then your son is a clever man," replied the gentleman.

The Baron then went with his visitor into the garden, and showed him many beautiful flowers and plantations of forest trees.

"Who has the ordering of this garden?" asked the gentleman.

"My son," replied the Baron; he knows every plant, I may say, from the cedar of Lebanon to the hyssop on the wall."

"Indeed," said the gentleman, "I shall think very highly of him soon."

The Baron then took him into the village, and showed him a small, neat cottage, where his son had established a school, and where he caused all young children who had lost their parents, to be received and nourished at his own expense. The children in the house looked so innocent, and so happy, that the gentleman was very much pleased, and when he returned to the castle he said to the Baron, "What a happy man you are, to have so good a son."

"How do you know I have a son?"

"Because I have seen his works, and I know that he must be good and clever, if he has done all that you have showed me."

"But you have not seen him."

"No, but I know him very well, because I judge him by his work."

"True," replied the Baron, "and in this way I judge of the character of our Heavenly Father. I know by his works that he is a being of infinite wisdom, and power, and goodness."

The Frenchman felt the force of the reproof, and was careful not to offend the good Baron any more by his remarks.

CHILDREN'S OBSERVATION.

Nothing escapes the notice of the child; not even a change in the countenance, or in the intonations of the voice. They very early learn to know, by the looks of the parent or by the tone used, when it is necessary to obey, and when they may with impunity continue their disobedience. It is a great mistake, in the government of many, that they raise the voice when insisting upon obedience to a command—the child will always wait until the elevated tone assures him that it will be perilous to refuse. A mother overheard the following remarkable, certainly instructive conversation, between her boy and girl, the former of whom was the oldest. They were making a disturbance in the entry, while she was conversing with a lady in the adjoining room. In her ordinary tone of voice, she requested them to be still. Mother says we must be still, said the little girl. O well said the little boy, she don't care; she won't punish us, and then began to play again. Be still, children, said the mother again, in the same tone of voice. This time the little girl stopped; but the little boy commenced again by saying, Don't be afraid,—she never punishes us without she speaks louder first? It was a very good lesson for the mother. Upon consideration she found that the observation of the little fellow was true, that when she really meant what she said, she elevated the pitch of her voice.

It is on this account that the parent is often obliged to repeat the command several times before the child obeys; the child is waiting to learn from the countenance or tone whether the word must be obeyed or whether it may be evaded.

Let the request be clearly stated, but in the usual tone of voice, and without repetition. This course if habitually followed, will secure the immediate obedience of the child; save the parents unnecessary and aggravating repetitions; learn the child to be calm, and soft in his manners rather than boisterous and passionate—and convince the child the command is reasonable, and not the result of caprice or anger.

VULGAR MINDS. How much nicer people are in their persons than their minds. How anxious are they to wear the appearances of wealth and taste in the things of outward show, while their intellects are poverty and meanness. See one of the apes of fashion with his coxcombies and ostentation of luxury. His clothes must be made by the best tailor; his horse must be of the best blood; his cookery of the finest sort; but his reading of the poorest frivolities. Of the lowest of the animal senses he is an epicure—but a pig is a cleaner feeder compared with his mind; and the pig would eat good and bad, sweet and foul alike, but his mind has no taste except for the most worthless garbage. The pig has no discrimination and a great appetite; the mind which we describe has not the apology of voracity; it is satisfied with but little, but that little must be of the worst sort, and every thing of a better quality is rejected by it with disgust. If we could see men's minds as we see their bodies, what a spectacle of nakedness, destitution, deformity and disease it would be! What hideous dwarfs and cripples—what dirty and revolting cravings; and all these in connection with the most exquisite care and pampering of the body. It may be as a conceited coxcomb could see in his own mind, he would see a thing the meanest object the world can present. It is not with beggary in its most degraded state, that it is to be compared;

ed; for the beggar has wants, is dissatisfied with his state, has wishes for enjoyments above his lot; but the pauper in intellect is content with his poverty; it is his choice to feed on carrion, he can relish nothing else; he has no desire beyond his filthy fare. Yet he piques himself that he is a superior being; he takes to himself the merit of his tailor, his coach-maker, his upholsterer, and his cook; but if the thing were turned inside out, if that concealed, foul corner, his mind, were exposed to view, how degrading would be the exhibition!

HOW TO SPELL CAT. Sometime during the last war with Great Britain, the regiment of Infantry was stationed near Boston. Old Dr. M.—pence to his ashes—was surgeon to the regiment. The Dr. was an old gentleman of very precise and formal manners, who stood a great deal upon his dignity of deportment, and was in his own estimation, one of the literati of the army. Nevertheless he was fond of a joke—provided always it was not perpetrated at his own expense.

It is well known, in the 'old school,' that at the commencement of the war, a number of citizens were appointed officers in the army, who were more noted for their chivalry than for the correctness of their orthography. The doctor took little pains to conceal his contempt of the 'new set.'

One day, at mess, after the decafter had performed sundry perambulations at the table Capt. L., a brave and accomplished officer, and a great wag, remarked to the Doctor who had been somewhat severe in his remarks on the literary deficiencies of the new officers.

'Dr. M., are you acquainted with Capt. G.?'

'Yes, I know him very well,' replied the doctor; 'he's one of the new set. But what of him?'

'Nothing in particular,' replied Capt. L. 'I have just received a letter from him and I'll wager you a dozen of old port that you cannot guess how he spells CAT.'

'Done,' said the doctor, 'it's a wager.'

'Well—commence guessing,' said L.

'K-a double t.'

'No.'

'K-a-t-e.'

'No; you have missed it again.'

'Well then,' resumed the doctor, 'C-a double t.'

'No; that's not the way; try again; it's your last guess.'

'C-a-g-h-t.'

'No,' said L., 'that is not the way; you have lost!'

'Well,' said the Doctor, with much petulance of manner, 'how does he spell it?'

'Why, he spells it C-A-T,' replied L. with the utmost gravity.

Amidst the roar of the mess, and almost choking with rage, the doctor sprang to his feet, exclaiming, 'Capt. L., I am too old a man to be trifled with in this manner.'

TYRANTS. In all stages of time, as we read in history, tyrants have been called great men. Deeds of blood which should strike with horror and disgust the one who reflects upon them, have been handed down from generation to generation, adorned with the charmed words of poetry, and sung with inspiring sounds; laurel wreaths have been awarded to those heroes who waded through seas of innocent blood to fame, and children taught to hush their names with reverence and fear. The iron sceptre of tyranny has been swayed by men whose greatest deeds were marked with crimson stains which lives of the severest penance could not wash away. A starving wretch may way lay the unsuspecting traveller at midnight; the blade of the assassin may reach the heart of one who has rolled in luxury; and the gallows claims its victim. Terror is inspired by the name of the murderer who has taken one life, while the hero who has murdered thousands is worshipped as an idol. Alas for the religion of the world!

THE EMPEROR NICHOLAS. Whatever may be said of the iron Autocrat of all the Russias, he is a man who understands human nature and controls it with a skilful hand. He is called a tyrant, severe, oppressive and unforgiving. Yet he walks about the streets of St. Petersburg like any other citizen, without a guard, and takes his cup of coffee at any of the coffee houses, without the least apprehension of poison or the dagger. The Russians are devotedly attached to him. It is not in the nature of man to love a ruler who tramples on him. In his regulations of the new Railroads he has strictly provided for the public safety, and rewards engineers, conductors, etc, who shall run their trains without accident during the year, graduating those rewards according to the extent of the peril encountered. No better mode could be adopted to create vigilance and reward success.

WE FIXED THAT CHAP. A few days ago, says a contemporary, a gentleman came into our sanctum, took off his hat, picked up a piece of manuscript and commenced reading very closely. We reached over, took a letter out of his hat and unfolding it, commenced reading. He was so busy that he did not discover we were paying him in his own coin, until we asked him what his correspondent was writing to him about a woman? "Why, look here, 'Squire,'" says he, "you certainly are not reading my private letters?" "Certainly, Sir," said we; "you are reading our private manuscript." He was "fixed," begged us not to mention his name, promised to do so no more, and we quit even.

For the Quincy Patriot

LETTER FROM THE WEST.

LOUISVILLE, (Ky.) Jan. 12, 1847.

MR. GREEN—In my last, I stated, among other things, that Santa Anna was at Victoria with a large force and soon to be on his march towards the American camp; and that by the next arrival we should probably receive the intelligence of another battle. As yet we have not had any news to that effect, and much anxiety is manifested to hear the result. It is a rumor of his having thirty thousand men, and yet from what we can learn, it is not improbable; if it is so, our army is certainly in a critical situation, being separated and stationed at different points. We hope for the best.

Since my last communication, winter has come upon us in good earnest. It has been what we think here, very cold for a week past; snow fell to the depth of one inch or more, which the boys have made good use of; but it has moderated very much within a day or two, so that now it is quite comfortable again. It has been a very favorable opportunity for the ice-cream merchants to fill up their ice houses; they have been looking for a cold snap for some time. Ice is a very necessary article with us—in fact it would be almost impossible to get through the summer season without it.

The Legislature of this State is now in session; probably you have seen Gov. Owsley's message ere this. It is considered a very able document; and one principal feature in it is the subject of Education; recommending measures for the improvement and increase of the common schools of the State. The Legislature, I believe, have the subject in consideration now. The people of the west are much indebted to S. G. Goodrich of your State, who may be called the benefactor of mankind—for the series of Readers which are published in this city by Messrs. Morton & Griswold, and which are almost universally used. The Readers, five in number, have recently been revised by Mr. Goodrich, and all newly stereotyped at the Boston Type and Stereotype Foundry. Judging from what I have seen of them, they will prove to be the best and most attractive school books extant. The same publishers have in preparation also, a complete Historical Series for the use of Schools and families, by the same author. They are to consist of a Primary and of an Advanced Course—the former, five in number to contain two hundred and sixteen pages each; the latter, ancient and modern, about five hundred pages each. These, together with the five Readers will no doubt prove very valuable school books in this and in other parts of the country. Mr. Goodrich passed through here last season on his way from New Orleans to Massachusetts. Much enthusiasm was manifested at that city by the people, and children especially. As he was in Louisville only one night we had not the opportunity of giving him a similar reception.

Nothing new or remarkable has transpired of a local character since my last. An affair of honor however came off a few days since in our city—the parties were—the managers of a Ball that was given on the 8th January and a lady of this city. Discretionary powers were given to the Managers to reject those whom they thought in their judgment were not of the quality. This lady together with some few others were among the rejected ones; and her indignation was so much aroused in consequence of it that she took it upon herself to seek redress by coinciding each one of the managers at their respective places of business. On the following day she attacked one of them, as she thought, but who proved to be the manager's clerk, with the aforesaid coincide, "right smartly." I believe he carried the marks upon his face now. I have not heard whether she has succeeded in giving each their portion as yet or not; if further action is taken, and she carries her threats into execution I will advise you in another letter.

I will endeavor to comply with your request in furnishing a letter for your paper occasionally. You must remember, however, that my time is almost entirely taken up by my business; and it is only an hour now and then that I can devote to writing. This you and your readers can readily perceive by the poor and disconnected manner in which they are written. In haste, J. S.

For the Quincy Patriot.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 20, 1847.

MR. EDITOR—There is setting, at present, in Boston, a Whig Convention, or in other words, the Legislature is in session, which contains so small a sprinkling of democracy in one branch and none in the other, that its appearance is more like the former than the latter. They are now discussing the appropriation bill introduced by Col. Cushing, who opened the debate on Monday, in one of those rich, patriotic and eloquent speeches, which few can equal none surpass; the effect was forcibly seen among the federalists, that evening, their tone was so much altered, as to say, the Legislature will pass an appropriation with a preamble condemnatory of the administration, and the war; let them, it will be but the signal of union and harmony in the democratic ranks, which will next Nov. hurl the enemies of their country in time of war, from that throne of power, which they have used as an engine of "aid and comfort to the enemy," and place once more that party which loves its country best, when most oppressed, in their place.

Let the rallying cry of the democratic party in the next contest be our country, in war, always right—let a mass convention be early held, put forth for our standard bearers, men who will be true as steel to democratic principles, if elected. Men who have no sympathies with such a course of conduct, as was pursued by our last democratic State Government, but men who will be true to the party who support them, men who deem the contest one for principles, and not one for their own selfish advancement, men who do not feel the party was made for them, but they for the party; acfully, most acfully, has the democracy of Massachusetts of the past been cleared. I would warn my fellow democrats, from one end of the State to the other, to beware, and be sure hereafter, in their selection of candidates, to select men who are democrats in practice, as well as in theory. We want a man for governor, who will not appoint abolitionists to office in preference to old and tried democrats, one who will not tamper with whiggism, abolitionism or nativism, but take the lamented Jackson for a model, assume the responsibility, stand or fall on democratic principles, and with democratic men.

My word for it, if the working men of the democratic party, take hold in season and in earnest; bring forward a list of true, firm, unwavering men, such as can be depended upon in the hour of trial, the second Monday of November next, will see the star of democracy in the Old Bay State once more in the ascendant; then let us one and all to the work, gird on the glorious armour of 1844, let the acts of '43 and of the past two years be forgotten, let the contest be for the great principles of democracy, let our motto, be justice to every member of the democratic party; however small the man may be, his rights are as dear to him as that man whose name has been blazoned forth on our banner for years.

Yours,

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SEARS' PLAN OF EMANCIPATION. Hon. David Sears of Boston, has proposed a plan for emancipating the slaves in this country, which is to be made the subject of petitions to Congress. The plan contemplates the purchase of all female slaves born prior to 1850, who are to be made free; children born of such females, of course, to be free, and after the date mentioned, all children to be born free. The last census gave 420,000 as the number of female slaves under ten years of age, and 390,000 as the number of female slaves between the ages of ten and twenty. It is proposed to purchase one or both of these classes. It is estimated, that at their present average value, they could be bought and emancipated at a cost much less than the expense of our last war with Great Britain, and far less than the probable cost of the present war with Mexico.

SPENDING THE EVENINGS. "The Regenerator," a paper published at Fruit Hills, (Ohio), "devoted to universal inquiry, general improvement, and perpetual progress," copies an article having the foregoing title, which we published a few weeks since, and appends the following remarks; we copy them that our readers may have the benefit of the opinion of the editor of that paper:

"The course parents pursue towards their children, in their early education generally—in religion, common schooling and labor—is calculated to produce the contrary effect from what is desired. It creates in them aversion to what is truly philosophical and productive of improvement. It is a forced, dogmatic, denigrating process, from first to last. They proceed irrespective of cause and effect. In their erroneous ways, the more strenuous their efforts to save, the more they destroy. The more they strive by such means as they use to reclaim children, the more perverse they make them. What is attributable simply to their want of better knowledge, they in their want of it attribute to what they call corrupt nature, and go on, confused and confusing themselves and each other."

"The parents are as innocent in thus driving their children into evil ways as the children are in going into them, thus driven; and the children are as innocent as the parents. Neither of them know what they are doing. They find themselves suffering and know not the cause of it. They eat hot food, 'seasoned' with salt and other destructive substances—eat flesh, grease and gravy—drink hot tea, coffee and alcohol—chew, smoke and snuff tobacco—sleep on feather beds and cover themselves with improper clothing. The consequence is, rotten teeth—rotten stomachs—diseased systems throughout—lustfulness, debauchery and premature death. So blind are they to the connection between the effects and the causes in the case, they trace their sufferings, thus produced, to a single act of disobedience to an arbitrary command from an almighty being to a single pair of his creatures—he [the creator] all the while looking on, with power to prevent, and allowing them to proceed, that he might get glory, honor and greatness to himself in punishing them with ever lasting destruction. The frowardness of children, depicted in the paragraph which has elicited these remarks, will continue until the causes producing it are better known, and different means are used for their removal and prevention."

MASSACHUSETTS LICENSE LAW. The important case testing the constitutionality of the License Laws of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, came before the Supreme Court of the United States, at Washington, on Tuesday last. "The case was opened by Senator Webster, in what was conceded to be one of his most powerful arguments. He was followed by Senator Davis, on the other side."

NEW PAPER. The first number of a new paper has been sent us, called the Boston Vindicator, published by Messrs. Sullivan, Griffin & Co., and purporting to be devoted to the interests of Irishmen and Ireland. We should not think, that there was sufficient patronage to be obtained for this new Journal after giving that long-tried and faithful organ, The Boston Pilot, a support which it so meritoriously deserves from every true friend of "Erie."

NEARLY AN EXPLOSION. An alarm of fire was given in this village on Saturday morning of last week, which was occasioned by the following circumstances. A small building situated on Hancock Street, very near the tin plate manufactory of Mr. Ensign S. Fellows, has for a short time past been occupied as a gun cotton manufactory; the chimney had become foul from the use of a wood air-tight stove, and, on that morning, took fire; the wind coming over the roof of Mr. Fellows' shop sent the flames into the room and a quantity of cotton, in the process of preparation, exploded, forcing out the windows and otherwise injuring the building—not very materially, however. A person in the building was considerably burned—having the skin taken from his face and hands. It was a very narrow escape,—had the cotton been dry the explosion would have been destructive.

FIRE IN BOSTON. A very extensive fire occurred in Boston last Thursday night. It took in a bowling alley in Haverhill Street, at about half past ten o'clock, and in a few hours had spread over an area of several acres. The night was very cold, and it was almost impossible to arrest the progress of the flames. We learn that there were about an hundred buildings destroyed, but have not heard the value of the property estimated.

FROM MEXICO. The papers continue to give us paragraphs about desperate battles expected, important rumors and alarming intelligence, but we believe nothing very definite can be gathered from them. The report that Com. Perry had taken possession of Laguna and destroyed the enemy's guns and munitions of war found in the forts and the town, is confirmed. Santa Anna has been declared by the new Congress, duly elected President of the Republic of Mexico. The Mexican papers convey the impression that San Luis is to be the great battle ground of the war. It is thought that Gen. Taylor will return home as soon as Gen. Scott takes command.

LEGISLATIVE. On Monday last, in the House, Mr. Cushing of Newburyport, took the floor in support of the resolution to appropriate twenty thousand dollars in aid of the Volunteers from Massachusetts. He spoke one hour and twenty minutes, very forcibly and with much eloquence, contending that the Volunteers were an integral part of the Militia of the State, and therefore, that the Commonwealth was bound to see them fully provided for.

On Tuesday, Mr. Abraham R. Thompson, of Charlestown, was unanimously elected to the Council from Middlesex.

The Petition of Laban Souther and 62 others of Cohasset, for a railroad from that town to Quincy, has been presented.

BIRTHS, ETC., IN DORCHESTER. A friend has furnished us with the following list of Births, Deaths, Marriages, etc., in the town of Dorchester:

Births from May 1st, 1845, to May 1st, 1846,	187
Deaths from Jan. 1st, 1846, to Jan. 1st, 1847,	183
Marriages from May 1st, 1845, to May 1st, 1846,	58
Population in 1840,	4875
Population in 1846,	6500

TREATY WITH PERU. A treaty has been concluded between the United States and Peru, by which the latter government has agreed to pay to the United States three hundred thousand dollars, and interest, for injuries suffered. Every disposition appears to have been made upon the part of Peru for the adjustment of all difficulties.

A CENTENNARIAN. Mr. Noah Price of Scituate, in Plymouth County, we learn from the Memorial, entered upon the one hundred and first year of his age on Tuesday of last week, in the enjoyment of good health for one of his years.

ENDORSEMENT. Governor Edwards of Missouri, in his message to the Legislature, places before that body in a strong light the evils, which often accrue to families and communities, from the custom of endorsing. He says, with a mixture of gallantry and good sense, which is seldom met with in public documents:

"It might be well, then, before a man, in a convivial moment, or when overcome by the persuasions of an imprudent friend, or deceived by the false representations of a bad man, puts his whole estate—the earnings of a long and laborious life, and of much toil and care—in jeopardy of the law, to require him at least to get the signature of his wife. If she is to be reduced to poverty, it may be as well to let her know it in advance, and get her consent to it."

"This little remedy the evil to some extent, by adding a little more time, reflection and caution, to all such transactions, without presenting much of the good resulting from the practice. Experience has shown that the wife is a good adviser and safe counsellor."

CONGRESS. Both Houses were engaged on bills for the increase of the military force, on the 10th inst. On the 12th, the death of Mr. Pennybacker was announced in the Senate, which body immediately adjourned. The House was engaged on the Oregon Territorial Bill. The next day, both bodies attended the funeral of Hon. Isaac Pennybacker.

In the Senate, on the 14th, the bill from the House, providing for an increase of the army by ten regiments, was under discussion. The House was engaged on the Oregon Bill. On the 15th, the Senate took up the bill providing for the appointment of a Lieut. General, and after some debate it was laid on the table,—thus defeating the proposition. The House was engaged on the Oregon Bill. The Senate, on the 16th, was engaged on the army bill. The Oregon Territorial bill was passed by the House, 133 to 35. Jan. 18th, no business of general importance was transacted in either branch.

ALBERT J. TIRRELL. The Jury in the trial of this person for Arson returned a verdict of not guilty. He was detained by the County Attorney on an action for adultery to which he plead nolo contendere, and after an ineffectual attempt of counsel to procure a postponement of sentence, he was sentenced by Judge Ward to three years confinement in the State Prison.

FIRE IN HINGHAM. A large two story building in the north part of Hingham was entirely consumed by fire on Monday. The building was owned by J. Baker & Sons and partly occupied by them with machinery. The lower part was occupied by Job S. Whiton as a planing and Sawing mill. The fire is supposed to have originated near the boiler in the cellar. The building and machinery were insured.

Lieut. Ellis B. Green, of Company I, of the Volunteers, will wear the sword and epaulettes which his father wore as a captain in the Revolutionary war.

OBITUARY.

"He being dead, yet speaketh."

Died at Germantown, Quincy, Dec. 11th, Dea. J. Sullivan, aged seventy-seven and a half years. He was assisting to remove a small quantity of hay from one barn to another. Having placed himself as he supposed in a safe position, he remained on the cart, the man walking the horse. But it would seem, a part of the hay slipped unexpectedly, and he fell to the ground. The effort was an effort to turn a wheel at the back of the neck, producing a paralysis of the body below the part, but leaving the head unaffected. The most faithful and judicious medical attention failed of effect, and he expired in forty-two hours after the fall.

The deceased was a native of Boston, where nearly all his life was spent, and where, in the business community and church of Christ, he was esteemed for integrity and a consistent Christian character. Dea. S. had been a resident of Quincy the last eight years, mingling with its inhabitants to some extent in the common concerns of business and of life, and cherishing for them a consequent respect and regard; but his deepest, most fervent desire on his behalf ever were, that they might become wise unto salvation and live for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom; for this, his constant prayer ascended on high and terminated with his last hour.

In an interview with one of the clergymen of the town, the afternoon previous to his departure, to the kind salutation "I am sorry, brother Sullivan, to see you thus," he replied—"You find me restricted in the most of my system, but I have reason to be thankful that my head is not affected." Then naming some of our favorite circumstances, he went on to speak of his reflections while lying there and reviewing the large measure of domestic enjoyments with which his life had been blessed, and his emotions in calling to mind the endeared relatives who had finished their course. The conversation then turned naturally to the subject of personal religion. A question was asked to elicit his feelings in view of his present state. With a calm dignity he answered—"The number of our months is with the Lord; whether I shall be restored, or partially so, or not at all, time alone will show; the event is with him. I have thought I might continue a little while longer, and if it is the Lord's will, desire it. I am not sensible of any keen grief for the enjoyment of this present life, that makes me wish to remain,"—then turning to the common with tears and tremulous utterance he added—"but I have felt such ardent, longing desires for the salvation of my dear neighbors and the people of the town, that it has seemed as if I should have given up the work of the Lord here had he yet been apparent. We have had something of this kind to be thankful for, but I long for a glorious outpouring of the Holy Spirit, for I believe that nothing short of the Spirit of God, convincing of sin in the present life and leading to repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, can fit the soul for Heaven. If I have had any right desires for this blessing, God is the author of them. I do trust this is the case and have almost hoped that I should live to witness at least the dawn of such a day to the people of Quincy."

After prayer and singing he expressed his satisfaction in the interview—his enjoyment of the prayer—"at parting he remarked pleasantly, 'I would give you my hand if I could move it.' It was taken. With the motionless hand clasped in that of the other he said affectionately, 'I rejoice, my dear sir, in what you have felt and done for the spiritual good of this people. I fondly hope that the Lord will be pleased to bless your labors yet more abundantly before you leave town.'"

There was something touching and noble to those around in beholding that prostrate, feeble frame discharging not the least, unfettered mind. Apart from the sadness of witnessing his suffering, his departure between the fall and its fatal termination seemed but like a few hours of enjoyment with a weary pilgrim who was reclining to converse before he fell asleep.

He held very agreeable and cheerful intercourse with his sons in the evening—declined through the night and more rapidly in the morning—was not sensible, probably, that the hour of his great change was so near at hand until some physical sensations led him to say—"There is a tremor in every nerve,"—"O that the Lord would give me strength for this situation,"—seeming then to realize what the situation was. A few Scriptures were repeated and the remark "Heaven is near," to which he assented with a look of perfect intelligence. His lips once more moved in communion with God, while his countenance assumed the blessed expression of prayer, quickly followed by that of holy wonder. One kind look around upon his children and the spirit was gone.

When holy souls retire to rest;
How mildly beams the closing eye,
How gently heaves the expiring breast."

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is constantly advertised in our columns. We feel bound to say that we put little faith generally in specifics and nostrums—much less in your cure-alls. But a family use of this medicine for six or seven years past—during which time the editor who writes this has at intervals suffered with acute asthma, and he writing not so much for the benefit of the proprietors, as for that of those who are afflicted with that distressing disease; takes pleasure in saying that he invariably found it beneficial to him, and in every case where it has been used promptly at the first indication of an attack, with entire and prompt relief. From having also observed it tried by others, he is of opinion that it is worthy of the confidence of the public.

But it would seem, a part of the hay slipped unexpectedly, and he fell to the ground. The effect was an injury of the spinal chord at the back of the neck, producing a paralysis of the lower limbs, and leaving the head unaffected. The most faithful and judicious medical attention failed of effect and he expired in forty two hours after the fall.

The deceased was a native of Boston, where nearly all his life was spent, and where, in the business community and church of Christ, he was esteemed for integrity and a consistent Christian character. Dea J. Sullivan had been a resident of Quincy the last eight years, mingling with its inhabitants to some extent in the common concerns of business and of life, and cherishing for them a consequent respect and regard; but his deepest, most fervent desires on their behalf ever were, that they might become wise, virtuous, and live for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom; for this, his constant prayer ascended on high and terminated with his last hour.

In an interview with one of the clergymen of the town, the afternoon previous to his departure, to the kind salutation "I am sorry, brother Sullivan, to see you thus," he replied: "You find me restricted in the most of my system, but I have sought, and I feel that my heart is not affected." Then naming some other favorable circumstances, he went on to speak of his reflections while lying there and reviewing the large measure of domestic engagements with which his life had been blessed, and his emotions in calling to mind the endeared relatives who had finished their course. The conversation then turned naturally to the subject of personal religion. A question was asked to elicit his feelings in view of his present state. With a calm dignity he answered: "The number of our months is with the Lord; whether I shall be restored, or partially so, or not at all, time alone will show; the event is with him. I have sought, and I might continue a little while longer, and if it is the Lord's will, desire it. I am not sensible of any keen relief for the enjoyments of the present life, that makes me wish to remain,"—then losing the calmness and serene and tremendous utterance, he exclaimed: "I have felt such ardent, longing desires for the salvation of my dear neighbors and the people of the town, that it has seemed as if I should live in witness more of the work of the Lord here than has yet been apparent. We have had something of this kind in the past, but I long for a general uprising of the Holy Spirit, for I believe that nothing short of the Spirit of God, convincing of sin in the present life and leading to repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, can fit the soul for Heaven. If I have had any right desires for this blessing, God is the author of them. I do trust this is the case and have almost believed that I should live to witness at least the dawn of such a day to the people of Quincy."

After prayer and singing he expressed his satisfaction in the interview—his enjoyment of the prayer—on parting he remarked pleasantly, "I would give you my hand if I could move it." It was then said, "With the motionless hand clasped in that of the other he said affectionately, "I rejoice, my dear sir, in what you have felt and done for the spiritual good of this people. I fervently hope that the Lord will be pleased to bless your labors yet more abundantly before you leave town."

There was something touching and noble to those around in beholding that prostrate, feeble frame, disturbing not the clear, unfettered mind. Apart from the sadness of witnessing how signifying the interval between the fall and its fatal termination seemed but a few hours of enjoyment with a weary pilgrim who was reaching to converse before he fell asleep.

He held out agreeable and cheerful intercourse with his sons in the evening, declined through the night and more rapidly in the morning,—was not sensible, probably, that the hour of his great change was near at hand until some physical sensations led him to say: "There is a tremor in every nerve."

"O that the Lord would give me strength for this situation,"—seeming then to realize what the situation was. A few Scriptures were repeated and the remark "Heaven is near," to which he assented with a look of perfect intelligence. His lips once more moved in communion with God, while his countenance assumed the blessed expression of prayer, quickly followed by that of holy wonder, the kind look of a soul about to enter the presence of his Father in heaven.

"Bless is the scene when Christians die, When holy souls retire to rest; How gently heaves the closing eye! How gently beams the expiring breast!"

Opinion and experience of the Editor of the Richmond News and Star, Dec. 8, 1845.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is constantly advertised in our columns. We feel bound to say that we put little faith generally in specifics and nostrums—much less in your cure-alls. But a familiar use of this medicine for six or seven years past—during which time the editor who writes this has at intervals suffered with acute asthma, and he writing not so much for the benefit of the proprietors, as for that of those who are afflicted with that distressing disease, takes pleasure in saying that he invariably found it beneficial to him, and in every case where it has been used promptly at the first indication of an attack, with entire and prompt relief. From having also observed it tried by others, he is of opinion that it is worthy of the confidence of the public.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, or to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We have also in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULAR LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Maps, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

POETRY.

WOMAN'S GRAVE.
There, underneath that hillock green
Where drooping willows wave,
And pensive silence marks the scene
Is woman's lonely grave.
Oh! it has been the sculptor's turn
Of one renowned in song,
What flames of glory there would burn!
What crowds around it throng!
But man forgets the sainted dead,
Upon whose yearning breast,
He first reclined his infant head,
And gently sank to rest.
The soothing voice—the smile—the kiss,
He will no longer prize—
A mother's cares—a mother's bliss,
Awake in him no sighs.
Why is it that he turns aside
From woman's lowly tomb,
To linger by the grave of pride,
And mourn his early doom?
Why should the monumental stone
That bears the great man's name,
Attract his ardent gaze alone
And claim the wreath of fame?
Oh! dearer to the heart that feels
The love of all that's pure,
Is woman's grave when twilight steals
Along the silent moor.
The meditative mind recalls,
Her virtue from the shade,
And weeps, that in death's darksome halls,
So much of Heaven should fade.

IDLE WORDS.

The strongest love hath yet, at times,
A weakness in its power;
And latent sickness often sends
The madness of an hour!
To her I loved in bitterness
I said a cruel thing—
Ah me! how much of misery
From idle words may spring!
I loved her then—I love her still—
But there was in my blood
A growing fever, that did give His frenzy to my mood;
I sneered, because another's sneer
Had power my heart to wring;
Ah me! how much of misery
From idle words may spring.
And when, with tears of wonder, she Looked up into my face,
I coldly turned away mine eyes,
Avoiding her embrace;
Idly I spoke of idle doubts,
And many an idle thing;
Ah me! how much of misery
From idle words may spring.
'Twas over soon, the cause—not soon
The sad effects passed by;
They rule me 'neath the summer sun,
And 'neath the winter's sky!
I sought forgiveness—she forgave,
But kept the lurking sting!
Alas how much of misery
From idle words may spring.
Month after month—year after year,
I strove to win again
The heart an idle word had lost,
But strove, alas! in vain,
Oh! ye who love, beware lest thorns
Across Love's path ye fling;
Ye little word what misery
From idle words may spring!

ANECDOTES.

A reverend gentleman, reading to his congregation the passage of scripture, "I am that I am," in a fit of absence of mind, turned over two pages and went on, "an ass a colt, the tool of an ass"—when discovering his mistake, he rather hastily turned back, and exclaimed, "that I am!"
A timid old lady, in Brookfield, forbid her dress-maker to pad her to cover the roof of a house most beautifully, said, "I have lived to see the wilderness blossom as the rose, the village church spire glisten in the rays of the morning sun, and one night the stream rose twenty feet and carried away my mill, which cost one thousand dollars."
"My dear," said a lady to a little girl, "what is the matter with your mother?" "She's got the rebellion fever, madam."

MISCELLANY.

THE TWO SISTERS.

'Hark; Ady, did you not hear the door bell?
yes, there it is again. Please go, sister, for I cannot?' and she cast a glance at her loose morning dress, soiled shoes, and the like.

Ady, too, was deeply engaged in domestic avocations, but 'looking far more tidy, and fit to be seen,' as her sister said, and immediately obeyed
the summons.

'Good morning, Miss—is Mr. Ashley within?
inquired a young man, with a kindly smile.

'He is sir; please step in, and I'll call him directly.' The stranger did as he was desired, and was soon met by Mr. Ashley, with every demonstration of pleasure.

'My dear Albert,' exclaimed he, as soon as the first gust of feeling had subsided, 'how rejoiced I am to meet you in my own New England home!
Long have I wished it, yet hardly dared hope, for I feared you were so strongly attached to your bright southern clime, that you'd not be willing to leave it even for a few weeks. But welcome, right welcome to 'Ashley cottage,' as our simple dwelling is styled, and we'll do all in our power to make your stay pleasant and agreeable.'

'Thank you, thank you, Mr. Ashley,' replied his young friend; 'I have promised myself a feast of pleasure, and now feel quite sure that it will all be realized. But pray tell me, dear sir, was that sweet girl a daughter of yours?'

'Yes, yes,' replied he, warmly, 'and a better girl never blessed a father's heart. She is the very emblem of her sainted mother in look, word and deed. O, I could not live without her! and she turned away to hide a tear which was gathering in his eye. Albert saw it, and strove to give a turn to the conversation. But a chord had been touched in the heart of his friend, which could not easily be still.

'No, no, you must bear with me, Albert,' replied
he, to his kindly suggestions, for I must tell you my sorrows. I need sympathy, and in your heart I shall find it, for it has feeling. O! you know not how much I have suffered since my sojourn with you.
Then I had a wife, Albert, and was blessed, O, how deeply blessed! But she now lives only in heaven, and in the hearts of those who loved her here.
Forgive my weakness, my dear young friend, and let me weep,' said he, vainly endeavoring to continue. 'My heart has been sundered in twain, and cannot now bear what it once could.'

For a few moments they mingled their tears together, and let it not be called weakness. He who would not shed a tear over such bereavement, or in sympathy with it, were unworthy the name of man.

Having thus eased his overflowing heart, Mr.
Ashley continued: 'When my health, faded, and I sought its restoration in a southern clime, 'twas her kind words which cheered me on. Even though detained by more severe illness in a land of strangers, her spirit sank not, and though she could not join me, yet her kind words of hope and cheerfulness buoyed up my sinking heart. Those letters you recollect, for it was through your voice I first heard them. From those you might judge her worth, for they were a part of herself. She was ever my guardian angel—my better spirit. No dark clouds e'er marred our wedded love, and we deemed none could. But alas! Death came, and called her hence. I followed her to the cold tomb, and returned alone—yes, alone! O, God, the agony of that moment! A whole life of misery seemed crowded into it.'

'Three years have passed since then, but I cannot forget, yet I do not often indulge in such feelings. 'Twould wholly unfit me for exertion, and I have yet much for which to live. For my two girls, life is still sweet, and to toil for them is a pleasure.

Ady has never left me. Helen, till within the last six months, has resided with an aunt in the city.
She was desirous of going, but I have ever regretted it. I would have both with me, for though we keep only one domestic, yet, with Ady's watchful care, all goes well. But I'll weary you no longer.

Dinner will soon be ready, and in the meantime,
I leave you to rest from the fatigue which I have imposed upon you?' so saying, he left him.

Dinner was soon announced, and Mr. Ashley,
conducting his young friend to the dining room,
presented him to his daughters. The dinner hour passed pleasantly away. Ady presided with graceful ease and dignity, and the father's eye was oft beamed on her with looks of love. She was modest and retiring, speaking but little save when addressed, but her remarks were all characterized by good sense and much sympathy. She was not beautiful, at least not at first sight, yet one could not easily forget her.

Helen said more, indeed she greeted her father's visitor, more as an old acquaintance, than as a stranger, and her presence made him almost forget that he was one. There was a fascination about her which made him overlook the less brilliant sister by her side.

Dinner finished, the two gentlemen withdrew to the parlor. Helen soon followed, but Ady remained behind. For a time Albert heeded not her absence;
but at length he inquired, 'Where is your sister, Miss Ashley?'

Helen slightly colored as she replied, 'She is attending her domestic duties, but will soon be here.'
It was not long ere Ady came. Exercise had heightened the bloom on her cheek, and for a moment Albert thought her lovely; but Helen soon engrossed all his attention again, and Ady was but a patient listener. Thus passed a week. Helen became daily more and more the companion of Albert. They rode, walked and read together, and, indeed, seldom were they separated. Ady marked it all with a gladdening heart. She knew that Albert Norton was destined to shower happiness
wherever he went, and loving her sister as she did, she rejoiced in her prospects. Weeks sped on, and every thing save a formal declaration of love had passed between them. Of that there was no need, for each understood the heart of the other.

One day Albert left them to visit a neighboring town, intending to spend the day; but feeling unwell, returned before the dinner hour. He entered, and finding both parlor and sitting room vacant,
was proceeding to the kitchen, when the voice of Helen stayed his course. He listened a moment without power to move, and though unwilling to become a listener, sank upon a chair beside him.
The girls heard him not, but continued their conversation.

No, Ady, I'll not submit to his drudgery; as well
might one turn a kitchen girl and done with it.
Father may keep more help or go without his pies
and puddings, I'll not assist in making them.'

'Hush, hush, Helen. You know father is not able to keep more help without making greater sacrifices than he ought.' Besides, 'tis better for us that we, too, learn to be domestics.'

'Domestics, forsooth! And so you'd really have me shut myself up here, would you? But I'll not do it. I'll return to aunt directly, and you may remain here and cook, if you choose.'

'But, my dear sister, what will you do when you have the care of a house yourself?'

'Do? why, just as I'd wish to do now—leave all to the care of domestics, of course. I'd not marry a man who was not rich enough to support me a lady.'

'Alas! Helen,' replied Ady, sadly, 'I fear you are laying up sorrow for future years. O, why did you ever leave us! Do not again, dear sister, but remain with those who love you, even as we do.'

'No, I'll do no such thing!' replied she, pettishly.
'I'll go to aunt directly.'

She was just leaving the room when her eye fell on Albert, as he sat there, pale, and well nigh fainting. Forgetting everything, but that he must have heard her, and not having enough courage to meet him, she hastened to her room.

Albert rose, and told Ady of his situation. She gently bathed his burning brow, and assisted him to his room, begged of him to rest. He was soon better, and able to go below stairs. Helen was also there, but a restraint rested on all present.

Two more weeks passed away, and a change came o'er all. Helen had returned to the city, and Albert to his southern home, though not till he had won from Ady the promise to be his.

'Say, Ady, only say that you will be mine,' said
Albert, the evening previous to his departure, 'and I'll ask no more.'

'But, Albert, what will become of my father?
He must not be left alone.'

'And he shall not be, Ady. He shall go with us.
Your father shall be my father. Now will you be mine?'

'Thine, Albert, thine!' answered she, and he clasped her tenderly in his arms.

The next morning he left them, but at the expiration of six months he again sought Ady. They were married, and removed south.

In the meantime Helen had been united to Harry Edwards, a young man of large fortune and pleasing address. Every thing looked bright and beautiful before them, and both looked forward to a life of happiness.

CHAPTER II.

Years passed away. Ady found her home all that she could wish, and was truly happy. Her husband was wealthy, yet she counted his possessions as a mere trifle, when compared with the true wealth shined in his heart, and those of her children. Even now, as ever, she was the guardian angel of the whole household. Her servants found in her a true woman, and served her with no common zeal. Mr. Ashley resided with them, and,
happy in the love of his new home, seemed again
to be living over the days of his first wedded love.

His grand-children were ever his companions.
'Twas a beautiful picture, childhood thus mingled with age. One could only think of Christ blessing little children, as his eye rested on them; for on the grand-father's face there ever rested a smile
almost heavenly in its sweetness.

For a time they heard often from Helen, but at length her letters ceased entirely. Repeatedly they wrote to her aunt for information, but could gain nothing satisfactory. At first they had lived in all the luxury and splendor which wealth could procure, but bad habits came upon the husband. He sought the gaming table and its constant attendant, the wine cup. Step by step he plunged headlong into the mazes of degradation. A kind look and tone from his wife might have saved him; but he ever met her frown and cruel reproach.

'Helen,' said he, one evening soon after they were married, 'will you not remain at home with me this evening, and relinquish going to the party?
I am not well, indeed I am not, and your presence would be a consolation.'

'And do you think, Harry, that I married you to become your slave? no; call on the domestics for companions—the party claims my attention.'

His entreaties were vain, and she left him. For a while he sat alone; then rising, repaired to his never failing haunt, when his wife was away.
Through her unkindness he had been driven from home; but alas! she little knew the heart she was crushing. 'Twas a fault of his to be easily influenced, and had she taken a different course, she would have saved him from degradation. But evening after evening had been driven away, till his health, wealth and reputation were ruined forever.

Then he had fled from the scenes of his disgrace,
his wife following, but none knew whither. They had since heard of his death, and this was all Ady
could learn of her misdeeds.

Ten years had joined the brethren of the past, and it was spring—a bright southern spring. The air was filled with perfume of the golden jasmine which twined so tenderly about every shrub and tree, giving beauty to the whole forest. The little violet looked laughing up, as though mingling its hopes and aspirations with those of mortals. The birds were carolling their sweet notes, and every thing seemed full of life, hope and joy. In the dwelling of Albert Norton it was so. The grandfather sat by the door, with his youngest pet, the lovely little Eva, in his arms, and was telling her tales suited to her juvenile years. Ever and anon
she would clasp her little hands in childish glee, give her grand-father a kiss, then sink again into the attitude of an elder listener. The mother sat within doors with her two elder children by her side.

Helen was busily engaged with pencil and brush,
and Edward in solving a mathematical problem.
Presently the sobs of a child broke their repose.
All looked to see whence the sound proceeded, but ere they had time to speak, the child, observing the sweet expression in Mrs. Norton's face, and bounded forward, and stood at her feet.

'My mother is dying!' exclaimed she, clasping
her hands, 'O come, come quickly!'

Mrs. Norton waited for no more, but leaving all and desiring them to remain quiet until her return, she accompanied the little girl. Just round the corner of the garden enclosure, and lying upon the ground, was the mother of the child. She had fainted. Immediately calling to Mr. Ashley, they bore her to the house. Restoratives were applied, and she soon revived; but on first opening her eyes, she gave a wild shriek, and sank again into insensibility. Once more they restored her to consciousness, though with some difficulty. Immediately on reviving, she looked for her little girl.
The child understood it, and going towards her mother, said, 'I am here, mother. Are you no better?'

'Yes, my child, I am; but I cannot live long. I must leave you. Come closer to me, for I cannot long see you.'

The child nestled close down by her side, and sobbed in all the agony of a young heart. Mrs.
Norton's eyes were riveted upon the sick woman.
That voice, had she not heard it before? It seemed to awaken a thousand slumbering recollections.
The sufferer noticed her gaze, and moaning her forward, softly whispered, 'Ady.'

'My sister! O, my sister!' exclaimed she, and sank upon her knees beside her. Involuntarily the father followed, and laying a hand upon the head of each, he murmured, 'God be thanked. My daughter was lost, and is found. May Heaven bless her—bless them both.'

For a few moments not a word was spoken.
Feeling was too deep for words, but at length the sick woman, raising her head, said, 'Father, sister, I am dying now; but I die happy. You have received me to your arms—have blessed me, and I go in peace.' She paused a moment, then addressing the child, continued, 'Ady, my dear, come hither! Then taking her hand, she placed it in that of her sister; and looking earnestly in her face, said, 'Ady, be a mother to my orphan girl, she is a sweet child, sister; guard her well, and O, teach her to do as you have done. Cultivate in her a mild and gentle disposition, and all those feminine and domestic virtues which so truly belong to woman; and Heaven and your own conscience will reward you.'

'I will, Helen, I will! But you may yet recover and be happy with us.'

The dying woman shook her head, and casting on all a last, sweet look, her spirit fled to Him who gave it. Deep anguish filled the hearts of all, but they mourned not as those without hope. She had been with them—spoken with them—died with them—and they thanked Heaven for the mournful pleasure they found in ministering to her last wishes. She was buried in the small enclosure dedicated to the dead, and the little Ady became an inmate of the sister's family.

'Helen's child shall never want while it is in our power to bestow; said Mr. Norton to his wife, on the evening after the burial.

'No,' replied his wife, 'she shall not, but shall be even as our own.'

'Poor Helen,' continued Mr. Norton, 'she had naturally a good and kind heart, but it wandered naturally astray. Let us cherish her virtues, forget her faults, and educate her daughter in all that pertains to the sphere of woman. Alas! that there are not more such. But there will be. Woman's way is onward. Let her fail not, nor falter till a revolution is effected.'

ILLUSTRIOUS MECHANICS.

Adam, the father of the human race, was a gardener. He had, however, a strange propensity for tasting unwholesome fruit, which produced very injurious effects, both upon himself and his offspring.

Noah was a shipwright and a husbandman; he navigated the whole earth in his ark, and got 'seas
over' in his vineyard.

Solomon was an architect, poet and philosopher;
his conduct, however, was not always by line and rule, he trod the circle of dissipation, was erratic in his imaginations, and violated his own maxims.
His conscience and strength of mind however reclaimed him, and his repentance is the most beautiful of his works which he has left for the contemplation of his species.

The Apostle Paul was a tent maker, and labored with his hands at his vocation, while he endeavored to infuse into the minds of his fellow men, the important truths of revelation. While he screened them with earthly tabernacles from the weather,
he held above their souls the regis of divine protection.

Matthew was a poor fisherman; he relinquished his humble calling for that of a missionary, and toiled assiduously to draw men from the fiery bil-lows of perdition.

Quintus Cincinnatus was a plowman, and was invoked to the government and dictatorship of Rome. His labors in the political field were as successful as those upon the soil.

Arsaces was a private mechanic, and was called to found the Parthian Empire. He built up a powerful nation, and erected for himself a mausoleum
of fame, which is indestructible.

Tamerlane, the Conqueror of Asia, was also a mechanic; he rough hewed Bajazet, and carved his way to fortune and glory.

Masaniello, a Neapolitan Fisherman, was raised to the command of fifty thousand men, and gave up fish lines for lines of bayonets, and river seines
for scenes of carnage.

John, of Leyden, in Germany, was a tailor, and rose to the dignity of King. He cut out for himself a bad piece of work however, and afterwards
came to a miserable end. His goose did not fly well.

Zeno, the famous bishop of Constantinople, who had
the largest diocese in that country, was a weaver.
He directed his attention to the habits both of soul
and body.

Stephen Tudiner, a hatter, in Upper Austria, was made General, and commanded sixty thousand of an army. He made hats for others, but preferred for himself a chaplain.

Walmser, a shoemaker, succeeded him in command, but was slain by Count Pappenheim. He converted his awl into a sword, but 'his last state was worse than the first.'

Mr. Edmund, a baker, of Sterling in Scotland, showed such unparalleled bravery in the Swedish
war under that 'thunderbolt of war' Gustavus Adolphus, that he was made a General. A maker of bread might be supposed to know how to rise.

Peter the Great, Emperor of Russia, worked at ship building. He learned the Russian Bear how to manage a boat.

Charles II. of England, was a turner in ivory,
nor could affairs of State divert him from his morning task at the lathe. He turned his mind however to other amusements which tasked his health,
and pared away his reputation.

Louis XIV. of France, was one of the best watchmakers of his reign. He forgot the burdens of power, in following the light foot-steps of time, and escaped the flutterings of parasites, on the pinions of chronometers.

William the Fourth, of England, was a sailor,
and rose from the forecastle to the throne; he managed the ship of State with nautical address, and beat her a considerable way up the harbor of Roform.

Benjamin Franklin was a printer, philosopher
and statesman. He drew lightning from Heaven, and left his name in large Cap's upon the annals of his country. His spirit is among the ***.

George Washington, Andrew Jackson, and William Henry Harrison were farmers. From the pursuit of agriculture they went forth to pursue the enemies of their country, and from the fields of death gathered the 'Golden Immortal.'

Sir Richard Arkwright, who first conceived the idea of spinning cotton by means of machinery, passed the earlier years of his life in pursuing the humble occupation of a barber. His genius proved brighter than his razors.

John Leslie, Professor of Natural Philosophy in Edinburgh, was the son of a poor farmer in Largo, of Scotland. He was employed in the capacity of herdsman. His pencil was a stick and the ground his slate. From being the companion of cattle he became the peer of learned men.

James Ferguson was in his earlier years a shepherd; watched the stars at night like his predecessors of Chaldean, and like them was led by his favorizing planet to the contemplation of the goodness
and magnificence of the works of Deity.

William Gifford was bound out to a shoe-maker,
after having served a number of years in a small conster as cabin boy. Being too poor to purchase stationery, he used to hammer out smoothly as possible bits of leather, on which he traced problems with his awl. In later years his awl pierced the souls of many luckless scribblers.

TREATMENT OF MINISTERS.

It is not my intention to discuss the whole matter of the bearing and deportment of a religious Society in its intercourse with its pastor, but only wish to glance at some little courtesies which a considerate and thoughtful people will ever exercise towards their clergyman, which is not only very encouraging to his heart but has a tendency very decidedly to harmonize and unite what would otherwise grow into antagonistic and discordant elements. I will venture to affirm, that a Society that heartily unites in acts of courtesy, sociality and ocal demonstration of good will towards their pastor, will not soon grow up dissensions and disagreeable divisions in relation to any of its affairs. I apprehend there is little danger of our New England communities treating the clergyman with too much familiarity. Parishioners need not fear that approaching their pastor in a familiar manner, shaking him cordially by the hand and treating him in all social matters as though he was verily an equal will detract from his dignity.
If he is qualified for his office, his good sense will take care that every thing of this nature shall be so conducted as to be, in the highest degree, pleasant and agreeable, without compromising the personal respect due to the clergyman.

I have been led to these general remarks by the late doings of the Universalist Society in Quincy, Mass., of which Br. S. A. Davis is pastor. Early in the present hoary season, the ladies of Br. D.'s Society demonstrated their regard for the pastor and his family by presents of many seasonable and very valuable articles of female clothing. More recently, they appointed a day or rather an evening on which the Society, male and female, proposed to pay their respects to him—precedent to which was an accumulation at Br. D.'s house of things for creature comfort in the shape of barrels of flour,
barrels of apples, buckets of sugar, boxes of raisins, bark bills, silver dollars, etc. They made their pastor and his family guests in their own house,
very much to their own satisfaction, and all enjoyed a season which, as a whole, not only shows

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 28, 1847.

Mr. Editor—The news in your last number, of the recent calamity at the celebrated and extensive gun cotton works, in your village, created intense feelings of sympathy throughout our entire community. Indeed, every one not only evinced a whole-souled disposition to render assistance under the unparalleled circumstances of the case, but all cried aloud in chorus,

"Tis meet that I shall mourn,"

"Flow forth a fresh my tears."

Joining, individually, in the outpourings of these sentiments, and willing to give freely from my own abundance, permit me to express the hope, that ere the din and bustle of life shall have crowded the lamentable catastrophe out of recollection, public charity will have sustained and made good to the unfortunate proprietors their loss of invaluable property, and interruption in a profitable speculation. Nay, let public charity promptly and liberally be afforded to them now, at this ineluctable season of the year—a season no less remarkable for the universal derangement of business, and the heart-rending sufferings of us all, than for the foul conspiracy of sea captains with our national administration against the Republic of Mexico. To accomplish this purpose, donation parties should be given and contributions collected by the philanthropic citizens of this city,—renowned for its benevolence,—and your own immediate vicinity. And, should these laudable means all prove unavailing, then, alas! must the much to be commiserated losers find consolation in their own indefatigable energies to supply the enormous demand for a highly important and useful commodity, petitioning and seeking the while for the divine favor.

"Thou bounteous giver of all good,
Thou art, of all thy gifts, thyself the crown.
Give what thou canst, without thee, we are poor,
And with thee rich, take what thou wilt away."

The belief gains strength that no more meeting-house steeples will be built here for some time to come. The late gale seriously injured those now erected, and considerable apprehension exists that the next blast may prostrate them all to the earth, maiming our fellow citizens, and destroying an incalculable amount of property. Hence, it is presumed, that the subject will soon come before the City Council, who will pass an order for the appointment of steeple inspectors. In that case, a new batch of officers will be created, but none selected whose agility for climbing lightning rods is not well known and approved.

Peace or war with Mexico still agitates the public mind. Many are for peace, and propose an easy and efficacious plan to secure that object. They propose the appointment of Abby Fulson and Parker Pillsbury, as commissioners, to proceed forthwith to Mexico, and expostulate with the natives of that country—quote scripture to them, and assure them, that there is no such declaration in the Holy Bible, as "Cursed be he who keepeth back his sword from blood." That war is not, and never was, the work of the Lord—but of old Satan, who always has been, is, and ever will be, setting christian people at loggerheads with each other, for the acquisition of territory, and of souls to his infernal kingdom. As the Mexicans are an intelligent and pious people, these measures will be successful, providing our own Government incurs all the expenses of the war, withdraws its troops from Mexico, and its fleet from the blockade of her ports.

Others, however, more sanguinary, are for the vigorous prosecution of hostilities. They propose that the invulnerable Captain Dolebeor of Suffolk County (so designated in contradistinction to a son of Esculapius of that name) be sent against the enemy astraddle a mad bull, with twenty tin boxes of gun cotton, tied to its tail, swearing vociferously, shaking his fists, and,

"Fighting the wild air with a sonorous clatter, Till reason pops out to ask what's the matter."
Sublime spectacle! gallant achievement! redoubtable Captain! thus to conquer a peace, and annex the whole of Mexico to our glorious Union.

These differences of opinion among the people of this city to obtain a peace by opposite methods, has induced the Legislature, now in session to take the subject matter under consideration for adjustment. In the House of Representatives a resolution designed as a feeler was offered recently, granting the sum of twenty thousand dollars from the State Treasury to the troops now being raised here for the war, by authority of the Secretary of war, and consent of Governor Briggs. At the time of presentation several members spoke severely in opposition to it, and the measures of the general government for carrying on the war. Many of them, nevertheless, before closing, "shifted their trumpet and took snuff;" while others who were more cautious in all their remarks gave evidence of their thoughts, that,

"They dared do all that may come short of hanging,
Who dares do more—may do it."

Among the latter, perhaps may be classed the Hon. Mr. Keyes, the editor of an obscure hebdomad, printed on brown paper, and Bob to the Wool-party Kite. Opposed to the growth and manufacture of cotton, he is as warmly in favor of negro wool on the parent tree. He makes the question in party politics, cotton or wool, and "would cut off his right hand before he would hold it up in favor of any proposition to afford any aid whatever to cotton. He is falsely styled a whig in politics, and under an erroneous impression that his paper is Whig, its continuance is permitted. As a scribbler, the brass and impudence contained weekly in the seven by nine sheet, is the standard by which he should be judged—as a debater, by his uncorking of bottled sound and fury, signifying nothing.

The principal item of news to day is that Mr. Collector Morton's visit to Washington is connected with certain communications lately published in your columns, and that on his return an important change will probably be made in the office under his patronage in your district. What's the trouble? Yours Spike.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 27, 1847.

FRIEND GREEN—The remarks of 'D.' in the Patriot of the 23d inst., in reference to the 'Boston whig convention, or in other words the Legislature,' do not perhaps, deserve a reply, especially from one who is unacquainted with newspaper controversy or criticism, but flatters himself possessed of a 'sprinkling' of common sense.

First, as it would perhaps be gratifying to some of your readers to know who our friend 'D.' is, I will inform them, he is the noted Dr. Dolebeor, a brother of the celebrated Captain of that name.

The Dr. informs us that the Legislature contains a 'small sprinkling of democracy in one branch, and none in the other.' Why, Dr., these are facts no one has or will dispute. And if I were to venture a prediction without the fear of the hangman, I would say, there would not be a 'sprinkling' or even a homeopathic shadow of democracy in the Legislature of Massachusetts in 1848, notwithstanding the Dr. asserts he will 'hurl the whigs' from the throne of power in November next." Do you know, Dr., that many a man has been convicted for the stupidity of his council, and I fear you and your brother, the Captain, are in a fair way to suffer the same fate.

The Dr. next informs us that Col. Cushing edited the Legislature with one of his 'rich, patriotic and eloquent speeches,' which few can equal, none surpass. We trust, Dr., that the gallant Col. will be spared to return from the wars, exhibit his scars and condescend to deliver a course of lectures in his 'rich, patriotic and eloquent style,' describing in glowing terms the manner in which he struck terror, and how freely the blood ran from the hearts of his brothers of a sister republic, and edify us by the many cold blooded murders, low intrigues, cruelty, persecution and butchery which marked the course of his Falstaff like regiment, and tell us how natural, cool, and composed he looked on all this blood and carnage. Also, describe his military experience and courage, and give us one of his patriotic accounts of his revels in the 'Halls of the Montezumas.'

The Dr. and his brother advise that a 'mass convention be held, put forth for our standard bearers, men who will be true as steel to democratic principles,' (here the Dr. very politely puts in a proviso) 'if elected.' Why Dr. I should as soon think of finding a Christian in his Satanic Majesty's domains, as to find an honest office seeker in the loco foco ranks.

You need not expect to bring about this dethroning so suddenly, Dr. What confidence can the people of Massachusetts place in loco foco misrule, corruption and bribery? Where suspicion has once been sown, confidence is a plant of slow growth.

Need I inform such sensible and sound politicians as the Dr. and Captain suppose themselves to be, that Massachusetts is a whig State and will continue to be, as she has always been, 'faithful and true.'

Again the Dr. and his brother recommend to their 'fellow democrats, from one end of the State to the other, to beware, and be sure hereafter, in their selection of candidates, to select men who are democrats in practice, as well as in theory.' Will you be kind enough, friend D. to inform us in your next, what mode your 'fellow democrats' must adopt to ascertain if their candidates are thoroughbred loco focos, dyed in the wool, or not. It appears by your own evidence, and the Captain's, that you have been 'awfully, most awfully' cheated. Can you, friend D., or the 'Captain' deny but what you both have given your votes for the last ten or fifteen years to the very man you so ungenerously attack. I ask, has he not been your idol; have you not both received good fat offices at his hand? Facts are stubborn things, and now for the first time you have broken ground in a series of attacks on your old leader. Oh D., tell it not in Gath.

Yours in haste,
JONATHAN D. DOLEBEOR,
No kin to the Dr. or Captain.

A claim has been made upon the National Government for a million of dollars by the builders of the Texan navy.

In Pennsylvania, in the last thirty years, one hundred and forty-eight divorces have been granted, and of this number, forty in the last two years.

The Directors of the New Jersey Railroad, from New York to Philadelphia, have determined, it is said, unanimously, that in making a new contract for carrying the mail, the Sabbath shall be exempted, and that the road shall not be used for any purpose on that day.

The Supreme Court of the United States have recently given an opinion, that though a man may be released from debt under the insolvent law of his own State, he is not thereby released from a debt contracted in another State.

It is stated that the German who has had the principal care of the manufacture of Colt's revolving pistols, has suddenly left for Mexico—bribed to transfer his skill to that country, it is supposed.

Amos Lawrence of Boston has offered to give Twenty Thousand Dollars to found a Literary Institution in Wisconsin Territory, provided a like amount be raised in that territory.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

FALL RIVER RAILROAD. A proposal has been started for the extension of the Fall River Railroad through Central Dorchester, to Boston.

We understand that a strong interest in this project is manifested in Randolph and along the line of the proposed Road. We learn, however, that a sufficient amount has been subscribed to ensure the completion of the Branch Roads already chartered from the Old Colony Road to the Quincy Quarries and to Milton and Dorchester. The construction of these roads will operate with two fold advantage to the Old Colony Road, by securing the travel from those sections and ensuring the Fall River Road to the Old Colony as a perpetual Branch. We notice that a meeting of citizens of Randolph is to be held next Monday for the furtherance of the project of the Independent Route. Why this should be, we cannot well understand. Randolph and the Fall River Road are now well and sufficiently accommodated over the track of the Old Colony Road. The Fall River Road was originally intended as a permanent and perpetual Branch to the Old Colony Road; for these ends it was chartered; the Branch roads about to be constructed from the Old Colony to different points on the line of the proposed Independent Route, will sufficiently accommodate the travel of those sections and render the scheme of the Independent Route entirely impracticable.

CONGRESSIONAL. On Tuesday, Jan. 19th, in the Senate, the Committee reported a grant of three million dollars to the President for putting an end to the war. The bill granting land to soldiers was debated. In the House, the Adjutant General reported the number of volunteers, terms of service, etc. The bill to increase the pay of soldiers was referred. Wednesday, 20th, the bill to increase the army was debated in the Senate. Bills for improvement of rivers, and purchasing Jefferson's manuscripts, were reported in the House. Thursday, 21st, in the Senate, the army bill was again debated. The House was engaged on business of little public interest. Friday, 22d, a resolution was offered in the Senate, declaring a speedy and honorable peace with Mexico desirable; a call was made on the President for a statement of the difficulty between Mr. Wise and the government of Brazil. In the House, a resolution was offered declaring that the war with Mexico is not waged for conquest or acquisition of territory, and this government is ready to make peace by adjusting the boundary and due acknowledgment of debt due from Mexico to our citizens. This resolution was not received. A great number of private bills were passed. The Senate did not sit on Saturday. The House passed the Texan Post Road bill. A variety of unimportant business came before that body. Monday, Jan. 25th, the Treasury Note bill was under debate in the Senate. Some excitement occurred in the House, caused by the statement that the Secretary of the Treasury refused to answer certain enquiries concerning secret inspectors of customs. The bill increasing pay of volunteers was discussed. Tuesday, 26th, the Senate took up the Treasury note bill, several amendments were adopted and the bill ordered to be engrossed. The House debated the bill for increasing the pay of volunteers at considerable length. Wednesday, 27th, the Senate passed the Treasury Note bill, forty two to two. The Army Bill was under debate. In the House, the President communicated certain information from the War, Treasury and Navy Departments. A resolution was passed, ordering gold and silver medals for the persons who rescued the crew of the Somers. Bill to increase the pay of volunteers and regulars, and give them bounty lands, was passed.

NEWS FROM EUROPE. The steamer Hibernia arrived at Boston on Monday last, with Liverpool papers to the 5th inst. The President's Message is soundly berated by the whole English press. The grain trade has been in an animated and sometimes exciting position. There is little prospect of prices losing for a time. Cotton has advanced and the market is firm. The money market is in a healthy condition. A very large quantity of specie was brought over in the Hibernia. The famine in the highlands of Scotland appears to be without material alleviation. In Ireland the distress is not so great; it is believed that, had it not been for the temperance movements of the last few years one half of Ireland would now be in a state of absolute starvation.

SOAP FOR WHITE CLOTHES. One gallon good soft soap, half a gallon water, one ounce sal soda, one gill spirits turpentine. Mix cold—let it heat gently to a boil; then take it off cool, stirring frequently until it becomes hard.

A writer in the Worcester (Mass.) Spy, gives as the result of his observation, the commission of two hundred and two suicides during the last year—one hundred and fifty-one males, fifty-one females. Of this number, thirty-eight was by cutting the throat, fifty-one hanging, twenty-nine shooting, twenty-five drowning, twenty-two poison, ten jumping from a height, six under railroad cars, sixteen unknown.

GENERAL COURT. The vote has been taken relative to an appropriation of twenty thousand dollars in aid of the Massachusetts volunteers. One hundred and ninety members voted against the grant and forty-seven in its favor.

A bill has been reported and ordered to a second reading establishing the standard weight of the bushel of potatoes at sixty one pounds.

The Military Committee reported a series of resolutions as substitutes for those formerly offered, granting the thanks of the Legislature to Gen. Taylor which were ordered to a second reading, and to be printed. They denounce the war but thank the General and the army.

An order was passed directing the Committee on Mercantile Affairs and Insurance to consider the expediency of placing the same restrictions on the sale of "explosive cotton," as are now required in regard to gunpowder.

An order has passed directing the Committee on Education to consider the expediency of passing a law compelling parents and guardians in this Commonwealth to instruct or cause to be instructed all children under their care, in such branches of common school learning as will fit them to transact the ordinary business of life.

LAGRANGE HOUSE, BOSTON. This long-established public house has lately been leased by Mr. Drew, whose experience for many years as a landlord in the city, qualifies him to render to patrons all that attention which they can justly ask. Many of our townsmen have made this house their stopping place while it was under the charge of that most popular of "mine hosts," Mr. Bryant, and we can assure them that Mr. Drew is in every respect worthy and well qualified to succeed such a good caterer, and their experience will prove our statements to be correct.

CHINESE MUSEUM. The last chance for visiting this establishment in Boston, must be improved during the ensuing week, as it will positively be closed on the 6th of February. The exhibition is one of rare interest and intrinsic merit, and is well worth the time and money spent in its examination. No one should neglect the present opportunity.

VIRGINIA SENATOR. John M. Mason of Frederic County, has been elected by the Legislature of Virginia, United States Senator to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. Mr. Pennybacker. Mr. M. is a democrat and was chosen on the ninth ballot.

FIRE IN DEDHAM. A barn belonging to Mr. J. F. Richards, in Dedham village, was destroyed by fire, about one o'clock on Saturday morning last, together with ten tons of hay, three cows, two oxen, and two horses. Supposed to have been set on fire.

LEGAL TENDER. The following list of gold and silver coins, comprising what are a legal tender under the laws of Congress, is from Thompson's Bank Note Reporter. Postmasters and Subtreasurers must take these coins, when offered, except in cases of light weight.

Sovereigns,	4.43
Half Sovereigns,	2.21

Double do. (40c),	7.66
Doublons,	15.00
Shares, if good weight, in proportion.
Spanish Dollars,	1.00
Mexican Dollars,	1.00
Five-franc pieces,	.93
Also, Bolivian and Peruvian Dollars, if good weight,	1.00

NEW CURE FOR LOVE. A romantic incident occurred in one of the Islands of Scotland, which became the subject of judicial investigation. A ploughman became deeply enamored with the charms of a milk maid, of course rosy and fair, of a wealthy farmer. His addresses were rejected, and the disappointed swain, full of melancholy and vengeance, procured a strong cord, went out to the barn, and tied all the cows' tails together.

MILITARY. Colonel William H. Spooner having resigned the command of the first brigade, first division, of Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Col. Andrew Chase, Jr. of the fifth regiment of artillery, has been appointed in his place. Major C. Austin Coolidge, having resigned the place of Brigade Major and Inspector of the first Brigade, Quartermaster N. A. M. Dudley, of the fifth regiment of artillery, has been appointed Inspector pro tem.

SURGICAL. Dr. Gleason of Braintree, assisted by Drs. Gay and Goddard of this town, this week successfully performed a severe and critical operation for osteosarcoma. The disease was semi-malignant in its character, and of rare occurrence. The patient belongs to Braintree and is doing well.

FIRE. The alarm of fire about eleven o'clock on Thursday last came from Roxbury. The turpentine works of Mr. Thomas Simmons, were totally destroyed—being the second time within a year.

AID AND SUPPORT. The Senate of Rhode Island, have concurred in the appropriation of twenty-five hundred dollars toward the support of the company recruiting in the city of Providence for the United States Army. The vote was 13 to 8.

MEXICAN FINANCES. In a long report of a select committee of the Congress, appointed to consider the ways and means of prosecuting the war, the monthly expenditures of the army under Santa Anna are estimated at $368,789 and those of the garrison at Vera Cruz at $80,000 per month. The whole extraordinary expenses of the war, for six months, are estimated at $3,600,000.

PARDONED. The Governor of New York (John Young) has pardoned all the persons sent to State Prison for their participation in the anti-republican disturbances in that State.

One of the largest specimens of the swine kind has lately been for sale in Boston. The hog weighed when dressed 856 pounds.

A postmaster in the interior of Pennsylvania recently had judgment given against him for the price of a subscription of several years to a distant newspaper, on the plea that he had not given sufficient legal notice to the publisher to stop it, and had continued to receive the numbers for several years and sold them for the postage.

Upon a groundless suspicion a posse of watchmen entered a boarding-house, in Brooklyn (N. Y.) and charged a young man who was boarding there with having a trunk full of stolen goods. The mother was very much alarmed by the confusion of the scene, and consequently came to her death in about two hours, as is supposed, from fright, and it finally turned out that the chest was full of tools.

Hon. Henry A. Wise, United States Minister at Rio Janeiro, has written to the Patent Office a valuable letter, published in the Union, on topics of much agricultural interest. He recommends the transplanting of many Brazilian plants, especially of the Angola grass.

Some excitement exists in the city of Roxbury, caused by a general poisoning of dogs to the number of about twenty. In most cases they are valuable watch dogs, attached to stables and other places, since the late incendiary attempt in that city; and from this it is inferred, that a second systematic attempt is soon to be made by some miscreants to burn the city.

A slave at Charleston (S. C.) has been tried for the murder of another slave and acquitted. The acquittal was put on the ground, distinctly, that the fatal blows were struck by the order of his mistress and that in such case a slave is not responsible for the circumstances.

The North Carolina Legislature have appropriated $10,000 to the equipment and support of volunteers for the Mexican war.

The remains of Lieutenant C. W. Morris have been brought to his late residence in Charlestown, (Mass.) They will be entombed at Mount Auburn with military honors.

It is said that Monroe Edwards, now in New York Sing Sing prison for forgery, is in the last stage of consumption, and that he cannot live many weeks.

A black man and a white girl have lately run off from North Adams, (Mass.) and got married. The variety of tastes is truly wonderful!

The Irish laborers of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, have during the past year, sent to their suffering countrymen at home, one million, one thousand, six hundred and fifty dollars. Actions speak louder than words.

Since the 28th of December, 28,649 shells have been despatched from New York to the seat of war in Mexico. These shells cost the Government $387 1-2 each, making the sum of $110,571 63.

The quantity of rain and melted snow during the past year has been less than in any other year of the last ten.

The Hon. Caleb Cushing of Newburyport, has accepted the command of the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, and has resigned his seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. Capt. Isaac H. Wright is Lieutenant Colonel, and Capt. E. W. Abbott, Major.

By a recent arrival news has been received from Mexico—that Santa Anna had sent in an express stating that the American army was pressing upon him in great force, and that eight million dollars must be raised for the army in some way. This was understood as a threat of forcible seizure of church property, and the clergy declared that they would resist the spoliation. Santa Anna declared the money must be raised immediately or the country is lost.

All the Representatives in Congress from this State, voted against the bill to increase the military force of the United States, except John Quincy Adams, who was not present.

NOTICES.

Town House Ball.

The gentlemen of Quincy, both married and single, who are in favor of having a Ball in the Town House, are requested to meet at the Hancock House on next MONDAY EVENING, Feb. 1st, to make the necessary arrangements.

The members of the Social Singing Society are requested to meet at the Lyceum Room, TOMORROW EVENING, at half past six o'clock. And all others who feel an interest in the pleasing exercise of Church Music, are invited to meet with us. The ladies are most respectfully invited. All who have the Choral are requested to bring them.

JOSEPH FIELD, Secretary.

A public debating Temperance Meeting will be held in the Temperance Reading Room, THIS EVENING, at half past six o'clock.

QUESTION FOR DISCUSSION.

Which is the greatest evil, to manufacture, to sell, or to drink ardent spirits?
How far is it consistent for temperance people to have intercourse or dealings with the rumrunner?
The public are invited to attend.

JAMES M. WADE, Secretary.

The Selection of Quincy give notice to persons having business with the Board, that they will be in session at their Room in the Town House, on the LAST SATURDAY in each month, until further notice.

A VOICE FROM VERMONT.

Tunbridge, Orange Co., Vt.,
Nov. 25, 1845.

Mr. Seth W. Fowle:
Dear Sir—I hereby certify that one year ago last June, I was violently attacked with a cold and cough, with a lame side and stomach, and was not free from cough during that summer. In December following my cough increased to an alarming extent, so that during that winter I lost about thirty-five pounds of flesh, and physicians with the most skillful advice, could give me no relief. It was thought by all that I should never recover. As my good fortune would have it, in March following, after suffering exceedingly through the winter, I heard of the beneficial effects of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, by way of a friend who had received the greatest benefit by the use of the article, and was inclined by him to make a trial of it myself, and no words can express my obligations to that friend for thus recommending this article to me, and at the critical moment he did, for I had not taken up one bottle before I was completely cured, and from that day to this have not been troubled with a cough. I can cheerfully recommend it to all, as being a remedy of great value, hoping others may be induced to use it, and thus become convinced of its merits, and perhaps saved from the fatal grasp of consumption.

POETRY.

THE WIFE TO HER HUSBAND.

The following beautiful lines by a Quakeress of Philadelphia, were written in the hope of reclaiming her husband from tavern haunts, and idle company, to which he had become addicted. She desired to bring him back to a sense of duty—and succeeded—where harsh words would have been of no avail: You took me, William, when a girl, unto your home and heart.

To bear, in all your after fate, a fond and faithful part; And tell me, have I ever tried that duty to forego, Or pined there was no joy for me when you were sunk in woe?

No; I would rather share your test than any other's glee; For though you're nothing to the world, you're ALL THE WORLD TO ME.

You make a palace of my shed, this rough hewn bench a throne;

There's sun-light for me in your smiles, and music in your tone.

I look upon you when you sleep—my eyes with tears grow dim;

I cry, "Oh, Parent of the poor, look down from Heaven on him;

Behold him toil from day to day, exhausting strength and soul;

O look with mercy on him, Lord, for thou canst make him whole!"

And when at last relieving sleep has on my eyelids smil'd,

How oft are they forbade to close in slumber, by our child,

I take the little murmur that spoils my span of rest, And feel it is a part of thee, I'll upon my breast.

There's only one return I crave, I may not need it long,

And it may soothe thee when I'm where the wretched feel no wrong;

I ask not for a kinder tone, for thou wert ever kind;

I ask not for less frugal fare, my fare I do not mind;

I ask not for attire more gay, if such as I have got Suffice to make me fair to thee—for more I murmur not.

But I would ask more share of hours that you on clubs bestow;

Of knowledge, which you praise so much, might I not something know?

Subtract from meetings amongst men each eve an hour for me,

Make me companion of your soul, as I may safely be, If you will read, I'll sit and work; I then think when you're away,

Less tedious I shall find the time, dear William, of your stay.

A meet companion so I'll be, for even your studious hours,

And teacher of those little ones you call your cottage flowers;

And if we be not rich and great, we may be wise and kind,

And as my heart can warm your heart, so may my mind your mind.

THINGS I NEVER KNEW.

A married man I do not know,

Who's free from noise and strife,

I single men I do not know,

Who would not have a wife.

A woman I have never known,

Who would not married be,

A woman I have never known,

Who married was free.

I never knew an aged man,

Who truly wished to die,

I never knew a youthful man,

Who never breathed a sigh.

I never knew an idle man,

Whom Satan could not hire,

I never knew a trading man,

Who never proved a liar.

I never knew a witty man,

Who ever wealthy was,

I never knew a simple man,

But meddled with the laws.

I never knew a singing man,

Who did not relish wine,

I never knew a rhyming man,

Who ne'er went out to dine.

A homely maid I never knew,

Who so herself believed,

A handsome maid I never knew,

Who could not be deceived.

ANECDOTES.

A fashionable lady engaged a foot boy and gave special direction, that two days in the week all inquiries respecting her should be replied to by "not at home." The boy turned out a thief and a tippler, so that before the term, she announced to him he must quit his situation. On this he applied to her for a character, which she refused, on the ground of the impossibility of saving anything in his favor. "Well, lady," quoth the urchin, "that's too bad, many a boy I've told to please you—you might surely tell one to please me."

"Will you take a pear, sir?" said a lady, as she presented a couple of luscious specimens, made doubly tempting by the whiteness of the hand in which they were held. "Sir, will you except a pear?" "Not for the world, miss," replied the happy fellow whom she had chosen to honor. "And why not, sir?" "Because if I take the pear, fair lady, I should leave thee none." He, however, took one as he spoke, lest the pun should literally cost him the pear.

"Who is that gentleman walking with Miss Flet?" said a wag to his companion, as they sauntered along the street. "Oh," replied the other, "that is a spark which she has struck."

"Will you have me, Sarah?" said a young man to a modest girl. "No, John," said the girl, "but you may have me if you will."

A chap who married a termagant, just before dying requested a friend to have the following inscription put upon his tomb—"Slain by a jaw-bone."

MISCELLANY.

THE MANTUAMAKER'S DAUGHTER.

"What an angel!—Who can she be?" exclaimed and interrogated Henry Sydney, in the same breath, as a plain, yet very neatly dressed girl, with a light and agile step, crossed the street before him, and entered a small, white house, standing on the suburbs of Baltimore.

"Who—the girl going into the hotel on our right?" inquired his companion, a lady splendidly attired in the height of the fashion, and mounted on a spirited steed, that seemed to spurn the earth on which he trampled.

"The same," replied Sydney; "if by the term hotel you mean that neat little cottage, with its vine trellised window, which so aptly conveys to one's mind the idea that it is the abode of peace and happiness, vividly at variance with the turmoil and discontent of the world without."

"Why, it's Eleanor Parsons, our mantuamaker's daughter, who well might turn the heads of all our young men at Major Jeffries' ball last May, by her uncouth manner, and her ignorance of the forms of society, to conceal which she declined dancing more than once or twice during the night, all of which they were short-sighted enough to mistake for simplicity and coyness, said Mary Hansley, with a sneer of derision, at the same time stealing a glance at Henry's countenance, to see how he relished the disappointment.

"She is certainly the most perfect creature I ever beheld," exclaimed Sydney. "Will you not give her a bid to your party on Tuesday? The interest which Eleanor Parsons' beauty had awakened in his breast, growing no ways lukewarm by ascertaining the obscure station which she occupied.

"What, I ask Eleanor Parsons to a party of mine?" exclaimed Miss Hansley, piqued at the affront which Henry—carried away by the enthusiasm of the moment, had inadvertently given. "Catch me associating with a mantuamaker's daughter. What would the Misses Stanley's and Wilbert's say of me?"

"What did they say of Maj. Jeffries' daughter?" asked Henry Sydney.

"Miss Jeffries can do as she pleases, but 'birds of a feather should flock together,' is my motto," said Mary Hansley, and she gave her head a haughty toss, that savored but little of taking a mantuamaker's daughter by the hand and promoting her to advancement in the world.

Henry Sydney bit his lip to repress the tart reply that was at his tongue's end and a strict silence was thenceforth observed till they arrived at Mr. Hansley's door, when he instead of going in to while away the remainder of the evening, as was his wont on such occasions, took a formal leave of Miss Hansley, and bent his steps toward his boarding house.

Notwithstanding his endeavors to dismiss the mantuamaker's daughter from his mind, her image still continued to haunt him through the night; if he slumbered a moment, her buoyant step, her exquisitely moulded foot and sylph-like form were ever present in his dreams; if he opened his eyes, the snowy folds of the bed curtain, touched by the snowman's wand of his fevered imagination gradually disappeared, and in their stead, her countenance, beaming with the glow of health and rich expression of innocence, floated before his vision.

Having lost his mother during childhood, and being an only child, Henry Sydney, at the death of his father—who was once extensively engaged in the commercial business, but by the loss of two or three large merchant ships, which went to the bottom during a storm at sea, with their valuable cargoes and large amount of specie,—had rendered him in a manner bankrupt—found himself the heir to five thousand dollars, the remnant of his father's well earned and once ample fortune. This capital he invested in the mercantile business, and by dint of industry, business-like habits, and an extraordinary run of good luck, had risen to eminence, and was well to do in the world, as regarded pecuniary matters. He was now about twenty-five years of age, tall, well-made, and rather handsome than otherwise. He had for sometime had serious thoughts of taking to himself a wife, but not as yet, mid all the gay scenes of pleasure and fashion which he frequented, had he met with a girl with whom he would have been willing to have ventured into the indissoluble bonds of marriage. A twelve months' intimate acquaintance with Mary Hansley—whom he first met at a fashionable tea-party, and with whose lively flow of spirits, rather than her personal attractions, he had been charmed—had taught him that she would make a gay and airy butterfly for a ball room, but a dull and monotonous fire-side companion. It was not for such a girl as that, the heart of Henry Sydney yearned; it was for one of those gentler beings, whose kindly influence manifests itself on every object around her who in the tranquil retirement of her family, can calmly perform the duties which a married state necessarily imposes upon her, without sighing for the pleasures of a ball room, and who, on her husband's return at night, after the labors of the day are over, can welcome him with a smile, which amply requites him for the fatigue he has undergone and at once dissipate the gloom upon his countenance, if, perchance, an unexpected difficulty in business may have caused it to gather there.

Tuesday night rolled round. Mary Hansley, having completed her toilet, and cast a lingering glance in the looking glass to convince herself that she should now captivate Henry Sydney, descended into the drawing-room to receive the company, who began to pour in at an early hour. By nine o'clock the general assembly of those invited had assembled. Mary Hansley who anticipated a delightful time of it, experienced a sudden depression of the spirits as casting her eye around the room she detected the absence of Henry Sydney; but consoling herself with the idea that he would certainly be there by ten, she again yielded herself up to the delights of the party. Ten o'clock came, and Henry Sydney was still an absentee.

"Where can he be?" she anxiously inquired of herself.

Eleven o'clock came, without his being there; she could now neither dance nor converse with her accustomed gaiety, notwithstanding she was surrounded by the fashionable, the handsome, and the talented. There was a void, which the presence of Henry Sydney alone could supply. The hour for the breaking up of the party at length arrived, and crest-fallen, she gladly retreated to the solitude of her own chamber, where after giving vent to her feelings in a passionate flood of tears, she repeatedly asked herself what could have detained him. Why should he have foregone his share of the pleasures of the night? The truth of it was, Henry Sydney had that night, of all others, framed an excuse for paying the widow Parsons a visit.

He started a little after night-fall, and, having arrived at the door, tapped gently with his cane. A slight noise from within reached him—the door was opened—and he was asked in by a middle aged lady, of a dignified and imposing appearance. Her countenance, which bore the rigid impression of care, rather than time, still retained traces of personal beauty. The usual preliminaries of a self introduction, (in which he passed himself off as the head clerk of an extensive dry-goods store, and wished some linen made up,) being over, he seated himself and entered into conversation with Mrs. Parsons whom he found not only a sensible and well-informed woman, perfectly 'at home' on subjects to which he expected to find her an utter stranger, but possessed of a highly cultivated mind, and refined yet distant manners, which told that she had once moved in a higher sphere. So charmed was he with the company of Mrs. Parsons, that he prolonged his stay till a late hour, and then reluctantly took his departure, having once, and once only caught a look at Eleanor Parsons, through the half open door as she diligently plied her sewing in an adjoining room.

Henry Sydney, the next day, inquired into the history of Eleanor Parsons, and learned from an intelligent old banker, that her father was formerly one of the most opulent merchants of Baltimore, but by a series of misfortunes, had been suddenly reduced from a state of affluence to penury—that he soon after sunk into an early grave—and that his widow and daughter had about two years since, removed to the house which they now occupied, and had, by close application to their needles, in pursuance of the art of mantuamaking, which Eleanor's father, when in affluence, had insisted on her acquiring, by lessons given at home, gained an honest livelihood.

At the end of a week, Henry Sydney paid Mrs. Parsons a second visit, which he called for a third and that for a fourth, and so on—each succeeding visit being repeated at short intervals; till, at length, three or four times a week he might be found seated in Mrs. Parsons' little parlor, which wore an air of peculiar neatness and comfort, enjoying her's and her daughter's company. Eleanor Parsons, who was at first shy and silent, as the frequency of Henry's visits placed them on a more familiar footing, gradually threw aside her reserve, and appeared in her true character. Then it was that he had an opportunity afforded him of remarking how grossly misrepresented she had been by Mary Hansley, and how far she excelled the latter, not only in real simplicity and inborn gracefulness, but also in intellectual acquirements; for, previous to her father's bankruptcy, she had been three years an inmate of one of the first academies in the State, and since being reduced to such narrow circumstances, had by means of her own industry, scraped together quite a collection of books, with which she allowed no opportunity of improving herself to escape her. Once after repeated solicitations, he prevailed on her to sing, and as he listened in a rapture to her voice, the thrilling tones of which seemed to vibrate along his heart-strings, he was convinced how utterly worthless were Mary Hansley's brilliant array of piano tunes, when compared with that one simple song, teeming with pathos and sentiment.

As her character more fully developed itself, and Henry Sydney with a practiced eye, discovered her deep and fervent affection for her mother, her great deference and prompt compliance with her mandate, and her proficiency in those little household matters which it behooves every female to have a knowledge of, but which too many pride themselves on being ignorant of, he becomes thoroughly confirmed in the opinion that Eleanor Parsons was all that he could desire in a partner for life. But there yet might be an insuperable barrier to the store of imaginary happiness he had hoarded up, and he trembled at the very idea, as he put to himself the question—"Does she love me?"

For more than four months he had regularly continued to visit Miss Parsons and as yet had not received the slightest acknowledgment that his love was reciprocated by Eleanor, but more than once, he thought he had detected the blush painting on her cheek on his entrance, and a quivering of the voice, a slight incoherence in her answers when he addressed her, and hope whispered away in despair; he proposed and was accepted.

"I wonder where Henry Sydney could have kept himself late? I haven't set eyes on him for a month, at least," said Mary Hansley to her mother, as she drew her chair to the window, to look over the morning paper, about six months after Henry had first commenced his visits to Miss Parsons.

"Why they say he is almost beside himself about that pert husky, Eleanor Parsons," replied Mrs. Hansley.

"Well I do think that these mantuamaker's daughters, and their like, take the lead! Why there is Susan Darnley, the old milliner's daughter, who is not worth a copper, that married Dr. McPherson, last winter, who was worth not less than thirty thousand dollars—who would have thought, said Miss Hansley.

"Ah, there's no telling to what extremes their impudence will at length carry them. As for me, I'm clear for putting them down at once, chimed in Mrs. Hansley, with a knowing shake of the head.

Mary Hansley gazed abstractedly out at the window for some moments, and then suddenly resumed.

"Well I am glad of it. It served her perfectly right, for of course he intends to—"

The rash imputation was cut short by the following paragraph, which caught her eye as she glanced mechanically over the paper.

Married—On the 18th, by the Rev. Mr. Daniel, Mr. Henry Sydney to Miss Eleanor Parsons, all of this city.

She could scarcely credit her own eyes but there it was in too glaring print for her to be mistaken. She was completely thunderstruck.

CONTENTMENT.

This jewel is not so easily obtained as dreaming fancy imagines. Many amuse themselves with the notion that if they had a snug little farm, a smart and pretty wife and several rosy children, they could set down contentedly, and live so independent! The poor man thinks that if he lived in a large house, with servants ready at his beck, solely to loll upon, and roast pigs and geese for dinner, he should be as happy as the day is long. The weary mariner, as he wraps his wet watch-cloak about him, and listens to the whistling midnight blast, imagines a snug cottage in some beautiful romantic spot—a warm hearth—a plenty of wine and a plenty of friends. He envies the land-lubber who lives at his ease on shore; and thinks himself the most wretched wight in creation. The editor, as he ploughs his head with his fingers in order to produce a crop of ideas against the harvesting of his devil, wonders that he of all men, should be thus sorely harassed, and thinks that if he owned a romantic seat in the country, his days would glide calmly and sweetly by—that perpetual serenity would sit upon his now wrinkled brow, and he would, at length, slide into his grave as easily as an oyster goes down the throat of a town-crier. But in making these calculations, we neglect to count the cost. We look at the bright side and put the dark one wholly out of the question. That there will arise perplexities and difficulties in every situation is so true, that we fear no objection to this part of our argument. The mind is to be satisfied, and it is to be amused and entertained. The man who is harassed with business, or whose sinews are continually stretched with labor, naturally seeks rest; and in a quiet and calm course of life, rest may be found. But we cannot live upon rest. The weary man desires sleep, but we may get tired of sleeping. He cheerfully leaves his pillow when the voice of the morning is heard at his window, when the carroll-

ing of birds ring beneath his casement, and the golden beams of the early sun bathe the mountain tops in glory.

The most wearisome thing in nature is too much rest. But admitting that both mind and body should be fully employed in this utopian paradise which the weary man so much desires will the employment be of the right kind? Will the excitement to which he has been accustomed be kept up? Experience says that unless the mind is kept on a stretch, a brood of little troubles and inward vexations will arise. Cut down the great tree of care and how many young sprouts will spring up from its roots! Paul Jones left the sea for a while, and even the stirring duties of a hotel-keeper were found too quiet and tame for his constitution; and he again betook himself to the ocean. He fought his memorable battle in the Bon Homme Richard to dissipate his ennui and cure his hypochondriacal feelings. Occasionally a Nantucket captain, being determined to enjoy life, packs up his traps and goes into the country. Beside his plough and his hoe he misses the dashing of the ocean surge, the invigorating breezes of the open sea, and the delightful dread of being swallowed by a whale. He leaves his plough in the furrow—sells off his farm all standing, and straightway packs back to the isle of sand and shells in search of a 'voige.' He must be a rare sample of humanity, who can sit down quietly with the determined purpose of enjoying himself, and find his expectations realized. The mind grows pregnant in solitude, and labors to discharge its burthen. The only cure that we know of, is to 'push along, and keep moving.'

GOOD REASONING. Some years ago, a lady noticing a neighbor of hers was not in her seat at church on a Sabbath, called, on her return home, to inquire what should detain so punctual an attendant. On entering the house, she found the family busy at work. She seemed surprised when her friend addressed her, 'Why, la! where have you been to-day, dressed out in your Sabbath-day clothes?' 'To meeting,' 'Why, what day is it?' 'Sabbath-day,' 'Sabbath-day! Well I did not know it, for my husband has got so darn'd stingy he won't take the papers now, and we know nothing. Well, who preached?' 'Mr. —.' 'And what did he preach about?' 'It was on the death of our Savior,' 'Why, is he dead? well, well, all Boston might be dead and we know nothing of it—it won't do, we must have the newspapers again, for every thing goes wrong without the papers,—Bill has almost lost his reading, and Poll has got quite mopey because she has no poetry and pretty stories to read. Well if we have to take a cart load of onions and potatoes to market, I am resolved to have a newspaper.'

DOMESTIC HABITS OF MILTON. Milton rose at four in the morning during summer, and five in winter. He wore almost invariably a dress of coarse grey cloth, studied till noon, dined frugally, walked with a guide, and in the evening sung, accompanying himself on some instrument. He understood harmony, and had a fine voice. He for a long time addicted himself to the practice of fencing. To judge by Paradise Lost, he must have been passionately fond of music and the perfume of flowers. He supped off five or six olives and a little water, retired to rest at nine, and composed at night in bed. When he had made some verses he sung, and dictated to his wife or daughters. On sunny days he sat on a bench at his door.

"BARNEY LEAVE THE GIRLS ALONE. It is affirmed that this musical bagatelle, owes its origin to the kiss publicly bestowed on the late Commodore Barney, by the beautiful Queen of France, on the occasion of his visit to Paris, after his gallant exploits at sea, in the war of the Revolution. The maids of honor were all so eager to follow the gracious example of the Queen, that it is said, the young American became thenceforth, an object of envy and dislike to all the beau monde at Court. The bagatelle was composed by an Irish officer, who was present when the royal familiarity was exhibited.

PRINTING. It is related that Faust, of Menz, one of the many persons to whom the honor of having invented the invaluable art of printing is ascribed, having carried a parcel of his Bibles to Paris, and offered them for sale as manuscripts, the French, after considering the number of books and their exact conformity with one another, even to points and commas, and that the best book writers could not be near so exact, concluded there was witchcraft in the case, and by either actually indicting him as a conjurer, or threatening to do so, extorted the secret. Hence the origin of the popular story of the Devil and Dr. Faustus.

SWEARING IN OLDEN TIME. In 1649, according to Lewis' History of Lynn, one Nicholas Pinion was fined for swearing. The witness deposed thus;—that "meeting with the said Nicholas Pinion, the last Lord's day, coming out of his corn, I heard the said Pinion swear—all his pumpkins were turned to squashes."

THE TEETH. The mouth should be rinsed with hot water, and then immediately with cold, every morning throughout the year. If this were regularly done from infancy, the dentist might shut up shop.

FASHION. Our grandfathers wore buckskin breeches which fitted tight, and were fastened by a buckle at the knee; but wo to the luckless wight who was caught in a shower of rain with them on; for to get out of them was to be flayed alive! These breeches required no suspenders, as the waistband was buttoned so tight as to prevent their falling down. The waistcoat of course was long; it was made of scarlet plush, and was furnished with pockets,—no, wallets they might have been called,—large enough to carry provisions for a journey several hundred miles long. Ribbed worsted stockings and buckled shoes covered the lower limbs, and a three cornered hat with a low crown covered the head. Contrast this description with the appearance of a modern dandy, and the disparity will appear as great as between the knarled oak and the smooth-backed beach.

For the Quincy Patriot

'DANSEUSES VIENNOISES.' Perhaps the excitement never was greater to witness any exhibition in Boston, than at the present time. The enthusiasm for these little children seems unbounded—the satisfaction universal. To me, it is a source of sorrow and regret, notwithstanding their beautiful performances, to witness such throngs as nightly crowd the Athenæum. I do not question the grace and beauty of these dances. The pleasure of witnessing these lovely children, their faces wreathed with smiles and their fairy like forms decked with flowers, must be exquisite, if we shut out from our thoughts their moral and spiritual culture. But if we take the opposite view of the subject it must cause the heart to ache and wring out the tear of sorrow. Why so, says the objector? Their present position for transcends that which they held in the old country. At home they might have been poor, degraded paupers. They might, and undoubtedly would, have been subject to all those vices that are too often reared in the soil of beggary and want.

I cannot appreciate this logic. If this is the ultimate end of the interest in these children, to educate and elevate them, then shame upon the christian church, that with the eye of cool indifference she can witness such means for such a lofty end. Here, they are reared in the atmosphere of continued excitement, caressed and applauded, which must be evident to every one, would eventually destroy the purest and strongest mind. I said shame upon the church. I repeat it,—and shame upon all who have reflected upon this subject who can thus screen themselves behind such singular logic, for their own private momentary amusement. These children, from the very nature of the case, can never be suited to any other department of life, at least, so as to be useful and valuable members of society. They are now pursuing a train of instruction for the stage. And at what price? Ah, the price at which the angels of Heaven might weep—a pure, chaste and elevated character.

Some may smile at this—but I defy the strongest mind, to pass through this ordeal of enrapturing enthusiasm, and retain its true greatness and simplicity. If the tale be true concerning the sons and daughters of the old world, then what a wretched shape has charity assumed thus to renovate and redeem them. Charity!—don't disgrace her queenly beauty with such shameful mockery. True charity has an eye single to the means exercised for the attainment of such a noble end as the perfection of character. Oh when will minds that can think, and hearts that can feel, cease to fly from one extreme to another. To escape pauperism, they must flee to the schools of licentiousness and corruption. I know I am not harsh—pure and noble minds may and do exist upon the stage, but they are exceptions. I wish not to strike a blow at the drama, for I believe the drama may be an engine of good, and not of evil. The question that I am now discussing, however, does not necessarily involve the general question of the drama.

It must appear evident to all that such a course of instruction as is pursued with these children upon a public stage, in its legitimate tendency, is to foster the lowest passions of their nature. What surprises me most is, that the interest should be so great to see these exhibitions at the present time. For there never was a period in the history of the world when there has been manifested such faith and trust in the religious culture of the child. The generous heart thrills with joy as it witnesses this phenomenon of the present foreshadowing a hopeful future. Theologians whilst they cail and doubt in theory, in practice do admit that the wreath of innocence rests upon the brow of childhood. Its playful smile, its unconscious loyalty to its parent seems radiant with spiritual life and beauty. At this shrine the sinner quails and bows his head in sorrow. Thinking minds have begun to feel this, that the heart of the youth is but reflexive of what the heart of the man may be. The child bears in its breast the germ of moral excellence that can be unfolded and perfected only through toil and perseverance.

Then, why this inconsistency? Why not act from principle in this matter? Why encourage a system that robs childhood of its simplicity and beauty? Let the soul that has ever felt the thrill of earnestness for a divine life in the world, be true to this subject. Let it hearken to the wild cry of suffering humanity as it comes up from the whole history of the past, and then do nothing that shall cripple the growth of virtue and goodness.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, Feb. 2, 1847.

J. A. GREEN, Esq.—

SIR—You may be desirous of knowing some of the items of news now stirring in this goodly "city of notions." You know winter is a busy time, and we have all kinds of lectures and anniversaries of all kinds of Societies. Among these, is the American Ladies Home Education Society and Temperance Union, the anniversary of which was celebrated this week in the Tremont Temple, which was crowded with attentive hearers. This is a Society which is doing much good in this city, as it provides a home and education for indigent orphan children and brings them up on temperance principles. The Rev. Mr. Cushman, of the Baptist Church, in Bowdoin Square, was President of the meeting, which was commenced by reading portions of scripture by Rev. Mr. Adams of the Methodist Church. Mr. Cushman, on taking the chair made some pertinent remarks, and stated the object of the Society. An address was then delivered by the Hon. Mr. Calhoun, President of the Senate, in which the cause of education was taken up at considerable length. Mr. C. spoke of the importance of mental, moral and christian education. He would have all these combined in due proportions, and not have one part of the man educated at the expense of another. He also spoke of the importance of instilling into the minds of the young the principles of temperance.

He was followed by the Hon. Mr. Bradford, Speaker of the House of Representatives. Mr. B.'s remarks were all directed to two points, first, against select schools, and secondly, for the better education of females. He believed here was the greatest point in which our efforts for education failed. He considered it of more importance to educate females well, than to educate men well. He would have more provision made, out of the public chest, for female instruction.

The next address was by Deacon Grant, who every body knows, especially all the unfortunates and wretches of Boston. It was upon his favorite theme, rum, or temperance. Rum, he said, was the source of nearly all our evils. Rum made most, or all the children of this school orphans or paupers. He knew something about these matters.

The last and closing address, was by Rev. Mr. Cornell, editor of the Practical Educator and Journal of Health. Mr. C. took up the subject of education in general and added to the list which Mr. Calhoun had enumerated two other branches of education. He would have mental, moral and christian education as Mr. Calhoun had advocated them. He would give them as much prominence as would the Honorable Senator—but in addition to them, he would have first physical education, or the proper cultivation of all the powers of the body. Every bone, nerve, muscle, joint, toe, finger, and part of the human frame was made for some definite use. He would have all these trained to their proper use and to fulfill their designed end. He had known all other kinds of education lost, and worse than lost, for want of this. He had seen the youth for whom parents had toiled, and over whom they had watched, and upon whom, to give him an education, they had expended all they had, fail and die at the very period that education was completed, and all on account of neglecting the body. Cultivating the intellect, the mind, and suffering the house in which that mind lived, to decay and fall. He asked, is this wise? Is it right? How long will parents and teachers of youth practice upon such a pernicious principle? Will they never know and do better?

In the next place, said Mr. C., I would have practical education added to the catalogue. Education is often lost for the want of not knowing how to apply it. Like the man who possesses all kinds of sense but common sense, such an educated person had better not have been educated. This is one reason why not one in ten, who have learning enough, is fit for a teacher. He has no instruction as to practical education. He knows not how to apply his talents to the business of life, and consequently, with all his learning, he is lost to himself and society. In a word, said Mr. C., I would have the study of the physical man, of the laws of health, and the practical application of learning to the business of life, made a fundamental part of education in every school, college and seminary in the land.

You know not, Mr. Chairman, said he, what these children are one day to become. What powers of mind and goodness of heart are there concealed, which, if properly cultivated, may one day astonish, delight and bless the world. A child, once born of a slave, a bond woman, was cast on the brink of the Nile by his mother. The Princess of Egypt saw the frail casket among the reeds—she sent her maid to fetch it. She opened it. The babe wept—her heart was penetrated—she took it for her own son. She educated him in all the learning of Egypt. She called his name Moses, because she drew him out of the water. Little did she think in that little stranger, she was raising up the greatest prophet and lawgiver that ever lived. Eminent persons may arise among these pupils. I know not these ladies, but they are Princesses.

Respectfully, yours,

For the Quincy Patriot

REPLY TO JONATHAN.

MR. EDITOR—I read your last week's paper with pleasure, because I found our old friend Jonathan, who always boasted that none other than federal blood ever flowed in his veins, had come forward in defence of one whose whole aim has been to get power at the hands of the democratic party, for the purpose of "aid and comfort" to their opponents. The question is, does this apply to Gov. Morton? Let us examine and see. In 1838, he was elected, by the people, Governor for the first time; he was surrounded by a federal Senate, House, and council; his friends expected and got, nothing. Again, in 1843, he was elected by the Senate and House; they were with him and elected a Council to surround him and carry out his views. Then comes the inquiry, what was done? The death blow to the democratic party was early struck by his refusal to remove Gen. Dearborn, and how was it followed up? Did he remove the Sheriff in Essex, which every body wanted removed? Did he turn out one of the eight hundred and odd officials and put democrats in their places? No, not one. His argument was, I am the great I am of my party; they will not dare to oppose one they have so long supported, and acknowledge to the whole world that for years they had been deceived. Therefore I will endeavor to please the whigs, and then as the party has succeeded in making me Governor, if I please the whigs I shall stay Governor, and that is all my party has contended for. He reckoned without his host, for the next year, by the apathy of those who had contended for a radical change in the administration of the government of Massachusetts, and the stronger opposition of those who, in addition to their former opposition, felt a feeling of contempt to one who had basely betrayed his own party, he was sent to retirement, and there he remained till the advent of the present administration, who took him up upon the supposition that he was entitled to their confidence from the long support he had received at the hands of his party in this State. He is made Collector where he is again at his old tricks. Then a necessity is brought about to oppose his confirmation, because no one doubted that if confirmed he would use his power to injure his old friends and again attempt to carry favor with opponents, and now what is the history? He found the eyes of democratic Senators open to his falsity, he saw no hope to be confirmed unless he could obtain the support of whig Senators. I will say what has occurred and leave the public to judge. A circular was printed and sent to the whig Senators stating if he was confirmed, there should be no more removals of whigs. His friends denounced it as a forgery. Be it so, but what is the fact? Not a whig has been removed since his confirmation, but many democrats have been. Now, Jonathan, let me ask, did not you whigs elect Tyler President; did he not prove a traitor; did not you deservedly denounce him? The democratic party elected Morton Governor, and have we not a right to condemn him for doing what John Tyler did? Most assuredly, and I trust at the close of this administration he will have leave and leisure to pursue the herring fishery in Taunton river.

And now, Jonathan, a brief word in reply to other remarks of yours. As to the contest of '48, we will try our metal and leave the decision for the future. As to Col. Cushing, if he returns safe from the war you shall hear his descriptions, which will fall like a thunderbolt upon all who oppose this most righteous of wars. And lastly, you ask what mode we shall adopt to ascertain if our candidates are thorough bred democrats. I will tell you; we will examine their heads, and if we find a little bunch of wool we will do as they used to do in old times when candidates for deacons were brought up before the pulpit and a bean was dropped on their heads; if their heads were too hard for the bean to lodge they were rejected. So I hope it will be hereafter, if the bunch of wool is to be found in the head or heart of a democrat he will be set aside.

Yours,

TO PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS.

By an act of the Legislature of 1846, establishing "Teachers' Institutes," it is provided, among other things, that whenever "reasonable assurance" shall be given to the Board that a number of Common School teachers, not less than seventy, shall desire to assemble for the purpose of forming a Teachers' Institute, and agree to remain in session for a period not less than ten working days, the Board, or a committee appointed by them, shall name a time and place for the meeting, give due notice thereof, and make suitable arrangements therefor.

"Reasonable assurance" having been given to the committee that the requisite number of teachers may be expected to assemble, provided an Institute should be appointed at QUINCY, in the County of Norfolk, on TUESDAY, the 16th day of March, at ten o'clock, A. M., to be continued for ten working days, that is, until Friday the 26th day of March, inclusive, notice is hereby given that a Teachers' Institute will be held at said time and place.

The nature and object of a Teachers' Institute were particularly described in the ninth Annual Report of the Secretary of the Board of Education, a copy of which was sent to every school district in the State, and is in the eighth volume of the Common School Journal.

No tuition fee will be required. Instruction, lectures, rooms, lights, etc. will be gratuitously provided. But each member must defray his or her own personal expenses of board, travelling, etc.

The following are standing regulations to be observed at all the Institutes which shall be held during the current year, under the auspices of the Board.

All applicants must present themselves punctually at the time, as well as at the place specified for the meeting.

No one will be received who is not a teacher of a public school in Massachusetts, or who has not a reasonable prospect of becoming such within a year from the time when such Institute shall be held.

Each applicant must come provided with a Bible; pen, ink, and paper; a slate and pencil; a geography and atlas; the reading book most generally used by the highest class in the schools of the neighborhood where he resides, (if convenient, it would be well to bring more than one kind, to increase the chance of classification,) a dictionary, and a blank or common-place book for taking notes.

Other things being equal, those who apply first will have priority of claim; but no person who has attended one or more Institutes will be received to the exclusion of one who has not attended at all. The number of members, however, will only be limited by the accommodations, which are ample and excellent.

It is not necessary that applicants should either reside, or expect to keep school, in the county where the Institute is held. It is sufficient if they reside in the State, and expect to keep school in the State, within a year.

Liberty is necessarily reserved to reject or dismiss any applicant or member, for misconduct or other sufficient cause.

The aid of School Committees and of all friends of Common Schools, for diffusing information of the proposed meeting, and furnishing facilities for the attendance of members, is respectfully and earnestly solicited.

The duty of preparing one's self for whatever business he may undertake; the rapidly-advancing standard of qualifications for teachers of our Common Schools; the danger of exposure and of condemnation which impends over incompetent teachers; the increased vigilance of school committees in seeking out teachers of high talents and attainments, and the readiness of the public to give good teachers a more adequate remuneration for their services—all these considerations call upon every person who has entered or who proposes to enter this noble field of labor, to avail himself of every opportunity for improvement.

All persons who wish, under the foregoing regulations, to become members of the Institute, will address their letters of application, (post paid,) to REV. ORANGE CLARK, D. D. Quincy, Mass.

For the Committee,

HORACE MANN, Secretary of the Board of Education.

WEST NEWTON, Feb. 4, 1847.

Papers in Norfolk, Plymouth and Bristol Counties are requested to copy this Circular.

The following notice will show that this movement of the Secretary and of the Teachers has the hearty concurrence of the citizens of Quincy.

QUINCY, Jan. 28, 1847.

A number of gentlemen met at the residence of Charles A. Cummings, to consider the expediency of holding a Teachers' Institute in Quincy, in March next. The meeting was organized by the choice of Josiah Brigham, Esq., Chairman, and J. C. Edwards, Secretary.

After a proper consideration of the subject it was voted expedient and practicable to hold an Institute in this town.

Charles A. Cummings, William Seaver, Lewis Bass, and Revs. Orange Clark, S. A. Davis, William Allen, William P. Lunt, John T. Burrell and Samuel Fox were chosen a Committee to make the necessary arrangements.

P. S. An adjourned meeting of the Committee will be held at the residence of Rev. Orange Clark, on MONDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

J. C. EDWARDS, Secretary.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

We don't want money desperately bad, but our creditors do. And no doubt they owe you. And if you pay us, we'll pay them, and they'll pay you.

GREAT ROBBERY IN BOSTON. The store of Currier & Trott and Widdell & Co., corner of Washington and Milk streets, Boston, was entered between the night of the 30th of Jan. and the first inst., and watches, jewelry, etc., to the amount of from eight to ten thousand dollars taken. The principal articles stolen were watches. A reward of one thousand dollars is offered for the detection of the thieves and the recovery of the property. The robbers probably obtained access by means of false keys, says the Traveller of Monday. The chief scene of their operations was in the cellar, where the safe was kept, in which was deposited all the most valuable of the stock. Upon this safe they commenced operations in the same manner that a corps of engineers would sap a citadel; they bored into it in all directions; drew the bolts with wrenches, (one of which was broken and left behind) and finally after defacing the entire front, succeeded in prying off the locks, and opening it. The contents of the safe were, gold watches, gold spectacles, bracelets, rings, &c., and about one hundred dollars in money. They also sorted out the watches in the windows of the store, and took those that were most valuable. The largest part of their booty was gold, the silver being too bulky to be carried off in safety. Within the same time, several other robberies, of small amount, occurred in the city.

CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES. The Catholic Almanac for 1847, says that the number of priests in the United States is eight hundred and thirty-four, being an accession of ninety-eight in one year; and also that there are eight hundred and twelve churches, seventy-two of which were erected this year. In addition to this number, there are five hundred and seventy-seven stations visited by clergymen, but as yet without any commodious place of worship.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS. In the Senate, Jan. 28th, a series of resolutions from the Vermont Legislature against the war, etc. were presented. The army bill was discussed, several amendments offered and rejected, and the proviso authorizing the President to appoint officers during the recess of Congress was stricken out. In the House, the naval appropriation bill was under discussion.

Jan. 29th, in the Senate, a memorial was presented from a Cincinnati editor, asking to be invested with power to form a company to extend the magnetic telegraph across the Atlantic ocean! The ten regiment bill was taken up and amended so as to give each soldier the option to receive a certificate of six per cent. stock for four hundred dollars instead of 160 acres of land. The naval appropriation bill was before the House.

Jan. 30th, a joint resolution was introduced into the Senate, presenting the thanks of Congress to Gen. Taylor, and the officers and men under his command, for their gallant conduct at the siege of Monterey. The army bill was then taken up. In the House, the resolution of thanks to Gen. Taylor, etc. was received. An amendment, as follows:—

Whilst engaged in a war forced upon us by Mexico by the most flagrant acts, and finally by an invasion of one of the southern States of the Union, was offered. This was amended by adding, "nothing herein contained shall be construed into approbation of the terms of the capitulation of Monterey," and the whole amendment adopted, after which the resolution was passed—one hundred and three to sixty two.

Monday, Feb. 1st, in the Senate, the bill establishing post routes in Texas was taken up and passed, also, the army bill. A communication was received from the Secretary of the Treasury, recommending an increase of duties on certain articles, and on others diminished duties. Tea and coffee are among the former—reduced to fifteen per cent. In the House, a resolution calling for correspondence with Gen. Taylor was taken up and adopted.

Tuesday, Feb. 2d, in the Senate, the resolution of thanks to Gen. Taylor, from the House, was laid over. The three million appropriation bill was under debate. The House was engaged on the West Point bill, and the Diplomatic Appropriation bill.

LEGISLATIVE. A petition has been presented from James Newcomb and others, of Quincy, for leave to extend the Granite Railway to Quincy Point.

Bill to establish the City of Charlestown was read and ordered to a third reading.

The report that it is inexpedient to legislate concerning setting fire to woodlands, has been accepted.

The order appointing the time for the choice of United States Senator, having been amended so as to appoint Wednesday of next week, at half past eleven o'clock, was passed.

The bill concerning the sale of potatoes, so amended as to make the standard weight of the bushel sixty pounds, was ordered to be engrossed.

A petition was presented and referred, of the Worcester and Milton Branch Railroad Company for leave to change location.

THE WAR. Intelligence has been received from Brazos Santiago to the 14th ult. A report had reached there that Santa Anna, with a large force, had advanced on Saltillo and Victoria, but the report was not relied on.

Gen. Quitman entered Victoria on the 9th ult., without opposition. A body of Mexicans had been seen in the vicinity of Saltillo, and a large force was reported to be assembled at Tula.

Capt. May, while on a scouting expedition, was attacked by a superior force, in a narrow pass, and his rear guard cut off. The Mexicans rolled large stones down the pass, with some effect, and captured several Americans. Capt. May's force consisted of about eighty men, of whom he lost eleven, with their horses, and seven pack mules. The gallant little squad fought bravely and effectually, but what extent of damage they did to the enemy was not known.

A report says, the Mexican Congress has decided to accept the proposals of the United States, and to receive an American Minister, but it needs confirmation.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. The Boston Traveller says, it is perhaps, but an act of justice to the proprietors of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, for us to say, that our personal experience in the use of this article has impressed us most favorably. One of the proprietors of the Traveller was entirely cured of a severe cough of four months continuance, by the use of this Balsam; and several of our friends and acquaintances, who have tried the article, have found it of great service in relieving them of severe coughs and shortness of breathing, with which they had been afflicted. Mr. Seth W. Fowle, 138 Washington street, is the general agent.

THE NANTUCKET FIRE. The amount of subscription for the sufferers by this fire was about $70,000. The whole number of buildings burned was more than three hundred and sixty, and the whole amount of property destroyed is about one million of dollars.

FIRE IN ABINGTON. A fire broke out in the Box Manufactory of Capt. Isaac Hersey, in Abington, on Sunday evening last, which was wholly consumed, together with a quantity of lumber—supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The wife of Mr. Josiah Vining died a few minutes after, as was supposed in consequence of being frightened at the alarm of fire.

ACCIDENT. The Plymouth Memorial states that recently Mr. Samuel Barstow, of East Abington, was seriously injured, by the discharge of an overloaded gun. The breech pin entered his forehead between the eyes, and when withdrawn a portion of his brains followed. The wound was immediately dressed, and he is in a fair way of recovery.

STATE DOCUMENT. Our thanks are due the Secretary of State for a copy of the "Fourteenth Annual Report of the Trustees of the State Lunatic Hospital at Worcester."

PICTORIAL SUN. A large quarto sheet with this title is issued monthly from the Sun office, New York. It is printed on good paper, illustrated with many spirited engravings, and makes a very handsome appearance. Agency at this office. Send No. 1.

MEDICINAL USES OF THE WILD CHERRY.

Ever since the settlement of America, Wild Cherry has been known to possess very important medicinal virtues. Every body knew this fact, but nobody knew how to extract its essential properties. Every mother gives Wild Cherry tea to her children for worms, for colds, and for almost every disease; and adults throughout our country are in the habit of making a compound or syrup of wild cherry bark and other ingredients, to be used in spring as an antidote to complaints incident to that cheerful season. It is found by experiment that the wild cherry possesses even for more important qualities than was ascribed to it. For the first stages of Consumption, Asthma, no matter how long standing, Coughs, Liver Complaint, etc. it is proved to be the best medicine known to man. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a chemical extract, combined with a similar extract from Tar, which enhances its value. Its success in curing Pulmonary disease, in almost every stage, after our physicians could do no more, has astonished the faculty, and led them to confess that Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry possesses a principle heretofore unknown among medical men.

POETRY.

"JESUS WEPT."

It was a holy hour!
Romance and fairy song were both laid by
And the clear radiance of the sunset sky
Fell in a golden shower
Upon the open page of that best Book—
From which my soul a holier lesson took.

Gently, the zephyr's breath
Amid the leaves of Inspiration stirred;
Anon, mine eye from the Eternal Word
Caught the sad scene of Death—
Where the two Sisters mournful vigils kept;
Where they were weeping—and where Jesus wept!

Yes, "Jesus wept!" how deep—
How full of meaning was that one brief line!
Closer it drew my heart to Pity's shrine,
And bade my memory keep
The words on which I wept, that they might be Ever the prompters of my sympathy.

Still musing on, methought
Form after form rose 'mid the deepening gloom
That slowly gathered 'o'er my quiet room,
And one with glory fraught,
Stood pale, and solemn, yet serenely bright,
And heavenly, 'tho' bowed by earthly sorrows' might.

It was the Savior's form;
Beside him, with a troubled aspect, stood
Martha, whose worldly spirit soon subdued,
Sunk 'neath affliction's storm;
Wildly she lifted up her voice, and cried;
"Hast thou been here my brother had not died!"

But at her Master's feet,
With the long tresses of her golden hair
Unbound, and O! how radiantly fair
Sat Mary; trusting and sweet
Was the expression of those mournful eyes,
Whose tearful pleadings woke the Savior's sighs!

He pray'd, and groan'd, and wept,
He, whose pure being in the skies had birth,
In anguish knelt beside the bed of earth
Where that lov'd brother sigh'd
And with a tone of human grief and love, Implovingly besought his Father's aid above!

And then, his sorrowful eye
Lighted up with a God's benignity,
When he who had known death's dread mystery,
At that loud call, drew nigh
From the grave's portals, clad in ghastly white,
Chasing its fearful shadows from his sight!

So from mine eyes did fade
The thrilling scene, but the dark room did seem Lighter and purer from my musing dream,
And my heart better made,
Yet, ere I slept, once more I sought the Book,
And to my soul another lesson took.

LABOR.

"Labor, labor!" sounds the anvil,
"Labor, labor!" until death!
And the file, with voice discordant,
"Labor, endless labor!" saith,
While the bellows to the embers,
Speaks of labor in each breath.

"Labor, labor!" in the harvest,
Saith the whetting of the scythe,
And the mill wheel tells of labor
Under waters falling blithe;
"Labor, labor!" grows the mill-tones,
To the hands that whirl and writh!

And the woodman tells of labor,
In his echo-waking blows;
In the forest, in the cabin,
"Tis the dearest word he knows!
"Labor, labor!" saith the spirit,
And with labor comes repose.

"Labor!" saith the loaded wagon,
Moving towards the distant mart,
"Labor!" groans the heavy steamer,
As she cleaves the waves apart,
Beating like that iron engine,
"Labor, labor!" cries the heart!

Yes, the heart of man cries "labor!"
While it labors in the breast.
Hear the Ancient and Eternal,
In the Word which He hath blest,
Saying, "Six days shalt thou labor,
On the seventh thou shalt rest!"

Then how beautifully at evening,
When the toilsome week is done,
To behold the blacksmith's embers
Fade together with the sun;
And to think the doors of labor
Are all closing up like one!

ANECDOTES.

"Have you ever seen the perpetual motion?" said a loquacious old lady to her husband, one day. "Yes, my dear," replied the gallant husband. "Where?" inquired she. "Between your jaws my love."

An Irishman was asked how his mother did? "My jewel," said he, "I am obliged to you for your enquiries, but I never had a mother." "How is that," said his friend. "Why, don't you know," said Paddy, "that I am the son of my aunt?"

"Mar'ns wants to know how if you wouldn't lend her two or three sticks of wood?" "Yes, there's two for you, but you didn't return the last you borrowed." "No, nor I won't take them are 'thout you split 'em!"

A man standing in a pool of water was asked, "why are you standing there?" "I am endeavoring to catch cold, sir, as I am going to sing 'huss to night."

"I will stick my awl into you, said a shoemaker to a meddling interloper. "That is a very pointed remark," returned the other, coolly.

"I wonder you will smoke cigars," said and elderly maid to a clergyman. "for tobacco and rum generally go together." "I wonder you dare to be a woman," said he, "since women and men generally go together."

MISCELLANY.

NELLY GRAY.

In the little village of N—, Connecticut, is a small, but tolerably well filled grave-yard. Among the graves is one which has acquired a sort of sanctity. It is a neat and vernal mound, with a single head-stone, and on either side is a flourishing rose-bush. Passing through the village one day in the summer season, I beheld by the side of this grave a frail girlish form, evidently in distress. Opening the little wicket gate, I entered, anxious to know what could so distress the maiden. I approached the grave; but she was not aware of my approach. I stood by her side, still she knew not that her solitude was broken. She was gazing at one of the rose trees, and talking in a tone of commiseration. I stood by and kept silence.

'Twas cruel to rob my Henry of the roses which he so loved. But I will guard the grave, and keep thy flowers. It was a lovely flower they stole!

Such was her lament. I saw that a rose had been broken from the tree. My heart bled for the maiden, and I asked her what it was that troubled her. She gazed wildly at me, with her black eyes moistened with tears.

'Oh! sir,' said she, 'they have robbed his grave of the first summer rose.' Saying this, she again gazed on the rose bush, and gently took hold of the branch from which the flower had been broken.

I would have questioned her more closely, for I felt anxious to know the history of one so afflicted. Just then, a small, venerable looking man appeared, who directed his steps towards us. He proved to be the village pastor. Having discovered his office, I saluted him with the respect due to his functions.

'Good morning, young man,' said he, with an affability that made me feel quite acquainted with him. 'Then he turned to the mourner.

'Well, Nelly, what is the matter? Some new trouble for thee, thou unfortunate?'

'Oh! my dear sir,' exclaimed the maid, as she sprang to the old man and seized his hand. 'Oh, sir, come one has robbed my Henry's grave! The rose, the beautiful rose which I showed you yesterday, is gone!'

'Indeed,' said the kind-hearted pastor, it was a cruel deed, but do not weep, Nelly; the same God that made that beautiful flower will soon provide others. See, there is now a fine large bud just ready to open, and embellish with its beauty, thy Henry's grave.'

The weeping girl seemed comforted, and again stationed herself at the grave.

'Come Nelly,' said the pastor, 'come and see my Liddy; she will be glad to see you.'

'I'll come to-morrow, sir,' said Nelly. The old man did not urge her. He knew the temper of the poor girl; that it was best that she should be allowed every harmless indulgence. Bidding me good morning, the pastor left us, ejaculating as he did so, 'may God bless and protect thee, my child, for thine is a severe affliction.'

Anxious to learn more about the mourner, I followed and overtook the old man as he was opening the wicket gate.

'Sir,' said I, 'I trust you will pardon me; but my interest in that girl is so excited, that I would fain learn from you her history. Nor do I ask it to gratify an idle passion, or a useless curiosity.'

'Come with me, young man, and I will gratify thee. Yonder is my house; and you must come into my study.'

I gladly embraced the pastor's offer; for I was tired with a long stroll, and felt eager to hear the old man's tale.

Having entered the minister's study, the pastor drew from a closet a small box nearly filled with manuscripts, and seating himself by the side of me, he said,

'My young friend, I am an old man. I have consecrated many a parishioner in baptism, and have performed for many of them the last sad rites in laying the body in its narrow house. Many a scene of pleasure, and many of pain have I witnessed. Some are remarkably so; and such, I have made a practice to record in writing. That maiden you saw by the grave, has been one subject of my pen. She is the daughter of exemplary parents, and it is my duty to administer consolation to them in this, their great affliction. Before last winter, Nelly Gray was the very idol of the village. She was the most beautiful girl I ever saw; and not a few of the village youths courted her kind regard. She was too, a kind-hearted creature. Whenever any of my old parishioners were sick, little Nelly, as they called her, was sure to be there. She was in her glory when she was doing good; and for hours has she sat and read to the aged. It was on one winter day; but why narrate it, when I read it for I kept a record of the case? Thus saying, the old minister took out a manuscript, and read. There was considerable imagination and simplicity in the old man's style. He read, as nearly as may be, as follows:—

'It is Christmas eve. The ground is covered with snow, and all things are in this white mantle clad. The falling drops cement into flakes, and are driven onward by the boisterous wind. O! it is a merry wind, notwithstanding what the poet says about—

'The howling tempest, and the wintry storm.'

'Yes, it is a mischievous wind, and plays with the sleets as if they were bon companions. Just watch its pranks. Having given the solitary pine tree a passing shake by way of remembrance, it now goes whirling around the old farm-house, dashing the snow upwards with a merry laugh. How it shakes the shutters in its glee!—a parting shake, then away down the road-side like a cloud of snow. At it again!—a poor benighted traveller is in the way—bluff come the wind and the snow, and completely envelope him. Away, and away it flies; down the lane, over the meadow, and on its way plays many a jolly antic. It pauses. Another murmur. It retraces its path, and in a twinkling is off again at the old farm-house. The dog on the hearth is startled in his sleep, and venting a growl in imprecation, he composes himself for another nap. A feeble blaze bursts from the covered embers, illuminates the neatly blackened fire-place, and thus exhibits a row of stockings, pending from the mantel; for a night visit was expected by the little folks, from the good-natured St. Nicholas, or Santa Claus, as they called him; and these were the depositories of his favors. The little innocents were all asleep in one good, warm, large bed, and each was dreaming of Santa Claus. Sleep on ye little dreamers! How like the dream of life!

It is morning. The storm is hushed. The gray light comes streaming from the east. The old farmer waking, rubs his eyes.

'Holloa! come dame, wake up. Day-light is a burning. A merry Christmas to you all!'

'Do tell, now!' said the old woman. 'I thought I should get the start of you. But I've had sore dreams, which woke me several times; so that when morning came, I felt like wanting a little more sleep.'

Soon all was life and motion. Such a wishing of 'merry Christmas' by all in the house. Such emulation and strife to do it first! Such jumping out of bed by the little folks, and then running to the stockings to see if Santa Claus had been faithful to their expectations? 'Yes!' exclaimed the little ones in an ecstasy of joy. 'He's been here, and filled our stockings full!'

'And very sorry were the urchins that they had not kept wide awake, and stolen a peep from under the bed-clothes, at the funny, and good-natured little man that could come down the chimney. The wonder then was, whether father or mother had seen him. But they assured the young folks that they had not. This was enough, and they were content to pass over this mystery in an examination of the good things the wondrous Santa Claus had left them.

By and by came dinner—Christmas dinner! oh! what a sight was that! There was the steaming hot goose, besides the mince pies, and all that heart could wish. The good old man, and his smiling luxon wife, their son and daughter-in-law, with the little grand-child that had come a great way to see grand-father, besides all the little folks; and there was another happy, very happy creature; it was the beautiful, good Nelly Gray. She was there, and the old folks looked on her as a daughter, as indeed they expected she soon would be, one of the boys was delighted to see Nelly blush, whenever he called her sister.

All being seated around the festive board, the old man devoutly called on God to bless his providence, and a blessing was also invoked on their absent son.

What a happy group! What a eulogy was pronounced on the pudding! What a large goose was theirs! and what pies! 'Oh! father, why can't Christmas come more than once a year?' asked a little prattler.

But even the rose, beautiful as it is, has its thorn, and one thing strove to cheat them of their pleasure. Where was Henry?—the good, the kind-hearted Henry. How happy he used to be on Christmas day! Yes, he took care that the little folks had a nice sleigh ride. But where could he be now? It was a painful question! It made all gloomy! 'I tell thee, wife,' said the old man, 'take it not to heart so. True, 'tis six long months since we last heard of him; but then he was well, and like to become a rich man; and you know what a lot of wondrous things he told us about New York. God will take care of him, never fear! Come, clear off the table, and bring pipes for John and me; and let's give the young ones room to begin their Christmas games.'

The farmer's cheerfulness diffused itself through the whole group, and the house-wife with her girl quickly cleared off the dishes, and set the table in its accustomed corner.

'That's something like! Thou was ever quick and active,' said the farmer, addressing the matron. Come, now, children, for sport. A game at twirling the platter will be good. Many's the time that I played it, when I was a boy. Come, get ready.'

And merrily the play went, and pretty Nelly Gray, to win her forfeit, had to kiss the elder boy. But, no, she said, she wouldn't do it; she'd rather lose her forfeit first. But it was decided that she must. So she magnanimously concluded that if she must, she must. And she did, too, do it in fine style. And the urchin archly suggested that Henry would not allow it if he were home.

Just at this moment, a hurried knocking was heard at the door, and immediately a man entered, on whose face were signs of trouble.

'Come, neighbor Ploughwell, you're wanted. A poor man has been found dead in the ditch, down in the lane.' At which announcement, the children looked alarmed, and their mother ejaculated, 'God save my Henry!'

The flush departed from the maiden's cheeks, and a deadly pallor supplanted the place of the crimson. The farmer with his son followed the messenger. In the farm-house, all play was stopped. The children felt a natural dread, and the mother was oppressed with anxious fear; nor could her daughter-in-law, or Nelly, at all comfort her, or calm her agitation. She was thinking of her absent son. Soon, John, who had accompanied his father, returned. He seemed much embarrassed; at length, venturing to speak, he said,

'Mother, be composed; you are about to be tried.'

She raised her hands in agony and cried, 'Oh, God! it is, it is my Henry!'

And so it was my Henry. The farmer had been summoned to attend an inquest, and when he had arrived at the spot, he beheld the body of his son. He was partially disguised. He said on leaving the city, he would take the folks at home by surprise. Poor youth, he knew not what he said. He had been benighted, and deceived by a snow-drift, had stepped into a ditch and got stifled.

While the mother gave vent to her grief, Nelly stood motionless as a statue. When the corpse was brought in, she ran to it and kissed it. Seizing it by the hand, she exclaimed in tones that would melt the hardest heart, 'Henry! Henry! speak to me. I am your Nelly; oh, speak!'

She kissed the corpse; 'Henry is cold, very cold!' she said. John, while his heart almost bled, was obliged to take poor Nelly away by force.

Oh, sad reverse! The table that had but just borne the Christmas dinner, and around which the merry group had been wishing that Henry would come, now bears that Henry a corpse!

'Thus, my young friend,' said the minister, breaking off, and addressing me, 'thus learn to love and pity Nelly Gray. Daily has she watched her Henry's grave. And it was not a childish grief, when she wept at the loss of the rose which some ruthless hand had torn from Henry's grave.'

The old man wept as he closed; and I could not refrain from doing so myself.

Daily did Nelly watch the grave of him she loved. Her own mother had received a shock which she never recovered from, when her daughter lost her reason. Her health was in a very precarious state, and daily her frame sunk under disease and grief. The next winter she changed rapidly. Her physicians indulged in no hopes. On a cold day in December—it was just three days before Christmas—the good old pastor was called to see Mrs. Gray. She was very low, and scarcely able to respond to the solemn duties of the aged minister. Nelly stood by the bed-side, holding her mother's hand. Who shall depict the feelings of that mother, as she gazed on her afflicted child, about to suffer a still greater bereavement? The agony of the mother was apparent, notwithstanding her Christian resignation. She raised her eyes to the pastor, and convulsively grasped her daughter's hand. In a faint voice she ejaculated,

'Be kind to my child!' and expired.

'My mother!' exclaimed the maiden, falling on her parent's corpse. There she lay, still and silent, on the dead.

The company was overcome to tears; and the good old man could not conceal his emotion.

'Come, come, Nelly,' said he, approaching the girl, 'come you must not do so.'

Taking hold of the silent girl, with the assistance of an attendant, he endeavored to remove her. But Nelly Gray was dead!

Yes, the frail creature died of a broken heart. Christmas day came, and with it the funeral of the mother and her daughter. Poor Nelly, at the suggestion of the pastor, was buried in the same grave with her Henry. In the solemn train of mourners at that village funeral, none felt the pungency of grief more than did farmer Ploughwell and his wife. On the plain white headstone, beneath the name of Henry Ploughwell, is that of Nelly Gray. In a few lines the sad story is told. Still grow the two rose trees, and the village maidens have named one Nelly, and the other Henry. Nor have they, since the maiden's death, been violated. Oftentimes, on a Sabbath day, the maidens and youth go to visit 'The grave of Nelly Gray.'

A BOASTER.

A country fellow was one day boasting about the swiftness of his horse, and declared that he would outrun any thing which went upon four legs. A neighbor of his disputed it, and said he had a mule which could beat him.

'A mule!' said the boaster—'I'll bet you a hundred dollars of that.'

'Done!' said the other.

'Done!' said the boaster.

'Now cover that,' said the owner of the mule; laying down a hundred dollars.

The boaster began to be frightened at this. He thought there must be something about the mule that he was not aware of, otherwise the owner wouldn't plunk a hundred dollars to run him against the horse. He began to twitch about uneasily. He put his hand into his pocket, he pulled it out again, and at last said—'I don't know, I swear, that tarnal mule—he may be the old scratch for what I know?'

'Do you back out, then?'

'Yes, I back out and treat.'

So saying, he called in the liquor; but declared his horse could beat any thing which went on four legs, except the mule.

'Why,' said the other, 'I've got a jackass that will beat him.'

'I'll bet a hundred dollars of that,' said the boaster.

'Done!' said the other.

'And done!' said the boaster.

'Cover that,' said the man, again putting down the hundred dollars.

'Cover that,' said the boaster, 'so I will plucky quick,' taking up his pocket book.

'Well, cover it, if you dare, and I'll put another hundred top of it. Why do you hesitate? down with your dust, I say.'

'I don't know, faith. I never saw that jackass of yours run,' said the boaster, beginning to hesitate—'he may be the old scratch too upon a race, for what I know?'

'Do you flunk out then?'

'Yes, I flunk this time; but by jingo there's nothing else you can bring except the jackass and mule except what my horse can beat.'

'Are you certain of that my good fellow?'

'I think so, faith.'

'Why, if you are not certain, I'll bet you something that I've got a nigger that will outrun him.'

'I'll bet you a hundred dollars of that; there ain't no nigger that ever breathed that can beat my horse.'

'Very well, cover that.' As he said this, the man once more put down a hundred dollars—'But,' said he, 'if you back out this time you shall forfeit ten dollars and if I back out, I'll do the same.'

'Agreed,' said the boaster, 'I'm sure my horse can beat a nigger, if he can't beat a mule or a jackass.'

'Well, plunk the money if you please.'

'Plunk it so I will; don't you fear that.'

Saying this, he once more took out his pocket book, and began to fumble for the money.

'Come man, down with your dust,' said the other, taking out more money; 'for I am ready to back my bet with another hundred dollars, or two hundred, if you like. Come! why do you hesitate? Here's three hundred dollars, I'm ready to stake.'

'Three hundred dollars!' exclaimed the boaster, staring like a stuck pig, 'three hundred dollars upon a nigger! I don't know I swear.'

'What man, you're not going to get frightened again?'

'Frightened! Oh, no, no—it's no easy matter to frighten me—but really—'

'You mean to back out.'

'I declare, neighbor, I don't know what to think about it. It's a kind of risky business.'

'You forfeit the ten dollars then?'

'Why, yes, I spose I must,' said the boaster—handing over the money with an air of great mortification—'better lose this than more, for there's no knowing how fast these blamed niggers may run. But any thing else you can bring, except the mule, the jackass, and the nigger, I'm ready to run against.'

SEEK KNOWLEDGE. If you pull up your window a little, it is far likelier to give you cold, or rheumatism, or stiff neck, than if you throw it wide open; and the chance of any bad consequences becomes still less if you go out into the air, and let it act upon you equally from every side. Is it not just so with knowledge? Do not those who are exposed to a draught of it, blowing on them through a crevice, usually grow stiff-necked? When you open the windows of your mind, therefore, open them as widely as you can; open them, and let the soul send forth its messengers to explore the state of the earth. The best, indeed the only method, of guarding against the mischief which may ensue from teaching men a little, is to teach them more. Knowledge is the true spear of Achilles; nothing but itself can heal the wound it may have inflicted.

We love women a little for what we do know of them, and a great deal more for what we do not.

[By request.]

THE NANTUCKET SUFFERERS.

The following Circular, issued by the Selectmen of Nantucket, has been received by the Selectmen of this town.

FRIENDS—The undersigned, Selectmen of the town of Nantucket, have finished their labors in the distribution of the bounty entrusted to them from abroad, for the relief of the sufferers by the calamitous fire of the 13th and 14th of July last, feel called upon to give an account of their stewardship.

Our first care was to send our appeals and circulars abroad, asking aid for the distressed part of our community; and from more than one hundred cities and towns we have received substantial evidence of their good feeling towards them. Your bounty has been large and well-timed;—about sixty-four hundred dollars worth of provisions, clothing, furniture and dry goods, have been received, and fifty-six thousand four hundred ninety eight 53,000 dollars in money.

In distributing what has been intrusted to our care, we have kept constantly in view the wish of the donors—'Relief to the distressed.'

We have not been able to adopt any fixed rate of per centage, but have varied it with circumstances, as but few cases were alike, and our aim was rather to relieve the distressed, than to give to those who had much left, however severe their loss might have been.

To the aged and infirm, to widows and other destitute females, and to orphans, we have handed out freely of your gifts, and in some few extreme cases, have nearly or quite made good their loss, when it has not exceeded five hundred dollars; than which a greater amount has in no individual case been awarded.

The recipients are more than four hundred and sixty persons, of whom three hundred and fifty are heads of families; so that the whole number actually assisted is upward of thirteen hundred and fifty persons. Of the first number, three hundred and fifty-six were very destitute, and a large proportion of them entirely so; these received in money, forty-nine thousand, eight hundred and thirty-four dollars. Those to whom the remainder was given, had little or no available means. Among the first named class, were eighty six persons over sixty years old, and one hundred and fifty-six females, a large proportion of whom are widows.

The recipients have generally been well satisfied, and very grateful for your bounty bestowed upon them. Some few of the recipients, as we have since found, were not entitled to assistance; but while they have received it through false statements, they have also received our just rebuke.

In the distribution of your munificence, we have acted independently of the few in our community who attempted to control us. All has been done under our direction. If we have not done right, we alone are to blame. All is accounted for, and we believe we have dispensed it faithfully, and according to the best of our ability, judiciously; and so conscious are we of integrity of purpose, that it will give us pleasure, at any time, to open our books to any of the donors, or to give them any other information they may desire.

FRIENDS,—your generosity and sympathy for the distressed, entitle you to our sincere thanks, and we here, for the inhabitants of Nantucket, for the recipients of your bounty, and for ourselves personally, publicly and heartily tender you the same. When hundreds of families were without a roof to cover them or a bed to lie upon, and very many of them without a change of raiment,—when widows and old men had been stripped of their all, and had no hopes for the future, except such as were founded on the humanity of others,—it was then you so liberally and so promptly responded to the call of the distressed, bound up their broken hearts, and sent them on their way rejoicing;—and surely Heaven's choicest blessings will be your reward.

For our services we have charged nothing—we have received nothing; but having the approval of our own consciences, and believing the course which we have pursued in dispensing what you have so liberally furnished, will not fail to secure your approval, and that of the recipients generally, and having been the instruments in your hands, of making many destitute and desponding families comfortable and happy, by whom many a tear of gratitude has been shed, and from whom many a prayer of thankfulness has gone up to high Heaven;—these more than compensate for all the care which has devolved upon us, in being the almoners of your bounty.

The whole number of buildings burned is upward of three hundred and sixty, and the whole amount of property destroyed about one million of dollars. There was insured about three hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and there has been received from abroad about seventy thousand dollars,—leaving an actual loss of about six hundred thousand dollars.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FRIEND GREEN.—The local news is very limited this week. A new species of plague, however, has befallen the Quack Doctors, and an eruption among the "aunts." The only satisfactory solution of the phenomenon appears to be, that a certain pretended physician was arraigned for procuring the circulation of obscene handbills; leaving them at the doors of the dwelling of the citizens, in the principal streets. The grand inquest rapped some of the penny Journals for allowing such matter in their columns, and it is a satisfaction to your readers to know that your columns have never been polluted by inserting such objectionable matter.

Our city spinsters talk of marriages as usual. The most eligible class of men, just now, for conjugal purposes, are the Volunteers for Mexico.

Gun cotton is all the go,—every chemist proclaiming that his is the real simon pure. The annals has just set in. It promises well. By and by, we shall have adventurous apprentices and heroic elder clerks blowing their brains out; a wife may dispatch her husband as Paris slew Achilles, through the heel; for she has only to darn his stocking with a few threads of the detonating worsted, and the first step he takes squashes him like an annihilated pumpkin and sends him into the middle of next week, and he will only find out his mistake as he is going up the chimney or out of the window, to an accompaniment resembling the roar of a squadron of express locomotives.

During the month of January, seventy-eight vessels arrived at this port, from foreign ports and two hundred and eighty-three from coastwise. During the same period one hundred and twenty vessels cleared for foreign ports and one hundred and twenty-six coastwise. The exports of domestic cotton goods from this port, during January was 4317 bales and cases.

The quantity of ice exported during January, 3261 tons. 12,605 emigrants arrived at New York during the months of December and January.

An Irishman fell forty feet into one of the shafts of the Boston water works, and died in a few hours after.

The George Washington steamer, designed to run between New York and Bremen, touching at Southampton, (England), was launched on Saturday. She has four decks, is 1700 tons, 240 feet long, and carries two engines of one thousand horse power each.

The town of Barre, (Mass.) exports annually one million two hundred thousand palm leaf hats, braided by females.

The widow Emerson was found dead in her bed by inhaling the gas of hard coal; her son and daughter was also found senseless in the same room, in a house in Fuller street.

Noah Pierce of Scituate, entered upon the one hundred and first year of his age on Tuesday in good health.

Over one hundred thousand persons have visited the Chinese Museum, since it first opened. It was closed on Saturday.

A public meeting is to be held at Pittsburgh by the friend of Judge McLean urging his nomination to the Presidency.

An assistant engineer at Lunenburg, (Md.) was sent into the cylinder of an engine to clean the flues, and the signal was given for him to come out. Supposing he had done so the engine was put in motion and he was crushed to atoms.

The Mexican papers express strong dissatisfaction with the course of Santa Anna, and warn him against using the army for his own schemes.

"William," said a pretty girl the other day to her sweetheart, "I'm afraid you don't love me any longer." "Don't love you any longer," replied he, "I don't do nothing shorter."

The town of Carman, Yucatan, surrendered with all its arms and ammunition, to part of the American squadron, and on the same day the American flag was hoisted over that place.

A young man at Salem, in the act of splitting leather with a steam machine, had his arm drawn into the works by which it was broken in three places and horribly mutilated.

It is fashionable for captains and owners to give the names of their wives, daughters and sisters to their vessels, as a sort of family compliment. A man down east christened his craft the Virago; another called his the Vixen.

Hon. Abbot Lawrence has presided to the mechanic association of the city of Lowell the sum of one thousand dollars.

Spencer, the pious swindler, has been sentenced to one year's confinement in the State Prison.

Gen. David S. Jones of Greenfield, has been unanimously elected Major General of the 3d Division of the Massachusetts volunteer militia.

A British squadron has gone to Japan to open commercial communications. As the United States and France have both failed in pacific endeavors to accomplish this end, we presume England will make a Chinese affair of it and open her batteries if they refuse.

A letter from an officer of the third Dragoons (mounted riflemen) dated Camp Page, mouth of the Rio Grande, says, "out of four hundred horse only fifty has arrived; of our company of seventy, all lost but six."

Hon. John Davis was elected by the House of Representatives as Senator in Congress for six years from the fourth of March next.

A drunken negro in Stafford, (Ct.) murdered a man by the name of West, by striking him on the forehead with an axe, cleaving his nose down, and breaking the skull between the eyes.

A gentleman was relieved of one hundred dollars while lying in his berth on board the steamer Worcester.

Mr. Joseph A. Whitney, a real estate broker, committed suicide in his house in this city, on Wednesday. No cause is assigned for the act. William B. Miller, an overseer on a plantation in Arkansas, was killed by a young black man whom he undertook to chastise.

I rejoice to see that twenty thousand dollars is to be appropriated to the building a lighthouse on Cohasset rocks.

The Mexican Congress, on the 9th ult., after a stormy session, approved the first section of the bill authorizing government to raise fifteen millions of dollars by hypothecation or sale of certain goods of the church. Santa Anna opposed sternly this measure, and it is rumored that the opposition so exasperated his soldiers that they had shot him.

Gen. Worth, with his command, was at Brazos on the 23d. Generals Scott and Worth are to have command of the main and regular army, now concentrating at Tampico. Col. Harney, with five companies of dragoons, was expected at Matamoros on the 21st ult. Gen. Taylor had returned to Monterey. Gen. Wool is in command at Saltillo and the neighborhood. Gen. Scott and staff were at Brazos, to leave in a few days for Tampico. Gen. Patterson was at Tampico on the 23d, with 4500 men. Generals Twiggs, Quitman and Pillow's command included. Gen. Worth is said to be quite unwell. The opinion is almost universal that the movement of the army is to be against Vera Cruz.

Silsbee says, the United States are bounded on the north by aurora borealis, on the east by sunrise, on the west by no place, and on the south by as far as you have a mind to go.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.
BOSTON, Feb. 12, 1847.

JOHN A. GREEN, Esq.—I feel that I shall not be intruding unnecessarily upon your valuable columns by replying to our friend 'D.' For a great portion of the mischief committed in this world, that notorious nonentity called 'Nobody' appears to be responsible. This incorrigible malefactor is a most valuable adjunct to the staff of 'anonymous' newspaper scribblers, and I regret exceedingly to find our friends the 'Captains' and 'D's' members of this corps.

I see my friend 'D' is at his old tricks again. It is an old game of his party, when they cannot win a battle in a fair stand up fashion, to attempt to win it by guile. I regard it as cowardly in the extreme, to attack Ex-Governor Morton's character, or any other man's, anonymously. 'D' thinks I have 'come forward' in defence of his old leader. Not so friend 'D'! My sympathy, please to observe, is not with Gov. Morton or his party officials, in or out of office. Still, I am not disposed to make reflections upon the doings of men in authority, to whom I would always give credit for good intentions, and for wisdom also, when I can. But there are exceptions to this rule,—I can. But there are exceptions to this rule,—occasions which stir the indignation of the most placable, and excite the meekest,—when silence becomes criminal, and remonstrance a binding duty. Such causes for instance as D's 'righteous war.'

It appears that the whole gist of my friend 'D's, alias the Captain's animosity, (which reminds me of one of those elegant similes of a man being 'stung to death by pismires,') is that Ex-Gov. Morton did not turn out 'eight hundred' honest, faithful, and old obliging public servants, and put in their places 'pidgones, juvenile pets, and military 'captains' celebrated for smartness in matters of frauds, bribery, etc. I would ask 'D.' if his old leader did not make some seven or eight hundred 'Justices of the Peace.' Was there a whig among this batch? No. 'The spoils belong to the Victors.'

My friend 'D.' tells us 'he trusts at the close of this administration that Collector Morton will have leave to withdraw, and pursue the fishing business. I cordially agree with him, and trust he will not be the only one that will have leave to withdraw. I hope you and your protégée the Captain will be present when he relinquishes his wand of office, and exclaim 'Finis coronat opus' and testify that nothing in his collectorship became him like the leaving it.

I am somewhat surprised that D. recommends the herring fishing to his idol. Why D., would he not be in danger of getting 'most awfully' pricked with herring bones? You know what you have suffered by following that business for the last ten or fifteen years. I do not agree with you, D., about the fishing business. I trust that Gov. Morton, after being relieved from the official duties attached to his office, and retires to private life, he may long enjoy health and wealth, happy in distributing of the latter liberally to his less fortunate and disappointed fellow creatures, and live to rid himself of the baneful advice of his party friends.

Perhaps I am drawing too largely on the patience of your readers. I will now close by begging pardon for any harsh allusion I may have made, but arguments of this kind sometimes renders it unavoidable.

Now, friend D., as you have informed us what the democratic motto should be in this State in '48, just listen to the whig motto. Keep your present high hand over a faction, which is never industrious except in pursuit of some object of its own; never at ease unless it has all who presume to differ from it under its foot.

Yours,
JONATHAN D. DOLEBEER.

CONGRESS. In the Senate, Feb. 3d, the resolutions of thanks to General Taylor and the army from the House, was taken up and Mr. Webster moved to substitute for the whole resolution:—That the thanks of Congress are due and are hereby tendered to Major General Zachary Taylor, his officers and men, for the fortitude, skill, enterprise and courage, which distinguished the late brilliant military operations upon the Rio Grande. This was agreed to, and the resolution read a third time and passed, yeas, forty-three, nays none, and in this shape returned to the House. The House was all day engaged upon amendments of the Senate to the ten Regiments bill. The amendment in regard to bounties was so amended as to allow $0 acres to those who were called out for less than 12 months, provided they were marched to the seat of war.

Feb. 4th, a bill was reported in the Senate, to extend the Navy Pension bill to five years. The Ten Regiment bill was received from the House, and referred. In the House, the debate was on the war principally, its causes, probable termination, etc.

Feb. 5th, in the Senate, the Committee on Military Affairs made a report that the Senate insist upon its amendments to the ten regiment bill, and disagree to those of the House. A committee of conference was ordered. The three million bill was then taken up. In the House, the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill was taken up and passed, yeas 174, nays 5.

Saturday, Feb. 6th, in the Senate, Mr. Dix presented the preamble and resolutions, from the Legislature of the State of New York, with regard to the existing war with Mexico, and in opposition to the establishment of slavery in newly acquired territories. The three million bill was taken up and discussed after which the Senate went into Executive session. The House was principally engaged on private bills.

In the Senate, Feb. 8th, the House bill to pay interest on the public debt was passed. The West Point Academy appropriation bill was amended and passed. The committee of Conference reported an agreement which they had come to with the House committee in relation to the army bill, which was agreed to in part. In the House, a resolution was offered for expelling the reporters of the Union newspaper, for a false, scandalous and disrespectful report of the proceedings of the House on Saturday. A warm debate ensued for an hour and a half, when the resolution was modified so as to appoint a Committee to inquire who the reporter of the Union was and what member created the disorder. The three million bill of the House was taken up in Committee of the Whole.

In the Senate, Feb. 9th, the Revolutionary Pension bill was passed. The three million bill was taken up. Mr. Calhoun spoke an hour in explanation of his views upon the war. He was in favor of abandoning all offensive operations, and establishing a line, commencing at the mouth of the Rio Grande, thence up the river to El Paso, thence due west, striking the Gulf of California near its head, and holding this line, acting altogether on the defensive. Gen. Cass then obtained the floor. In the House, the three million bill was under debate.

DR. WISTAR'S FREE ALMANAC. This almanac, says the Boston Bee, intended for gratuitous circulation, is better worth the sum usually paid for such works, than many of much greater pretensions. Along with the astronomical calculations, and usual characteristics of an almanac, the pamphlet contains a number of valuable recipes for the cure of certain of the ills that flesh is heir to. A considerable portion of the work is devoted to a consideration of the merits of 'WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY,' in support of which it arrays the certificates of many persons high in the esteem of the community. Besides these, there is a great deal of valuable information upon the uses and operation of this excellent medicine furnished by the proprietor, our very estimable fellow-citizen, Dr. Seth W. Fowle. We commend it to the attention of the public.

From some little experience of our own, continues the editor of the Bee, we can testify to the superiority of the Balm of Wild Cherry, and we have been repeatedly assured by quite a number of our personal friends who have used it with success in pulmonary complaints, the plethoric, asthma, night sweats, etc., that they regard it as one of the most beneficial remedial agent of the time.

THE MACKEREL FISHERY. Very few people are aware of the magnitude of this fishery in Massachusetts. By the return of the inspectors, it appears that the number of barrels inspected by them in the year 1846, was upwards of one hundred and seventy-seven thousand! This is more than a barrel for every family in the State. Gloucester has the largest inspection, nearly forty-three thousand barrels. This vast amount is independent of the very large amount of mackerel sold without barreling.

At Galway, Ireland, strong forces were employed to keep the famishing multitude in order.

RELIEF FOR THE IRISH. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Fitzpatrick preached a sermon, on Sunday last, in Boston, on the subject of the distress of the Irish, and the scarcity of food in Ireland, and called on the Catholics throughout the diocese to do something to meet the awful crisis. In the evening, a meeting of the parishioners was held, of which the Bishop was Chairman, and about three thousand dollars were subscribed in that parish alone. Andrew Carney gave one thousand dollars; Patrick Donahoe one hundred dollars; and other gentlemen gave sums varying from one dollar to fifty.

DEPARTURE. The health of Ex-President Adams having so far recovered, as to warrant the fatigue of a journey, started on Monday last, accompanied by his wife and son, for Washington City. It is doubtful from the nature of his late sickness, whether he will occupy his seat in Congress during the short period it will now be in session.

JURYMEN. Messrs. William Pratt and William Walker have been drawn as jurymen from this town, to attend the ensuing session of the Supreme Court at Dedham next week.

ENGINE PLAY. The Amazon Engine Company of Weymouth, accompanied by a band of music, visited the Vulture Company of this town, last Tuesday, and after playing the respective engines, partook of an excellent collation bountifully provided for the occasion. The Niagara Company of this town, was also present.

SANTA ANNA. The report, that Gen. Santa Anna was shot by some one of his soldiers, is not believed.

LEGISLATURE. A remonstrance has been presented of Josiah Brigham and others against the repeal of the pedlar law; also, a petition for a Railroad from Cohasset to Quincy. Hon. John Davis has been re-elected, by both branches, Senator in Congress for six years from the fourth of March.

A COMMISSIONER FROM YUCATAN. SENOR DON JOSE ROLIRA arrived at New Orleans on the 26th ult., on board a Yucatan schooner, which entered the port under a white flag. SENOR Rolira brings a safe conduct from Commodore Conner, and is commissioned by the Provisional Government of Yucatan to treat with the United States. He was to proceed to Washington in a day or two.

A CARD. A lady of this town wishes us to express her sincere thanks to Capt. Ashley of Company C, Massachusetts Volunteers, for the leniency and kindness with which he treated a relative of hers, a volunteer under his command, who was absent beyond the expiration of his furlough, owing to indisposition. Also for his very courteous and gentlemanly treatment of herself. Such deportment, denoting alike the gentleman and the soldier, will ever be held in grateful remembrance.

EMBARCATION OF VOLUNTEERS. Eight of the companies of volunteers organized in Boston, embarked on Thursday on board the ships Hamburg and Remittance, and the bark Baring & Brothers, preparatory to sailing for Mexico. The company from Charlestown were escorted by several hundred citizens. Some misunderstanding arose with Company B, and they at first refused to embark, but after some explanation from Col. Cushing they left their quarters quietly and marched to the ship.

A woman was recently detected smuggling a lot of fine cavendish tobacco from an American vessel in which she had just landed at Liverpool. The tobacco had been carefully packed in a tin, over which a thin layer of dough was spread, which being slightly baked had the appearance of a loaf. In this manner she attempted to convey on shore about seventy pounds.

Mrs. Borden, of Burlington county, who pretended that an attempt was made to murder her recently, now confesses that it was a hoax! Wilson, who was arrested, has been discharged from prison.

Jacob Foss, Esq. of Charlestown, has advanced $1500 from his private resources for the relief of the volunteers, and is willing to go without his money until the town or country repay him.

The Legislature of Kentucky have balloted sixteen times for a Senator to succeed Mr. Morehead, without being able to effect a choice.

In Russia the police have forbidden all trade or manufacture of cotton powder. The ostensible reason is its dangerous character. In Prussia the artillery committee have condemned the new invention on nearly the same ground upon which it was rejected in England.

Ship-owners are reaping amends for the dullness of freights in a few past seasons. There is not a vessel to be had for love or money.

The Supreme Court of the State of New York has reversed the judgment of the Oyer and Terminer, and granted a new trial in the case of the negro Freeman, who murdered the Van Ness family.

Simon Cunliff has recovered five thousand dollars of the city of Albany, for injuries sustained by him in August, 1840, when the bridge over canal basin, on State street in that city, fell, and caused the death of some thirty citizens, and injured many others. Mr. Cunliff had his hip broken.

The difficulties between the United States and Brazil have been amicably adjusted at Washington between Mr. Buchanan and the Brazilian minister.

Hon. Alpheus Felch, (dem.) Governor of Michigan, has been chosen a United States Senator from that State, for six years from fourth of March next, in place of Hon. William C. Woodbridge, (whig) whose term expires with the present Congress.

A CARD.

The Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, tender their thanks to the Vulture Engine Company, No. 4, for the kind manner in which they received them and for the liberal collation with which they supplied them, on their late visit.

Snow Hill, Feb. 21, 1846.

Mr. Seth W. Fowle:
Sir—Please send me as soon as possible, another lot of Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry. I have been selling this valuable medicine in this town for many years. It has proved to be highly useful in many cases. Much has been said and written in commendation of this article, justly too. I think from my observation of its effects upon others, and my own experience in using it. Some months since, having a bad cold, I lost my appetite and strength, and my health was much impaired. I tried this Balm; to my satisfaction and joy, when I had taken two bottles, my cough was removed, my appetite returned, and my strength and general health restored. Whenever I have any symptoms of the kind return, I immediately resort to this medicine, and find it to have the desired effect. I believe this is one of the best medicines in the world for coughs and incipient consumption, and that invalids in more advanced stages may be relieved by using it.

Signed by
LEVIN TOWNSEND.

We say unhesitatingly, and without a blush, this medicine "can't be beat." Beware of counterfeits. None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

For sale in Boston by S. W. Fowle, 138 Wash. St. Quincy, by Mrs. E. HAYDEN.

Snow Hill, Feb. 21, 1846.

Mr. Seth W. Fowle:
Sir—Please send me as soon as possible, another lot of Wm. B. Fowle's Wild Cherry. I have been selling this valuable medicine in this town for many years. It has proved to be highly useful in many cases. Much has been said and written in commendation of this article, justly too, I think from my observation of its effects upon others, and my own experience in using it. Some months since, having a bad cough, I lost my appetite and strength, and my health was much impaired. I tried this Balsam; to my satisfaction and joy, when I had taken about half a bottle, my cough was removed, my appetite returned, and my strength and general health restored. Whenever I have any symptoms of the kind return, I immediately resort to this medicine, and find it to have the desired effect. I believe this is one of the best medicines in the world for coughs and incipient consumption, and that it is in more advanced stages may be relieved by using it.
Signed by
LEWIS TOWNSEND,
Farm of Townsend & Upham.
We say unhesitatingly, and without a blush, this medicine "can't be beat." Beware of counterfeits.
None genuine, unless signed L. BUTTS on the wrapper.
For sale in Boston by S. W. Fowle, 138 Wash. St. Quincy, by Mrs. E. HAYDEN.

MARRIED.
In this town, Mr. JAMES A. HARRIS to Miss HARRIS A. PACKARD.
We were kindly remembered.
To the groom and the bride,
Of their circle the pride,
May life its blessings lend them—
And joy's golden rays,
Gild the close of their days,
And the blessing of Heaven attend them.

DIED.

Quincy, Feb. 13. 3w

To the Hon. Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled:
THE petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Quincy, respectfully represents: That for the convenient transportation of Granite from the Quarry in Quincy, to a suitable place of shipment, it is desirable to extend a branch of the Granite Railway, located under the Act of April 16th, 1846, and terminating near the house of William Wilson in said Quincy, from the point of termination to the point at the water side, below the Turnpike Bridge; Therefore your Petitioners pray that they may be incorporated, with the right to extend said branch, for the purpose of conveying said granite, and passengers, and to construct suitable Depots therefor.
JAMES NEWCOMB and others.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
IN SENATE, Feb. 9, 1847.
ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their petition, with the Order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerk of the Town of Quincy, and on the Clerk of the Old Colony Rail Road Corporation, and the Clerk of the Quincy Canal Company, ten days at least before the first day of March next, and to publish the same in the Quincy Patriot once, and in the Daily Advertiser three times, the last publication to be five days at least, before the first day of March next, that all persons interested may then appear, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said Petition should not be granted.
Sent down for concurrence.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled:
YOUR Petitioners, inhabitants of the North part of the town of Scituate, respectfully represent that public convenience and necessity require the construction of a Railroad, from Scituate Harbor to Quincy, commencing at the Harbor near the Union School House, thence through the North part of Scituate to Cohasset, thence through Hingham, East Weymouth, Braintree, at or above the head of navigation, thence to connect with the Old Colony Railroad in Quincy, following as near as may be from Cohasset, the survey of Messrs. Pratt and Holmes, in the year 1845, being the same route from Cohasset mentioned in the petition of Laban Southern and others, now before your Honors, upon which an order of notice has been passed, returnable on the 25th day of February next, and your petitioners respectfully ask to be incorporated either by themselves, or united with said petitioners from Cohasset, for the purpose of constructing a Railroad from Scituate Harbor to Quincy.
And, as in duty bound, will ever pray.
GEORGE M. ALLEN and others.
Scituate, January 29th, 1847.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
IN SENATE, Feb. 10th, 1847.

Public Notice.
THE proprietors of the Quincy Bookstore present to the public, sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can never be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.
To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.
Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.
Our stock of STATIONERY is ample sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.
We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that our prices can be made to suit all.
We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods, which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.
We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.
We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.
In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.
To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

Give all men their due, from the greatest to least,—
But one we all honor and cannot o'erstate,
'Tis that little man who tho' little is great.

And first, as a soldier he's great in the field;
For temperance he bears both the sword and the shield;
Who battles her foemen through County and State?
That brave little man who tho' little is great.

He marshals her armies and leads in the van
And vict'ry still smiles on the brave little man;
His shot is as sure as the rifle of fate,
That brave little man who tho' little is great.

And next as a priest he is found at his post,
And fervently prays for the whole human host;
No obstacles ever his ardent abate,—
That good little man who tho' little is great.

The blessings of thousands, so justly your due,
Are offered with prayers, Father Thompson, for you;
The man who for others toils early and late,—
That good little man who tho' little is great.

When souls in the balance of Justice are weighed,—
For bodies count nothing when souls are assayed,—
The soul of our Thompson will prove sterling weight,
That good little man with a soul that is great.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE FIRST.

The first, the first!—oh! I thought like it
Our after years can bring,
For summer hath no flowers so sweet
As those of early spring.

The earliest storm that strips the tree
Still wildest seems and worst;
Whate'er hath been again may be,
But never as at first.

For many a bitter blast may blow
O'er life's uncertain wave,
And many a thorny thicket grow
Between us and the grave;

But darker still the spot appears
Where thunder-clouds have burst
Upon our green, unlighted years—
No grief is like the first!

Our first-born joy,—perchance 't was vain!
Yet, that brief lightning o'er,
The heart, indeed, may hope again,
But can rejoice no more.

Life hath no glory to bestow
Like it—unfallen, uncurst;
There may be many an after glow,
But nothing like the first!

The rays of hope may light us on Through manhood's toil and strife,
But never can they shine as shone
The morning stars of life;

Though bright as summer's rose wreath,
Though long and fondly nursed,
Yet still they want the fearless faith
Of those that bless'd us first.

Its first love deep in memory
The heart forever bears;
For that was early given, and fier—
Life's wheat without the tares.

It may be death hath buried deep,
It may be fate hath curst;
But yet no later love can keep
The greenness of the first.

And thus, whate'er our onward way,
The lights or shadows cast
Upon the dawning of our day
Are with us to the last.

But, ah! the morning breaks no more
On us, as once it burst,
For future springs can ne'er restore
The freshness of the first.

ANECDOTES.

A young lady of high accomplishments, in the absence of the servant, stepped to the door on the ringing of the bell, which announced the visit from one of her admirers. On entering the room, glancing at the harp and piano which stood in the apartment, she exclaimed, "I thought I heard music—on which instrument are you performing, Miss P?" On the gridiron, sir, with an accompaniment of a treaty, answered she; "my mother is without help, and she says that I must learn to finger those instruments sooner or later, and I have this day commenced taking a course of lessons."

The phrase "The Devil to pay," doubtless originated in a Printing Office on some Saturday night's settlement of weekly wages. "John," says the publisher to the bookkeeper, how stands the cash account? "Small balance on hand sir." "Let's see," rejoined the publisher, "how far will that go towards settling the hands?" John begins to figure—arithmetically, so much due to Perkins—so much to Typus—so much to Grubbe—and so on through a dozen dittos. The publisher stands aghast. "Here's not money enough by a jug full." "No, sir—and besides, there's the devil to pay."

"My dear Murphy!" said an Irishman to his friend, "why did you betray the secret I told you?" "I betraying you call it?" "Sure, when I found I wasn't able to keep it myself, didn't I do well to tell it to somebody that could?"

"We must be unanimous," observed Hancock, on the occasion of signing the Declaration of Independence, "there must be no pulling different ways; we must all hang together." "Yes," added Franklin, "we must all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately."

When the Duke de Choiseul, a remarkably meagre man, went to London to negotiate a peace, Charles Townsend being asked whether the French government had sent the preliminaries of a treaty, answered, "I do not know, but they have sent the outline of an ambassador."

"Don't talk to me about your gun cotton," said a chap to a friend, "I'll put my wife against any invention for blowing people up; get her to set down opposite San Juan d'Ulloa and the Mexicans would leave instantly."

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, Feb. 10th, Mr. Yulee offered a resolution to exclude the Editor of the Union newspaper from the floor of the Senate for an attack upon the dignity of that body, in an article in his paper of the 9th inst., upon the Army bill; and also to exclude the reporters of that paper for a one-sided report of the proceedings on said bill. The three Millions Peace Bill was then taken up, and Mr. Cass spoke at length upon it. He was in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war, and opposed to the plan laid down by Mr. Calhoun. In the House, Mr. Washington Hunt reported a bill for the relief of Ireland. The Committee of the Whole then took up the three Million bill. The Committee rose, and the report of the Conference Committee on the Ten Regiment bill was adopted. It gives the President power to appoint officers of regiments below the grade of field officers, in the excess of the Senate, and without the necessary subsequent confirmation of the Senate.

In the Senate, Feb. 11th, the three Million bill was under discussion. In the House, the three Million bill was taken up. A message was received from the President, announcing that he had signed the Ten Regiment bill. The joint resolution of thanks to Gen. Taylor, with amendment from the Senate, was received, and referred.

In the Senate, Feb. 12th, a bill to establish a United States Court at Key West, was reported, and passed. The bill to make attachments issuing from the United States Courts conform to the laws of the States, was passed. The resolution to exclude the editors and reporters of the Union from the privileges of the floor and the reporters' galleries, was taken up, and a debate ensued. In the House, Mr. Rathbun offered a resolution requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate forthwith the names of the secret agents or inspectors employed by the Department, which occasioned some debate. A resolution was then adopted to close the debate on the three Million bill, on Monday.

In the Senate, Feb. 13th, Mr. Ritchie was expelled from the floor by a vote of 27 to 21. In the House, a message from the President of the United States was received asking that provision might be made for the appointment of field officers in the new regiments—also, recommending a tax on tea and coffee, and a reduction in the price of the public lands. The message is quite a long one, and after being read by the Clerk, was referred to various Committees.

In the Senate, Feb. 15th, Mr. Webster offered two resolutions: first that the war with Mexico ought not to be prosecuted for the acquisition of territory to form new States to be added to the Union; and second, that our Government ought to signify to Mexico that the United States does not desire to dismember that Republic, and is ready to treat for peace, for a liberal adjustment of boundary and for a just indemnity for claims due by either Government to the citizens of the other. The bill to provide for the construction of four steam frigates was passed. The bill to extend naval prisons for five years was passed. The three Million bill was then taken up. In the House, the three Million bill was taken up, and sundry amendments were rejected. Mr. Hamlin proposed an amendment to the Wilmot Proviso, which was adopted, 110 to 89. The bill as amended was then read a third time and passed, 115 to 105. The bill for the admission of Wisconsin into the Union was then taken up.

In the Senate, Feb. 16th, resolutions of the Legislatures of Ohio and Pennsylvania against permitting slavery in any territory acquired by or annexed to the Union, were presented. Mr. Benton reported a bill to organize the ten regiments into brigades and divisions. The appropriations for dry docks at Kittery, Philadelphia and Pensacola were passed. In the House, the bill for the admission of Wisconsin into the Union was passed. The bill to regulate the appellate jurisdiction of the Court of the United States, was passed.

The House of Representatives of Pennsylvania have passed an act rooting out the remains of Slavery in that State, and placing it on the same footing with Massachusetts, prohibiting aid for the return of fugitives.

The Legislature of Virginia have requested the Governor of that State to return to the Executive of Vermont, the resolutions adopted by the latter State, on the subject of the Mexican war and slavery. The same disposition had previously been made of similar resolutions from Maine and New Hampshire.

Dr. Edson, the Living Skeleton, who has lately been exhibited in various places, died in New York, of pulmonary affection.

The Government of Uruguay, (South America), have abolished slavery throughout that republic. The owners of slaves are to be reimbursed at the public expense.

Mr. ADAMS IN CONGRESS. A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune writes the following under date of Feb. 13th:—

Quite an interesting episode occurred in the early proceedings of the House to-day. Soon after 12 o'clock, while Mr. Washington Hunt was addressing the Committee in a speech on the Loan Bill, John Quincy Adams entered the House. Immediately Mr. Hunt suspended his remarks, and the House with one unanimous sentiment rose to receive the venerable and venerated Patriot, Philanthropist and Statesman. Mr. Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, who has occupied previously this session the former seat of the Representative from Quincy, escorted him to his chair. He relinquished this seat to Mr. Adams, after having addressed him, through the Speaker, in a few eloquent and pertinent remarks; to which Mr. Adams made appropriate response—thanking Mr. Johnson for his courtesy, and expressing to the House his great satisfaction in meeting them again at his cherished post. Members of both political parties, with a common feeling of entire gladness, gathered around him and tendered their congratulations on his recovery. Mr. Hunt made also, in his speech, proper allusion to the scene.

SHOCKING DEATH. We learn that the brakeman attached to the freight train of the Fall River route, which passes over the Old Colony track, came to his death in a most shocking manner on Thursday forenoon last. It is supposed that after he left the Depot at Neponset (Dorchester) he got upon the top of the cars for some purpose, and, forgetting the bridge upon Squantum road, was struck on the back, thrown between the baggage cars, and carried several rods, breaking his limbs, severing one leg, and otherwise mutilated his body. There was lie in him about fifteen minutes afterwards. The accident was not discovered by the Engineer until he had gone about five miles, when he promptly returned to his relief, but, alas! the vital spark was extinguished. We learn that he was an Irishman, about forty years of age, has a wife and family residing at South Boston, and esteemed as an industrious and respectable citizen.

BANK MATTERS. We cannot yet believe that the Plainfield Bank (N.J.) is in so bad a state as at present represented. We have too high an opinion of the principal stockholder, M. Y. Beach, Esq., that anything connected with that institution, and over which we believe he exercised the closest scrutiny, has been wrongly managed. That he has the most liberal personal enemies, and that too without a cause, we fully believe; and time will show that their vile proceedings will return to their shoulders with a despicable burden.

HISTORY OF DEDHAM. We see it stated that Dedham Mass., proposes to publish a general history of Dedham from its first settlement to the present period. In no better hands could this important labor be confided, and the result will prove that ample justice and unflinching research has been given to the work. We trust that such an interest will be felt in the enterprise that the compiler will be well repaid for his time and labor. Of all writers the historian should reap a rich harvest. Subscribers gladly received at this office. Price, fifty-cents per copy.

NEW ENGLAND WASHINGTONIAN. It is some time since we received a copy of the Washingtonian, but we cannot believe that our old friend Potter has forgotten us, and must therefore attribute the negligence to the person who has charge of the mailing department. "Should auld acquaintance be forgot," etc.

GENERAL COURT. In the Senate, the report that it is inexpedient to legislate on the petition, or an alteration of the law which compels parents and grand parents to support children and grand-children when covers, was accepted.

A bill was reported to continue in force the act to incorporate the Plymouth Institution for Savings, and to change its name.

The House, proceeded to ballot for a preacher of the next election sermon, and after two ballottings, no person having a majority of the votes, a motion, the reverend gentleman having the highest number was declared to be elected, and the honor fell upon the Rev. Dr. A. H. Vinton.

Petitions of J. Cutts Smith and others of Boston, and fifty-one persons of Lowell, for exemption from taxation to pay for any expenses caused by the use of intoxicating liquors have been presented.

FOR MEXICO. The bank Baring Brothers went to sea last Thursday, on board of which were companies A and D of the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers for Mexico. Three of our townsmen, fired with the spirit of war and the honor of our country, have gone to sustain the military valor of the United States on the plains of that ill-fated Republic. We hope they may return and enjoy many years of happiness.

The other companies, composing the Regiment, will sail in a few days.

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD. We learn that, at a late meeting of this Corporation, they adjourned without day, having been convinced that it was impossible to progress with their route. We did not expect this result, and may have been wrongly informed. Many petitions have already been presented to the Legislature for a railroad over a part of this route, but we rather think that too many irons in the fire will be the means of frustrating all of them.

MEXICO. There is no later news from this country, and there will not be until the large number of volunteers on their way shall have arrived and are ready for duty.

ASHORE BUT SAFE. The ship Dublin, which went ashore near the Glades (Cohasset) last Wednesday, was got off without having sustained much damage. The vessel has been towed to Boston.

THE NEW LOAN. The Secretary of the Treasury has advertised proposals for a loan of eighteen millions, under the late law. Bills will be made until the 16th of April.

In Aroostook County, (Me.) the snow is five feet deep on a level. The teams in that vicinity are leaving the woods, the body of snow being too great for operating to advantage.

There are now seventeen square rigged vessels at Norfolk, (Va.) loaded, or to load, with corn, for Europe. They will carry the bulk of 315,000 bushels. Upwards of 400,000 bushels have been shipped from Norfolk within four weeks.

Mr. Martin Gay, who left West Dedham on the 12th inst., with a wagon load of potatoes, for Boston, has not been heard of by his friends since.

The late Judge Davis of Boston, was the last surviving member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of Massachusetts.

The Legislature of New Jersey has unanimously repealed the charter of the Plainfield Bank, to take effect immediately, and appointed receivers to settle its business.

A ship builder said to be from Belfast, (Me.), recently visited a house of bad repute in Boston, and was robbed of twelve hundred dollars and a gold watch, by two lackmen, who took him away while he was intoxicated. The same man is said to have been robbed before of about eighteen hundred dollars under similar circumstances.

Polly Bodine, who has been tried for the murder of Mrs. Housman, of New Jersey, in which case the jury could not agree, it is now believed will soon be discharged on nolle prosequi. Justice must hang her head and weep that a jury cannot be found to sustain her.

Never enter a sick room in a state of perspiration, as the moment you become cool, your pores absorb. Do not approach contagious diseases with an empty stomach, nor sit between the sick and the fire, because the heat attracts the thin vapor.

On the first of February, at Franconia, (N.H.) the spirit thermometer indicated twenty-five degrees below zero, and the mercury thirty below.

The number of male adults convicted of crime in France, was, in the last returns, as twenty-three in every ten thousand.

At Galway, Ireland, strong forces were employed to keep the famishing multitude in order. A Yankee captain who took out a cargo of corn, says, while taking it from the ship, the poor followed the drays in hundreds, picking up and eating the odd grains of corn that fell on the pavements.

The amount of money annually expended for cigars smoked in the United States, is near ten millions. How many dollars pass off in smoke!

The Governor of Pennsylvania, in his late message, alludes to the frequency of divorces granted by the Legislature. In the last thirty years, one hundred and forty-eight divorces have been granted, and of this number, forty in the last two years.

A person connected with an Immigration Society, has received orders from England to reserve one hundred and fifty thousand acres of land he has in Western Virginia for settlers from Wales, who are expected out in the spring.

The democrats of the Missouri Legislature have passed a resolution recommending Thomas H. Benton, as the proper candidate of the party for the next Presidency.

In the Baltimore prison there is an old negro who was convicted forty years ago of the murder of his master, and was sentenced to be hung, but which was commuted to imprisonment for life.

A number of workmen are still employed at Caldwell's Landing, on the Hudson river, (N.Y.) pumping out the coffer dam which is supposed to inclose the vessel containing Capt. Kidd's money jars!!!!

A number of the Oregon Spectator newspaper contains the announcement of five marriages, and has four applications for a divorce!

A general Convention of Physicians from all parts of the Union is to assemble in Philadelphia in May, with a view of elevating the standard of Medical Education, and making it uniform in all the Colleges.

Petitions are going in to the Legislature, praying that Massachusetts will secede from the Union. A better way would be for all the uncomfortable ones in the State, to pack up and move down to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where the Tories went in the Revolution.

Seventy-six democrats have been elected to the House of Representatives of Maine, which is a majority of a full house. Three vacancies yet remain. The democrats have five majority in the Senate.

It is said that there are on the government pension list (not including navy pensioners) 27,600 names, of whom 6165 are in the State of New York.

The Hon. William Williams, President of the Senate of Maryland, has generously offered a donation of one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of land, in aid of establishing a proper Agricultural School.

A CARD.
The undersigned, members of Company A in the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, return to the citizens of Quincy their warmest thanks for the kind-ness extended to them by their social and timely donations previous to their embarkation for a foreign clime.

This manifestation of liberality on the part of their townsmen awakens in their hearts a spirit of pride as well as of gratitude, and will cheer them on in their hours of danger when far from their firesides and their homes.

In obeying the calls of their country at this crisis, they feel that they have done no more than their duty, and they trust that the old town of Quincy, so long distinguished for the patriotism of its citizens, will have no cause to blush for her humble representatives on the hostile fields of Mexico.

S. ADAMS, Secretary of the Board.

The members of the Social Singing Society are requested to meet at the Lyceum Room, TO-MORROW EVENING, at half past six o'clock. And all others who feel an interest in the pleasing exercise of Church Music, are invited to meet with us. The ladies are most respectfully invited.

JOSEPH FIELD, Secretary.

A public debating Temperance Meeting will be held in the Temperance Reading Room, THIS EVENING, at half past six o'clock.

How far is it consistent for temperance people to patronize express wagons and other vehicles in which intoxicating liquors are frequently brought into town? Is it consistent for temperance men to vote for, as town officers, those who traffic in, or use as a beverage, any intoxicating liquor?

The public are invited to attend.

JAMES M. WADE, Secretary.

The Selectmen of Quincy give notice to persons having business with the Board, that they will be in session at their Room in the Town House, the LAST SATURDAY in each month, until further notice.

Valuable Estate for Sale.
PURSUANT to a license of the Hon. Court of Probate for the County of Norfolk, will be offered for sale by public auction at the premises, in Weymouth, on TUESDAY, the 16th day of March next, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all the right and interest of the several children of Richard Blanchard, late of Weymouth, deceased, the whole of whom are minors, and to about thirteen acres of land, a part of which is excellent, and is well proportioned as to Mowing, Orchard, Pasture and Salt Marsh, together with the late Dwelling-house, Barn and Out buildings of the deceased standing thereon.

The proximity of this estate to the sea renders it peculiarly valuable for many purposes. It circumscribes more than one-fifth of a mile on the bank of the Weymouth Fore River, which affords unusual advantages for sea manure to fertilize the soil. It is an advantageous situation to prosecute the fishery business, or the wood and lumber trade, and is a healthy and delightful place for a mechanic, or any one who wishes to devote a part of his time in the cultivation thereof.

The widow of the deceased, whose lower life has not been assigned her in this estate, will join in the deed of conveyance by a release of her right of dower or otherwise, which will secure a perfect title to the purchaser. Conditions will be easy, and made known at the sale.

PAULINA BLANCHARD, Guardian.
N. B. Any gentleman wishing to examine the premises is referred to Edward Blanchard, residing near the place.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot
NOT TILL THEN.
When the poles of the earth meet and jingle,
When Heaven and Hell become one,
Then Freedom with Slavery may mingle
And wed in the face of the sun,
Not till then.

For the poles are not farther asunder
Than Freedom and Slavery are now;
When Heaven and Hell shall knock under,
Then, Freedom and Slavery may bow,
Not till then.

Great Jefferson's voice is still crying,
"All men are born equal and free";
When Truth in her last ditch is dying,
May mortals reverse the decree,
Not till then.

For Freedom and Truth are united,
While slavery and falsehood are one,
And 'till the down trodden are righted
The contest will never be done,
Not till then.

House to house the oppressors are joining
In hopes to beat Liberty down;
When heaven shall bless their designing
Success their vile efforts may crown,
Not till then.

Patrick Henry! your words are still winging,
The grave could not stifle your breath;
Nor e'er shall their echoes cease ringing
'Till Liberty triumph—or death,
Not till then.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE DAUGHTER'S REQUEST.

Father, they tell me to-night thou'lt bring
A bride to our home of sadness,
And the halls of mourning again will ring
With the sound of mirth and gladness.
Father, my heart is sad—and wild
With anguish, my brain is reeling;
Nay! frown not thus on thy motherless child,
But bear with this burst of feeling.

Thou know'st, on my mother's grave the flowers
Of a year have scarcely started;
Thou chide me not, if in this sad hour,
I weep for the dear departed.
O, hear with the gushing tears awhile,
For my heart is oppressed with sadness,
And then to-night I will strive to smile,
And wear a look of gladness.

Father!—a boon I ask—'tis all Thou may'st grant to a heart thus riven;
'Tis the image that hangs in yonder hall,
Of her who is now in Heaven!
That beautiful face so sweetly mild,
With its look of gentle meekness,
Hath a power o'er the heart of her erring child,
In its wildest moments of weakness.

And to-night, when those maddening thro's arise,
Which my spirit of peace is robbing,
I will gaze in the depths of those soft dark eyes,
Till it stilleth my heart's wild throbbing!
They tell me, she thou wilt bring to night,
Is fair as a poet's vision;
A creature with form and face as bright
As they who people Elysium,

But it swelleth my heart with painful thrill,
That the image of another,
Ere her kiss is cold on our lips, should fill
The place of my sainted mother.
But grant me the boon I ask, and though
Each fibre with grief is aching,
Thy beautiful bride shall never know
That the heart of thy child is breaking!

WEEP NOT.

Oh! weep not for the joys that fade
Like evening lights away;
For hopes that like the stars decayed,
Have left thy mortal day;
For clouds of sorrow will depart,
And brilliant skies be given;
And though on earth the tear may start,
Yet bliss awaits the holy heart,
Amid the bowers of heaven.

Oh! weep not for the friends that pass
Into the loneliness grave,
As breezes sweep the withered grass
Along the restless wave;
For though thy pleasures may depart,
And darkness days be given;
And lonely though on earth thou art,
Yet bliss awaits the holy heart,
When friends rejoin in heaven.

ANECDOTES.

'Jack,' said a young fellow to his companion, 'what can possibly induce those two old soul-taking duffers to be here to-night at the ball? I am sure they will not add in the least to the brilliancy of the scene.'
'Pardon me,' replied the other gravely, 'for not agreeing with you, but for my part I really think that where there are so many lights of beauty there may be some occasion for a pair of snuffers.'

'Jake,' said an old farmer to one of his mowers, 'do you know how many horns there are in a dilemma?'
'No,' replied Jake, 'but I know how many horns there are in a quart of whiskey!'

Some time since, when the passengers commenced landing from a steamer, which had just arrived, on the North River, a porter stepped up to a country looking chap, and said—'Carry your baggage, sir?'
'No! rather guess not,' was the reply. 'Shan't I carry your baggage?' 'No! I don't want to get any baggage?' The porter looked at him a minute, then he very coolly stepped down and taking hold of one of his feet, said with an air of astonishment—'Why, massa, that's one of your feet aint it? Hang me if I didn't think it was a leather trunk!'

'The last link is broken,' as the loafer said when he dined on a sausage.

MISCELLANY.
From the American Flag of Matamoros.
MY FIRST SHOT.
MESSRS EDITORS:—Allow me in these 'dull piping times' of local literature propagation, to
'let off' a small matter-of-fact reminiscence of
'boyish' precocity in the use and application of fire-arms.
Sitting at the camp-fire a few evenings ago,
I perceived my comrades much disposed for 'nature's sweet restorer'—and not deeming an indulgence in the same prudent under the then existing circumstances, I endeavored to give them, with effect, the following 'eye-opener'.
In my 'boyish days'—how long ago that is,
has nothing to do with it—father scolded me
every morning for not contriving some means to keep our neighbor's horse out of our cornfield at night. Now you must know that this sagacious, deprecating animal was viciously independent in his visits to all out-of-door places
he took a fancy to, and unfortunately for me
and the crop, he fancied our field amazingly—
no fence too high—no gate latch too cunning
for him.
All reasonable suggestions in the way of defences had been made to check his impositions,
but without success; so I finally determined to give him a slight 'greeting', which would compel him to slip out of the premises 'in double quick', and never induce him to show his ugly carcase there again.
Father had a long gun—cousin, I guess, to Uncle Ben's—which had lain next to the top of the house ever since the subordination of 'the flood', had bro't it into our possession; and though not in the best condition for chapparal
fighting, I thought it might answer a discharge
for the aforesaid horse.

After dark, while all the family were in bed
—for I wouldn't have had father know it for the value of my ears—I took down the gun, gave her a rub until she looked almost as bright as a knife blade after a year's exposure, went into the kitchen with a stealthy step, got the powder-horn from behind the door, and by the aid of the fire-light commenced operations.
I think I got the powder down in its place—about a handful. I then cut three pieces of pork rind to fit the bore; but not being fully conversant with the proper ways and means of ramming down all sorts of materials, by reason of this being my first attempt to load, I missed
the rinds about mid-way in their descent, and all my labor and ingenuity was insufficient to ram them down or draw them up. Here was a dilemma—I was frightened—what was to be done? I carefully and profoundly, for a 'boy of fourteen years, cogitated the situation of affairs, and 'them things' in the gun barrel—and 'genius' or strong horse sense coming to my assistance, in the nick of time, I resolved to heat the gun barrel in the exact spot where I supposed the mischievous pork rinds to have lodged, and thus melting away the fat, the rinds would become crisp and easily broken by the ramrod. Swelling with pleasing anticipations of success, and proud of my inventive talent,
I laid the gun-barrel before the fire, and in a sitting posture placed my feet against it, for fear, as the winking time of night had now come, I might from over-taxed mental exertion
in the pursuit of a 'relief', fall asleep, which would now be prevented by the heat being communicated through my shoes to my feet.
How weak is human foresight! I soon felt drowsy, the fire light lost its dazzling brightness, and I became unconsciously lost in the arms of Morpheus and Somnus. How long I remained buried in 'slumbers deep', I can't exactly tell; but certainly long enough to dream of thunder—for I was awakened by a loud report of war, followed by the most piteous cater-wauling that ever shocked weak nerves.

Here was a Cat-astrophe to all my ingenious devices.

The barrel of the gun had become hotly
heated, the powder had exploded, and our unfortunate, favorite tom-cat, reposing in sweet innocence on a 'bee-line', with his muzzle, received the pork rinds full 'among his countenance'.
Father and family were all over the house
in a minute. What an uproar! He stormed.
My shoes 'fell to pieces' without a doctor.
Father, licked me, although I contended that if the Cat's mouth had been open, as it ought to have been in his situation, the whole matter
would have had a rapid digestion, and there would have been an end of it. I haven't been licked since, because, after that last luss, I was,
as I am now.
O. P. H.
N. B. The Cat, I hear, never recovered his beautiful expression of countenance, and his appetite never craves pork rinds. I believe the horse is about as he was.

CUTTING APPLE AND PEAR SCIONS. These may be cut at any time between January and the time of setting. February and March are good months in case care is taken that the scions are well kept. They should not be buried in a wet place and they must not be kept dry. Earth that is not very moist may be covered over them in the cellar, but the scions should be so spread out that the earth may come in contact with each one. Scions cut at this season are set with more ease than such as are cut on the day of setting; for the bark is not so apt to peel.

GRAPE VINE CULTIVATION. Grape vines ought to be trimmed in autumn. November is a good month for this business, but those who have delayed trimming will do well to see to it soon, as it is commonly injurious to trim as late as March.

Trimming may now be saved for propagation. Cut them twelve inches long and bury them in the cellar till the frost is out of the soil; then set them where you intend they shall remain, or plant them in nursery rows where they may be nursed till the vines are large enough for training. Some place their cuttings close together in a rich bed for one season, and take particular care to keep the bed wet by watering and by a covering litter.
In the following season they are transferred to nursery rows. The eye should be left out of the ground, or so near the surface that the bud
may easily shoot out.—Ploughman.

For the Quincy Patriot.
CORRESPONDENCE.
EAGLE RIVER, Lake Superior,
Jan. 15, 1847.

MR. GREEN—The Copper mines of this region, will no doubt, be a place of resort for many persons, for pleasure or profit, the coming season. A few observations concerning them may not be uninteresting.

The copper mines are on the South Shore of this Lake, on what is called Keweenaw Point.
This point runs into the Lake to within sixty miles of the Canada shore, and its territory is about twenty townships (which have been surveyed and the lines established) six miles square; and it will be seen that in so large a field for operations, no monopoly can grow out of it. These mines have been worked enough to convince those who have been here, that there is copper and silver enough to pay for working, with judicious management; although many of the locations will be abandoned and new ones be taken. I have understood that many people in Boston think the masses of native copper which are raised from the mines
at the Eagle River Company's location, are smelted here, and sent to market in the shape of pigs. That is not so. Such persons must take into consideration, that it would require a very large fire to smelt and run into one lump, fifteen or twenty tons of copper, or any other metal, and we have no furnaces here in the woods, seven hundred miles from civilization.
Should any one doubt the existence of such large masses of copper here, he can visit this place the coming season and see for himself.

The month of June is the time to leave New England to visit this region, so that travellers can tarry here several weeks and return the last of August, before the fall winds blow so heavy on the Lakes.
Some travellers have, after visiting the copper mines, left this Lake at the west end and passed up some of the numerous small rivers which flow into it and then down the St. Croix river into the Mississippi, thence down that river to the falls of St. Anthony; then down many hundreds of miles to St. Louis, and back by way of the Lakes to Buffalo. For such a route, a bark canoe is used that will carry four men, and their equipage, viz:—one axe, a rifle, one set of small tools, and an Indian blanket to each man. As for provisions, you can find plenty of Deer standing in the streams you navigate that will hardly move out of your way, and you can tickle as many trout as you wish and eat them afterwards.
Persons that buy stock in the new Companies, about commencing operations, must not look for returns for several years. The nature of the business forbids it. Suppose on the first of April, 1847, a Company commence the business of mining on the shores of Lake Superior.
The vessel comes to anchor one mile from a rocky shore; they succeed in landing their provisions, iron and steel, etc., cooking stoves,
and all other things; they find themselves on shore ten miles from the location they are going to occupy, and no road to it, but a trail

by marked trees, and all these goods have to be packed the whole distance on men's backs, and many men have no other business. The next business is to cut logs and erect cabins to live in, etc.

From what has been said, it will appear that to make much progress into the bowels of the earth the first year, is out of the question.
Some of these packers have carried cooking stoves eight or nine miles into woods, through which a dog can hardly make his way.

The mines at Eagle River have been worked three seasons. Some of their diggings are one hundred and thirty or forty feet deep, directly under the bed of the river, from which we hoist out Boulders of copper and silver, as pure as it ever comes from the mint and more so, for the silver is worth twenty dollars per pound.

The largest lump of silver yet raised here,
weighs a fraction less than six pounds; and
the largest mass of pure copper on this location weighed a fraction less than eighteen hundred.
The whole appearance of the copper region is volcanic, and my humble opinion is that these masses of copper were run into the shape we now find them in a perfectly melted state.

These Boulders of copper are found in our mines among common gravel; between two well defined wall rocks; and also silver as large as eggs are taken from the gravel and after washing, is as bright as coin.

Copper is found here in all the varieties known to geologists. In one shaft a drift-way was made in following a vein of copper ore,
and, as is generally the case, the wall rocks on each side are trap rock; but in this one case,
one wall was of copper so pure that a blast
would make a report like a gun.

Snow has fallen here (according to the account from one location) to the depth of twelve or thirteen feet.

The sun was not seen enough to get an image with the solar compass, in December,
except one day, on this Lake.

Respectfully yours,
O. B. A.

Many hundred country papers are losing concerns, and yet others are started. A western editor begs his patrons to pay up their dues, and says he is *travelling miserably
clad, to be seen out of his own village.*

In Paris there are three hundred and ninety-six newspapers, with seven-hundred thousand subscribers, and in the departments of France,
eight hundred and ninety-eight, with about
three hundred and fifty thousand subscribers.

Which is the cheapest, to hire a room and buy a library, and organize a school for poor children—or pay the damage which such a troop of vagabonds will, in a few years inflict on society?

Persons who are always cheerful and good-humored are very useful in the world; they spread an atmosphere of peace and happiness around them.

There are in Maine about two million five hundred thousand acres of land belonging to Massachusetts.

There are two brothers in Congress, both of them in the House, and both from Philadelphia,
opposed to each other in almost every movement which comes up. They are the Inger-solls, Charles J. a representative from one of the Philadelphia districts, and Joseph R. the representative of an adjoining district in the city. Charles J. is a democrat and Joseph R. is a whig. They are both men of ability and good scholars.

The Massachusetts Court of Common Pleas, has decided that Assessors are liable to fine for negligence of duty in omitting to tax an inhabitant whereby he is deprived of his vote.

A truly extraordinary surgical operation has been lately performed in New York city, by opening the side of the patient and removing the diseased portion of the liver. The patient was a middle aged man, who had suffered severely for many years, and latterly had given up all hopes of recovery.

The German physiologists affirm that of twenty deaths of men between the ages of eighteen and twenty years of age, in Germany,
ten originate in the waste of the constitution
by smoking.

It is stated on credible authority that a notice appeared in a newspaper that the jail
in the place where that journal was published had no tenants and was to let! The ensuing week's paper thus remarks: 'it is now full and overflowing.' So much for advertising.

A man in New York, a short time since,
took a pair of boots to be repaired at a shoemaker's shop. The property was recognized by one of the workmen, from certain marks, as having belonged to a friend whose store was robbed two years ago of a large amount of boots and shoes. The man was arrested.

In Massachusetts, which has about eight hundred thousand inhabitants, there are over one hundred Banks, more than twenty of which are in Boston. In Rhode Island, with a population of about one hundred thousand, there are sixty odd banks. Pennsylvania, with rather less than two millions, has about sixty banks.
New York, with nearly three millions of inhabitants, has more than one hundred and fifty banks.

The color of the mourning dress amongst the Chinese and Siamese is white; with the Turks
blue and violet; Ethiopians gray; Peruvians mouse color; Japanese white; Persians brown, and Egyptians yellow.

The Committee have not had time to complete their Report in the usual manner.

GEORGE BAXTER,
CLIFF RODGERS,
JOHN A. BILLINGS.

Quincy, Feb. 27th, 1847.

Ship Remittance, with four companies of the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, started last Tuesday afternoon and anchored in Nantasket Roads, from which place the bark Baring Brothers has sailed.

Thomas Kelley, a bootmaker of this place, walked to Roston and back again, during the driving storm on Monday afternoon and evening. He went in between four and seven and returned between nine and twelve o'clock in the afternoon. He earned twenty dollars by the exploit.

The Selectmen of Abington have offered a reward of two hundred dollars for the detection of the incendiary who set fire to Capt. Isaac Hersey's Box Factory, in that town in December last.

Martin Guy, whose sudden disappearance from Dedham some days since, has been found, at Portland, (Maine,) and is now at his home.

Counterfeit bills on the Plymouth Bank have lately been passed in Boston.

A man by the name of David Mason was thrown from a hand car on the Fall River road by a stick of wood falling upon the track, on Monday, the 15th inst., and so much injured that he died on the following Wednesday.

The subscriptions throughout the United States for the relief of Ireland thus far amount to one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

LATER FROM THE ARMY. The ship Ondiaka, having on board four companies of the Louisiana volunteers, was wrecked about thirty miles south of Tampico. The soldiers and crew were all saved, but destitute of clothing. The wreck was seized by eight hundred Mexicans.

Gen. Scott was still at Brazos Santiago. The health of the troops at Tampico was good, with the exception of a malignant fever, which was confined to the hospital.

Col. Price had had a severe battle at Chihuahua, with a large force of Mexicans. There was a great loss on both sides, but the Americans finally triumphed over double force, and took possession of the town.

Gen. Patterson had received despatches from Com. Conner, which were supposed to relate to a proposition for peace between Mexico and this country.

To READERS. We are unable to give much of a variety in our columns this week in consequence of the great length of the "Auditors' Report." Advertisers and contributors will thus account for the non-appearance of their favors.

LEGISLATURE. The time, this week, has been principally occupied in the presentation and reception of petitions, the introduction of orders, etc.

CONGRESS. No business of importance has been completed since our last number. Many important bills are in progress before both branches, and as the session closes within a week's time, they will be pressed rapidly forward.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT. At Randolph, on Tuesday morning, the passenger car, stopping to take in passengers, was run upon by the snow plough and engine, and Dr. Hitchcock, of Middleboro', and Mr. Kinnison of Braintree, were killed. They were standing on the platform. The rest of the passengers escaped without much injury.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE. Capt. Samuel P. Bayley, a respectable citizen of South Weymouth, was found dead in his barn about noon, on Saturday last. It appeared from the testimony before the inquest held upon his body, by Lewis Bass, Esq. of this town, that he left his shop about eleven o'clock, went to his barn, and turned out his cattle to water, taking with him a clothes-line with which he was found suspended. At dinner time, he not having returned, and fearing some accident might have befallen him, his son went to the barn and found him hanging and dead. He was fifty nine years of age, possessed considerable property, and had left a wife and six children to mourn the distressing event.

Verdict of the Jury.—That he came to his death by hanging himself, while in a state of mental alienation.

WASHINGTONIAN MASS CONVENTION. A Circular has been issued, calling a Mass Convention of the Washingtonians of New England, at Washington Hall, Boston, on Wednesday next, March 3d, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, "to learn from its members the actual condition of the Washingtonian Cause—to congratulate each other on the abundant success which it has thus far obtained; to give a fuller utterance to that kindly sympathy and social love which has so long and so firmly cemented the golden chain of humanity, and to express our heartfelt thanksgivings for the redemption of ourselves and our brethren, to Almighty God."

The Committee earnestly desire a full delegation from every part of New England.

NOTICES.

Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, are hereby reminded that their Oyster Chowder will be served at the next monthly meeting, March 1st, at seven o'clock P. M., as voted. Honorary, fine and active members are expected to be present.

RUFUS FOSTER, Clerk.

A meeting of the Directors of the Quincy Charitable Society, will be held on TUESDAY EVENING next, (March 24th) at half past six o'clock, at the house of Mr. Eliza Marsh.

S. A. BENT, Secretary.

The Whigs of Quincy are requested to meet at the Town Hall, THIS EVENING, (Feb. 27th,) at seven o'clock, to determine what they will do in relation to the nomination of candidates for Town Officers for the ensuing year.

Democratic Caucus.

The Democrats of Quincy are hereby notified, that a meeting will be held in the Lyceum Room, THIS EVENING, at 7 o'clock, to nominate a list of Town Officers, to be supported at the annual Town Meeting on Monday next and to transact any other business that may regularly come before them.

Per order of the Committee.

WILLIAM B. DUGGAN, Chairman.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held at the Temperance Reading Room, THIS EVENING, at six o'clock, to transact business.

A full and prompt attendance is important.

S. ADAMS, Secretary of the Board.

Temperance Meeting.

Agreeable to a vote of the Union Board, last Monday evening, the friends of Temperance throughout the town are respectfully invited to meet at the Temperance Reading Room, THIS EVENING, at half past seven o'clock, to act in reference to the municipal election on Monday next.

S. ADAMS, Sec. of Union Board.

Rev. Samuel Fox will deliver an address on the subject of Temperance, in Lyceum Hall, next SUNDAY EVENING, (Feb. 28th,) commencing at seven o'clock.

The public are invited to attend.

SETH ADAMS, Sec. of Union Board.

The Selectmen of Quincy give notice to persons having business with the Board, that they will be in session at their Room in the Town House, the LAST SATURDAY in each further notice.

DANIEL BAXTER,
JOSEPH W. ROBERTSON,
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB.

$2 Reward.

A SMALL yellow and white dog was taken up in Washington Street, in this town, and carried off by two persons in a light wagon, on Thursday, 18th inst. The above reward will be paid for the recovery of the same, and a suitable reward for any information to convict the pilferers.

Notice.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

NORFOLK ss. At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, December term, J. D. 1846.

ON the petition of Ebenezer Vinson and others, presented at the September term last past of the Commissioners, praying for an alteration of the public highway in Weymouth, called Randolph street, leading from Pond street in Weymouth to Randolph, by a widening of the same; and also for some alteration in the road in said Weymouth leading from Columbia Square to Main street near the house of Peter Loud.

The Commissioners having caused due and legal notice of said petition to be given to said town of Weymouth and the public, and having viewed said roads and fully heard all parties interested in the prayer of said petition, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that the said public road called Randolph Street should be widened as prayed for.

It is therefore by the County Commissioners, ordered that they will meet at the house of Isaac N. Hollis, in said Weymouth, on Friday the second day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to locate the alterations and widenings of said street.

And that an attested copy of this adjudication and order be served upon the Clerk of the town of Weymouth, thirty days at least before the day appointed for said meeting, that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, in said County, the last publication thereof, to be fourteen days, at least, before said day, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said Weymouth fourteen days before said day of meeting, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE MEXICAN WAR.

The great and mighty Chevaliers are at their tricks again—
They've got a slice of Mexico that cost some thousands slain,
And now they want to fetter it where'er our banner waves,
They mean to make it fast and strong a land of whips and slaves.

They say that slavery is a curse, they know and feel it so,
Then wherefore would they now extend this yet unequalled woe?

The fact is but too evident, where'er their power extends,
They'd sacrifice a nation's weal to gain their selfish ends.

They threaten dissolution if we will not bend the knee,
Oh! let them try that pretty trick then see what you shall see;

Break off their northern bulwark, cut their western guard away,
And if they're worth the taking they will fall an easy prey.

The mine within their bosoms would overwhelm them at a blow,
But take away their guardians they would fall without a foe;
Their threat of dissolution we too patiently have borne,
We dare them to the trial and rebuke their threats with scorn.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

MY LIFE IS ONE SWEET DREAM OF THEE.

Oh! thou art as a seraph fair,
With dove like eyes, and silken hair;
A joy breathes from thy gentle voice,
That bids the mourning heart rejoice.
And I do love thee, Oh! how well,
All weak and poor are words to tell,
Mine thou art in gloom or gleam,
My life is one sweet dream of thee!

The life of fate are hard to bear,
And life is chequered o'er with care,
Yet I would toil the long day through,
From day's first blush, to evening blue,
And never murmur, ne'er repine,
So that I won a smile of thine,
Mine thou art in gloom or gleam,
My life is one sweet dream of thee!

Oh! what were earth? A desert rude—
And what were life? A solitude:
Night had no star, and day no sun,
If wanting thee, thou lovest me;
Like a hunted bird that seeks its nest,
Fly I in anguish to thy breast!
Mine thou art in gloom or gleam,
My life is one sweet dream of thee!

WHAT IS TRUTH LIKE?

Like a gem in darkest cave,
Like a pearl beneath the wave,
Sought for, fought for, by the brave—
Such is Truth—hidden Truth.
Like the sun, whose brilliant ray
Is hidden by a stormy day,
Yet emerges bright as eye—
Like that is Truth—constant Truth.

Like that gem, when Truth is found,
'Tis adored by all around;
In cot, on throne, praise they sound
To the Truth—all worthy Truth.
Like the sun its cheering ray
Fog and mist doth drive away;
Truth will bring us cloudless day—
Such is Truth—the mighty Truth.

ANECDOTES.

Ladies should never indulge in the loquacious cant phrases, that are often in general use. One recently found herself much embarrassed in doing so. She often used the words "nothing else," and the practice became a habit with her. One day the minister of the parish called to see her. She was making a bustle. "What are you making that useless article for?" said he. "Oh! to wear to church," was the reply. "Really," rejoined the good man, "you will not wear that to church, will you?" "I shan't wear any thing else," said the lady. The minister was greatly astonished, and the lady embarrassed.

A certain cook had requested to be indulged with a "day to herself," and her mistress (one of the kind hearted) took care that it should be a long summer day with plenty of light and sunshine, arranging so that Betty might start the very first thing in the morning. Towards noon, the lady inquired at what time the cook had gone. "Ma'am," was the reply, "Betty has not gone at all! She came down stairs and took her breakfast, ma'am, and went up again to bed directly. She's now in a fine sleep."

Old parson Milton of Newburyport, was rather a rough old fellow, and withal a queer looking personage, resembling very much the jack of clubs. About the time that temperance and non-slavery began to bud forth, a committee from his society waited upon him and desired him to espouse those causes. "Shan't do it," said the parson; "when you hired me, it was to preach the gospel, now it's ruin and niggers!"

An auctioneer was busy in crying some goods from his stand as a drunken man passed by—"I say, Mister, may I bid what I please?" said the latter. "Certainly," replied the auctioneer. "Then," rejoined the other, "I bid you a very good morning."

A poor fellow, in his examination the other day, was asked if he had not been in that court before and what for? (He had been up for body stealing) "It was for nothing at all," said the humorist, "honestly rescuing a feller creter from the grave."

A Quaker Preacheress was asked whether the spirit ever inspired her with the thought of getting married? "No, friend," said she, "but the flesh has!"

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business, and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, or Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say, "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

MAJOR WOODCOCK.

Old Major Woodcock used to act upon his favorite maxim. "Hold on, wait a little longer."
It was in fact the secret by which he obtained his immense wealth; and in these days of pushing ahead, perhaps the narration of the major's management may not be inappropriate.

But the old man had his trials. He married a smart bustling woman, the very opposite of himself, whose whole nature seemed to be impregnated with an irresistible desire to go ahead. Now to most people, go ahead and hold back are so directly at variance that the inference might be drawn that a continual quarrelling would be unavoidable. Not so suspicious reader; the two extremes met, and for years it was a standing remark, "how delightfully the major and his wife harmonized."
It was never known which yielded when they stood at opposite points, but somehow, madam seemed to have her way and it was known to a dead certainty the major was not crossed in his.

But away along in coming years, "large oaks
from little acorns grew," and there was Hitty Woodcock, and Susan Woodcock, and Thomas the youngest, a comely youth of sixteen. And now the old major's maxim had often been repeated. Still they would not always "hold on a little longer." Hitty had a beau, who would have him, and when her mother would say, "Now, Hitty dear, if you displease your father you know the consequences," she would perly answer, she should marry to please herself.

The major never objected in words to Sam Sloan's visits, but he used to talk about dashing young men who left the tail of the plough to stand behind the counter, and Hitty
would blush because she knew who he meant.
But Sam kept his "variety store," and it was generally thought made a little over his own support; but still the major insisted upon it
there was no telling about these young men who dress so much, ride often in the cars, and leave their business. Some jealous pated people went so far as to say, Sam had an eye on his future fortune with his wife, but how many believed it is not known. At any rate, about this time, Hitty said to her mother, she should like a little cash for if she ever thought of getting married she believed it was high time she had made a beginning.

The mother was struck with astonishment.
"What," said she, "you don't think of being married this year I hope."
"I thought of it next month," said Hitty, with a down cast air.

"Well, you know your father's maxim of,
"hold on, wait a little longer," sighed out Mrs.
Woodcock, "and I do dislike dreadfully to mention the subject to him."

Hitty cried, and her mother relented; so just before bed-time, as they were seated quietly alone, Mrs. W. began—"I suppose," said she,
"we must do something for our Hitty soon. I rather think she means to get married this fall and you know husband."

"Hold on, I say, wait a little longer," was so audibly emphasized by the old major that it rang
in her ears like an alarm bell. "I tell ye wife, that goat of a fellow is not worth sixpence in the world—now mark my word; in two years time we shall have Hitty and Sam back on our premises. Mark it wife, and if it aint so set me down as no prophet."

"La, Mr. Woodcock," replied the good mother, you are always looking on the dark side of everything; why not believe that our children will make out as well as others?"

"Wait a little longer, and you'll see," said
the major—the same old maxim which so often irritated poor Mrs. Woodcock, but what she was perpetually doomed to hear.

Hitty's marriage portion was meted out notwithstanding, and after some advice from her father, was expended in the showy furniture of the day, and nobody's house in Pineboro' was furnished so richly as Mrs. Sam Sloan's. She gave a party just after the wedding and worse than all, omitted to invite some of her best friends! And here we must turn our attention to another subject upon which the major showed uncommon shrewdness. The Woodcock farm was not considered very valuable; the original cost was only three thousand dollars—

but there was a long three acre strip which ran by the river side, given up to bushes, and unimproved, but still a rich soil, and capable of being productive. For some days, several men were seen examining the fall of water just above the major's premises. There was talk about building a dam and some slight intimations
if land could be reasonably purchased, perhaps a factory on a small scale would be erected.

The major knew the men at the bottom of the affair, and foresaw that his old maxim would be very applicable in coming time. It did not worry him that he rejected the offer of five thousand dollars for his three acres—nor yet that old Captain Standish had sold his lot opposite for such a great sum; he was determined to "hold on a little longer."

Thomas and his sister, as well as their mother, were terribly vexed at their father's proceedings. The whole neighborhood was talking about him.
Mrs. Standish asked Mrs. W. what her husband could mean? and the old captain came in and remarked, his chance had gone by, for it was not at all likely the company would want a whole territory. "Thomas, too, was accosted
on every side with, 'so your father don't mean to sell any of his land; that was a generous offer made him the other day; and even poor Susan, at the singing school, heard at the intermission what a pity it was old major Woodcock was so blinded to his pecuniary affairs."

When the family met, they could not help telling the old man what other people said; but still he remained immovable as a rock, still quoting, "hold on, there will be a city yet."
"Well, but Mr. Woodcock," his wife would say, "half a loaf is better than none: we are getting old and shall never see Pineboro' a city in our day, now had'n't we better do as well as we can with what we have?"
The major hummed a tune for an answer.

In the course of a month the same company
made another proposition, increasing the offer another thousand dollars. The children were now inexorable, "this was his last chance. Old neighbor Miles took them at their first offer; the mania for money took with old Solomon
Blake, who had owned his land for fifty years.
General Try sold his garden, house and all, and thus all was purchased they desired excepting the major's river lot and a stony piece of ground opposite his house, where the sheep grazed;
this was a capital spot for the erection of houses
over-looking the river, and where principal men had resolved to build.

"Now you will sell the old sheep pasture,
won't you father?" said Tommy, why it is really good for nothing, and you, offered a hundred dollars an acre. "Every body thinks you are beside yourself, father," said Susan. Mrs.
Woodcock really shed tears at her husband's perversity. But all was unavailing.

The company began to build. Pineboro' was destined to be a great place. Houses could not be erected fast enough, every mechanic and laboring man within fifty miles seemed to be vying his way to Pineboro'.
As to land there was none to be purchased but by the foot, and old Captain Standish's farm had gone from hand to hand until the original amount paid was quadrupled and more. And now the major saw his time had come. He accordingly put it up at auction, and his river
lot was sold by the foot.

The prices varied, but the amount somewhat exceeded twenty thousand dollars as a whole?
After the sale, the major assembled his family
and asked them how they liked his maxim now?

"La, pa," said Susan, "I was only afraid if you let all the chances slip, you would repent at last."

"And I," said Thomas, "never thought it best to sell the river lot before; at which all laughed at the young man's forgetfulness."

"I hope," said Mrs. Woodcock, "we shall make a good use of our riches, and remember the poor and needy." Major Woodcock took a fresh quid of tobacco.

A year had now elapsed. Pineboro' was known as almost a city; the factories were nearly completed; long streets were filled with houses on each side, and it became necessary to have an overseer to be constantly on the spot, near his business. Major Woodcock's house was near by, and to him he made application to board. The old man having consulted "the women folks," concluded to take him in, and a fine man he proved to be. Mrs.
Woodcock could not get any thing nice enough for him. It made people laugh to hear her say
"he seemed as near to her as Thomas," when he had only been in the family three months.

By this time the river lot was cut in every direction, still came the cry, we have not land enough to build on. The major now put up his sheep pasture, the old stony ground that captain Standish said he refused to buy at five dollars per acre, twenty years ago. It was well fenced out, and upwards of thirty streets it was calculated could be made from it, and with levelling they would be most eligible sites for dwellings.

The first men attended the sale, and it was said that enough money was given that day to cover the sheep pasture all over. Nobody ever pretended to estimate what it did amount to,
but every body said it was incredible to believe that some men should have bid so high.

The major always went home as soon as the sale closed. "Why, father," said Thomas, "how shrewdly you managed. If you had sold when mother and I wished, how much you would have lost." "Never feel him nibble, wait till he has a firm hold, replied the major sarcastically.

Mr. Noble the overseer, was delighted with the sale, he was perfectly satisfied with his bargain, a mere ledge of rocks, at eight cents a foot. Susan said it would be a beautiful location for a house, and in a few days, when he paid for his land, he asked if he could see Major Woodcock and his wife alone a few minutes, and Susan trembled so while he was gone, it was no mystery what his business was.

A large and elegant stone house is now erecting for the overseer, and Susan has the whole planning of the inside work. The Major is delighted with the movement, and Thomas had the promise of a lot opposite, which can be bought back provided Noble's sister fancies
him as much as he does her.

But we must not leave all sunshine resting on the family. Sam Sloan has failed, and Hitty is coming home with him to live as soon as Susan is married, and Mr. Noble thinks he can find some employment for him in the factory. But the major often asked his wife if he remembers his prophecy. "The kind mother, however, is intent on doing good, and of course those of her own household share first in her good will, so Hitty will be received as the daughter still."

Should the above tale reach the eye of any reckless young man or woman who are impatient of restraint and love to follow their own course, let them stop and ponder over how much is contained in the old major's maxim.
"Hold on, wait a little longer."—Saturday

CONVERSATION ON DANCING.

"What can be the possible harm," it is said,
"in going to a ball? We go to a brightly illuminated ball. We have pleasant music to gratify the ear. In graceful measures, we beat time to its cadences in the exhilarating dance.
After having thus passed a few hours of heartfelt hilarity, we retire unharmed to our homes.
Now what real objection can there be to this amusement, which is not founded in ignorance
and superstition?"

This is a very important question, and it deserves a serious answer. To explain my views on this subject, let me suppose that you have a brother about nineteen years of age, a very amiable, correct, and promising young man. He is attentive to his parents, kind to his sisters; you all love him with your whole heart. He is a clerk in a store, and is highly respected by his employers. He has so little selfishness in his nature, and is so willing to sacrifice his own inclinations to oblige others, that while he thus promises to be one of the best and most useful of men, he is consequentially much exposed to be led away by temptations.

Like an affectionate and dutiful son as he is,
he comes to his father some day, and says to him, "Father, there is to be a celebrated ball tonight. All my acquaintance are going, and, if you have no objection, I should like to go also."

"Well, my son," says your father, "what time does the ball commence?"
"Between eight and nine in the evening,"
he replies.

"And at what hour will it close?" your father asks.

"They tell me," your brother answers, "that they will probably go home between two and three o'clock in the morning."

"I suppose that wine will be circulated very freely on the occasion, will it not my son?"
"Why, yes, sir; but I hope that I have resolution enough not to be guilty of any excess."

"I trust you have, my son; but do you know of any who are going who have the reputation of being temperate?"

"Yes, sir; there will be several there, who are known to drink too much wine."

"Will there be many present, who are considered generally dissolute in their habits? so much so, that you would not like to have them
for your acquaintance?"

"There will be some such, sir, I suppose."

"It is rather dangerous," your father remarks, "for a young man to be thrown into such company, in the midst of all the excite-ments of music, and dancing, and wine. It will not be easy to shake off acquaintances you may necessarily form there. Many a young man, in these scenes, commences the road to ruin.
I have, in my experience, known a great number thus lost to virtue, and who have brought hopeless shame upon their parents and themselves. You say, my son, that the ball will break up about three o'clock in the morning.
You can, perhaps, get home and to your bed at half past three. You must rise at six o'clock in the morning, to get the store opened in season. This allows you two hours and a half for sleep—sleep which, from the previous excitement, must be feverish and unrefreshing."

"Now, my son," your father continues, "were I you, I would not go. By going, you will be exposed to many temptations,—the excitement of many dangerous passions. You can hardly avoid forming many very undesirable acquaintances. Many may be there who, having no pleasure but in fashionable dissipation, will be glad to secure you as an associate. When you go to the store in the morning, you will be languid and spiritless; all your energies exhausted. With aching head and bloodshot eyes, and trembling limbs, you will have a day

of mental depression which will vastly counterbalance all the enjoyment of the night, and which will greatly disqualify you for discharging your duty to your employers. When our neighbors have wondered that we should so carefully keep our children away from such scenes of gayety—from amusements which to them appeared innocent and pleasing—we have replied, that it was our conviction, that we could make you far happier by cultivating in your heart a taste for a totally different class of pleasures.

"Therefore, my son," your father continues,
"I would not go. Persevere in the plan of life you have heretofore laid down for yourself.
Come home, and spend the evening in quiet enjoyment with your mother and sisters, or, in the pursuit of some interesting volume acquire a taste for reading. At your usual hour, retire to rest. You will then rise in the morning fresh and vigorous, and in good spirits to go to your duties. And as you see your associate in the adjoining store, who attended the ball, dozing in dejection, and lounging the livelong day at his desk, you will be thankful that you were more wise than to sacrifice so much substantial good for a few hours of midnight merriment."

"By persevering in this course," your father continues, "you will more effectually secure
to yourself the confidence of business men.
Your credit will be better. You will sooner be able to have a home of your own. You will make that home more happy. Your life will glide away with far less danger of your falling before the power of temptation; and consequently, there will be a far brighter prospect of your enjoying happiness beyond the grave."

Deeply fix the resolution in your mind, to indulge in no recreation that is not of an innocent nature, and of a strict moral tendency, and you will exhibit a wisdom productive of immense benefits.

This is, in the main, the argument upon which the objectors to this amusement rely.

They are fully convinced that he who acquires
a taste for ball room pleasure will find his earthly happiness greatly impaired, and will be exposed to temptations which will greatly endanger his eternal well being.

REPORT

OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE, 1847.

The General School Committee ask leave to present to the Town their Annual Report for the year ending February, 1847.

It gives us pleasure to be able to report, that the Schools under our charge, taken collectively,
are in a prosperous condition, and give evidence of interest on the part of the scholars, and zeal and faithfulness on the part of the teachers. During the past year very few complaints have come to the Committee, and so far as we have been able to learn, no difficulty of any note, has occurred in any of the Schools.
A general feeling of confidence and sympathy has existed between teachers and pupils. This is an important consideration, for, without mutual confidence, little good can result from the School however great the talents of the teacher.

But in giving our approbation in general terms, we wish not to be understood, that each school is in as good condition as we could wish to see, or even so good as might be. Many errors might be pointed out, and many improvements suggested; but your Committee have thought it more proper to speak of those things to the teachers and scholars of the several Schools where such suggestions were needed, than to present them in a public report. To particularize, and point out the merits and defects of the several Schools, though it might gratify some, would injure others; and in the opinion of your Committee such a course would do more hurt than good.

To draw comparisons between the different Schools in town, would be unjust, for local causes often affect the Schools either favorably or unfavorably, so that neither praise nor blame can be attached to the teacher. We shall speak of no one School in particular, then, but
of the Schools in general.

In most of the Schools, we have been highly gratified with the reading. The improvement has been very good. A more free and natural style is observed, and a more distinct utterance and more correct pronunciation. We should be glad if there were no exceptions to this—but in truth we must say, that some in all the Schools, and a large portion in some, read in a very low voice, and in an indistinct and careless manner.

In the exercises of Geography and Arithmetic, we were also much gratified with the general improvement. In these branches the examinations were generally long and somewhat critical, but the answers were very prompt, and generally correct. The variety of questions, and the different forms in which they were asked by the teachers and members of the Committee, showed that the scholars were accustomed to think as well as to commit lessons to memory.

In History, and some other branches, most of the classes acquitted themselves with honor,
in the Writing department, with the exception of one or two Schools, the improvement has been only moderate; the same may be said of Grammar.

Singing is practised in all the Schools as an amusement, and a relaxation from other studies. This exercise greatly interests the scholars, and we are happy to say, they have made great proficiency during the past year.

Some parents wonder why greater progress is not made in our Schools, in all the various branches; but when we consider that they are very large, most of them twice too large, we have reason to congratulate ourselves, and to be thankful that they progress so well.

The greatest evil which the Committee have discovered, is a want of animation and interest on the part of some scholars in nearly all the Schools, and of quite a large portion in one or two. This evil we think may be remedied to some extent by increased animation on the part of teachers.

The Primary Schools are generally in good condition—some of them do honor to the town.
This department is of more importance than many have supposed, and deserves more attention than it has received. It is thought by many, that almost any one who can be employed for small wages, will do well enough to keep a Primary School. But the fact is, those infant minds in the Primary Schools need the best of teachers, for there is laid the foundation of all future progress, both mental and moral.

If our children are neglected there, they will suffer from the neglect through all the other Schools, and through all their lives. How important then, that we have the best of instructors in this department. It

The number of scholars in the several Districts are as follows:

Whole No.	Average Attend.	Name of Teachers.
Centre District.
G. S. 132	67 1-2	Mr. Davenport.
I. S. 63	49 1-2	Miss Varnum.
P. S. 62	51	Miss Burbank.
South District.
G. S. 125	58	Mr. Seaver.

THE WAR.

The Mexican war is still prosecuted with vigor, and in this way only will it be brought to a speedy termination. It is useless to dally with the Mexicans in the hopes of inducing them to agree to an honorable adjustment of our difficulties, and even if there was a hope that a treaty of peace could be made, with whom could we treat? The party in power to-day with them, may be on the morrow a party out of power, and therefore, with such a nation, but one course can be pursued, and that is, dictate a peace at the point of the sword.

It is a matter of great surprise, to the intelligent portion of the community, that men can be found in this country, who justify the Mexicans in their aggressions upon our people, and in their seizure of our property; who call them an injured and innocent people, and that the war, on the part of the United States, is unjust. Yet such persons are about us; but they are few and belong to neither political party. They are one by themselves and the cause of Mexico has no warmer advocates even within the walls of its own capital.

Soon after the declaration of Mexican independence, she commenced her aggressions upon our men, property and commerce, and from 1817 to the present time her course towards us has been characterized by a series of outrages which in the eyes of all nations would justify immediate war. The friends of Mexico in this country are fond of the expression in regard to the war that it is to be carried on for the purpose of extending slavery. When you hear this assertion you may be sure that the speaker may safely write himself a dot, as the Mexicans themselves claim to have commenced the war and the Congress of the United States have in their deliberations declared that war existed by the act of Mexico. How then can the war be for the extension of slavery when the United States was no party to the contest.

The diffusion of information among the people will soon set the matter right, and the time is not far distant when the United States will be justified by the great mass of its people and Mexico will find no advocates within its borders, except, perhaps, among political priests whose ignorance of the merits or demerits of the conflict is only equalled by the quiet forbearance of their hearts.

MILTON BRANCH RAILROAD. We understand that the building of the Milton Branch Railroad, which was to have commenced as soon as the weather permitted, is to be suspended for the present to await the action of the Legislature in relation to the route proposed to run from Randolph through Milton and Dorchester to the city. The latter route presenting such obvious advantages it has been deemed prudent to delay the construction of the Milton Branch until the petition for the Independent route is finally disposed of.

CONGRESS. The session came to a close on the 2d inst., and as usual, a great amount of business was hurried through. The military bill was passed, leaving out the Lieut. General. Col. Benton was appointed Major General.

FROM MEXICO. News has been received of the capture of seventy Americans under Gen. Gaines, with their horses, etc. Cassius M. Clay is among the captured. Nothing further of much interest.

PUBLIC HOUSES. There are many places to which the travelling public resort for an agreeable place of recreation, and in these days of temperance, justice compels a notice of the Hancock House in this place. Much has been said, and yet all, irrespective of sectional jealousies, join in laudatory notices of this establishment. Boston papers and their friends who have had a trial, will vouch for the correctness of these notices.

LEGISLATURE. This body transacts quite an amount of business, but it is more particularly interesting to corporations than to the public. Very few bills of a general character have come up as yet.

There was no full moon in the month of February—the first occurrence of the kind for thirty years.

RAILROAD FACILITIES. Norfolk County is destined to have a fair share of Railroads. In addition to the Providence and Old Colony Roads on the borders, and the Dedham, Stoughton, Walpole and Cohasset Branches, the Central Road, through Dorchester, being a continuation of the present Fall River Road from Randolph to Boston by an independent route, as petitioned for by Bradford L. Wales and others, is rapidly gaining advocates and supporters. It is conceded that the convenience and interests of the citizens of Dorchester, Randolph and Milton require the establishment of this Central Road, and in no other mode can Railroad facilities be afforded them. It is equally true that very considerable revenues would be derived from the constant and extensive intercourse of the inhabitants of these towns with the city, in aid of the existing Fall River Road. How far the pecuniary interests of the Old Colony Railroad Corporation may militate with the public convenience and accommodation in this regard is a matter concerning which we are not informed. We do not apprehend that a divorce of the Old Colony and Fall River Roads can materially affect the value of Old Colony Railroad stock, and a strong conviction exists in the community that by such divorce the value of Fall River Railroad stock would be very materially enhanced. This, therefore, is a matter which amid the conflict of their pecuniary interests, those respective corporations may determine. So far, certainly, as the public is concerned, and the convenience of travellers on the entire route from Fall River to Boston is regarded, we know no reason why those communities upon the proposed line of the extended road should be utterly deprived of any facilities of Railroad communication, when such facilities are demanded and would afford a substantial remunerating profit, especially, so long as under the existing arrangements, and, indeed, under any practicable arrangements whatsoever, no accommodations can ever be afforded to those interests in any other mode than by the establishment of the Independent Road.

The amount of money to be raised for Town purposes was referred to a committee, viz: Messrs. Adam Curtis, Urbane Cudworth, Thompson Baxter, William D. Gray and Horatio N. Glover.

The Report of the School Committee was accepted, and the thanks of the Town voted to the members of said committee.

The amount of money to be raised for Schooling was referred to the following Committee, viz: Messrs. Israel W. Munroe, John Glover, Jr., John A. Billings, William D. Gray, Bryant B. Newcomb, James Bradford and George Newcomb, Esq.

Voted.—That the Highways be repaired by labor from the Almshouse.

Voted.—That the Town's Land be improved in the same manner as last year.

Voted.—To pay the Town Clerk thirty-five dollars, and the Town Treasurer forty dollars, for their services in their respective offices the past year.

Voted.—To postpone balloting for a County Treasurer to the adjournment.

Voted.—To authorize the several School Districts to choose their Prudential Committees, and that they select and contract with the teachers.

Voted.—To allow each of the Stewards of the several Engines thirty dollars, and the members the amount of their County and Town Poll Tax.

The subject of petitioning the Legislature for power to organize a Fire Department was referred to a committee, to report at the November meeting, viz: Daniel Baxter, Bryant B. Newcomb, Seth Spear, George Newcomb, 2d, Joseph W. Robertson, John Henry Wood and the Foreman of the Granite Engine Company.

The selling of a piece of Land, near the residence of Charles E. Miller, was referred to the Selectmen.

Voted.—To grant the use of the Town and Lyceum Halls, free of all expense, for temperance meetings, not previously engaged.

Voted.—To instruct the Selectmen to prosecute all violations of the License Law.

The subject of licensing and taxing dogs was referred to the Selectmen for them to report by Laws.

Voted.—That the Selectmen be a committee to aid the petition of James Newcomb and others for a Railroad.

Voted.—That the Committee's Report in relation to the Adams' School Fund be referred to the meeting in April, and that in the meantime it be published in the Quincy Patriot.

Voted.—To remove the Adams Library to a room in the Town House building and fit it up for that purpose.

Voted.—To buy a new Engine to take the place of the Niagara, and Messrs. George H. French, Bryant B. Newcomb and Washington M. French were chosen a committee to make said purchase.

The meeting was then adjourned to the first Monday in April ensuing, to meet at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Dr. Franklin, condemning the propriety of requiring a property qualification for the exercise of the right of elective franchise, said, "I will put a case. A man owns a Jackass worth three hundred dollars—he is then entitled to vote. His Jackass dies, and he is then disfranchised. Now was the man or his Jackass the real voter?"

Hon. John Q. Adams, in a letter written a few years since, declining on account of his health an invitation to attend a Bible Society meeting, thus remarks:—"My testimony of reverence for the Holy Scriptures has been already, on more than one occasion, publicly made, and will be repeated on every occasion upon which it can with propriety be manifested. Of all the societies devoted to piety and charity, there is none higher in my estimation or more adapted to eminent usefulness than the Bible Society."

Deafness is readily cured, in some people, says an exchange, by announcing your readiness to pay them a large sum of money.

No man was ever a loser by good works, for though he may not be immediately rewarded, yet, in process of time, some happy emergency or other occurs to convince him that virtuous men are the darlings of Providence.

There are many hogs in this world with invisible snouts. Their bristles grow inwardly, and their souls wallow in the mire until they become fattened for the devil's pork tub, into which they go after a hard scald.

Set all who are afflicted with Asthma, read the following Letter.

Mr. Seth W. Fowle:

Sir—Having been afflicted for more than thirty years with the asthma, at times so severely, as to incapacitate me from attending to business, and having adopted many medicines without any but temporary relief, I purchased, about three years since, of Mr. Edward Mason, your agent in this city, several bottles of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, from the effects of which I obtained more relief than from all the medicines I had ever taken for that distressing disorder.

I have by the repeated use of your valuable Balsam, been more free of pressure for breath, and oppression on the lungs, than I had anticipated, and indeed conceive myself as cured of this most disheartening malady.

I do most cheerfully tender you this acknowledgment, which you will use as your judgment dictates.

DIED.

In this town, March 2d, Mr. Frederick Stamm, aged 32.

March 2d, very suddenly, of scarlet fever, Henry Thaxter, second son of Mr. George and Mrs. Lucy Newcomb, aged 6 years and 9 months.

To see, in one short hour, decay'd
The hope of future years,
To feel how vain a father's prayers,
How vain a mother's tears,
To think the cold grave now must close
O'er what was once the chief
Of all the treasure'd joys of earth—
This is a parent's grief.

Yet when the first wild throbs are past,
Of such a death as this,
To lift the eyes of faith to heaven,
And think, "Our child is there!"
This best can give the gushing tears,
This yield the sighs that rise and fall,
Until the Christian's pious hope
Overcomes a parent's grief.

Centre District Meeting.

Norfolk ss. To the Clerk of the Centre School District in Quincy.

Greeting:

L. S. YOU are hereby required, in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to warn the inhabitants of the Centre School District, in the town of Quincy, qualified to vote, in Town Affairs, to meet at the Grammar School Room, in said District, on MONDAY, the fifteenth day of March, instant, at seven o'clock P. M., to act on the following matters, viz:

Art. 1st. To choose a Moderator.

Art. 2d. To know if the District will raise and appropriate money for the payment of all charges and expenses attendant upon the suits of the District vs. Charles P. Tirrell and Susan C. Burbank and the suit of A. Kingsbury vs. the District.

Art. 3d. To choose a Committee (if the District determine to raise money) to receive said money of the Treasurer of the Town, when collected and paid to him, and to settle and pay said charges and expenses.

Hereof fail not and make return of this Warrant with your doings thereon, at the time and place above mentioned.

Given under my hand and seal at Quincy, this fifth day of March, A. D. 1847.

CHARLES P. TIRRELL, Prudential Committee.

Quincy, March 5, 1847.

BY virtue of the above Warrant, I hereby warn therein expressed, to meet at the time, place and for the purposes therein named, by publishing a copy of this Warrant in the Quincy Patriot, and posting copies in four public places within the limits of the District, seven days previous to the meeting.

Attest: WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

To the inhabitants of Quincy it is unnecessary for me to say a word of my abilities, or style of getting up a tailor's garment. They have tested my work, and I have no hesitation in saying that I have the honor of working for a majority of the most fashionable and respectable inhabitants of the place. People run no risk in coming to my establishment for their Clothing, for if they do not suit in every respect they need not have them. Besides, they can buy them twenty per cent. cheaper from me than in any store in Boston. All my Cents are made by the best Journeymen Tailors, I ask but one price and my motto is CASH. Howqua's Celebrated Mixture.

198 Washington Street, Boston. The Tea is Good and Cheap! The Coffee is Good and Cheap! Both were never so Cheap Before!! 198 Washington Street, Boston, nearly opposite the Marlboro' Hotel. THE undersigned has been visited by very many thousands, who are recommending their friends to participate in the advantages and excellencies of the Teas continually selling at this Store. The present rates of BLACK TEAS Are 25, 30, 35, and 40 cents per pound, at Retail. The Tea at 25 cents is an excellent article for families. That at 30 cents is strong and sound. That at 35 cents has great strength and fine flavor. That at 40 cents is a Fancy Tea of a Lyon flavor, and has given unusual satisfaction.

GREEN TEAS Are 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 55, and 60 cents per pound. The first, second, and third qualities are all strong and good Teas. The remainder are a well selected stock of Hyson, Imperial, Oolong, or Young Hyson; those rare and rich Cowslip, Imperial and Gunpowder Teas, all helping to you for the fact that they are on the Free List.

The China Tea Company's Teas are 20 per cent. cheaper than any Grocer's in Town. So, visitors from the country, if you wish to save TWENTY PER CENT. on your Teas, call on the China Tea Company. Country dealers and the Trade supplied by any of the Expresses running from Boston, at a slight advance upon the first cost, relying upon having in all cases Full Weight and Taste. 25 per Cent. may be saved by purchasing Teas as above. Address THE CHINA TEA COMPANY, at their Principal Warehouse, 125 Washington Street, Boston.

N. B. Chinese Catty Boxes of one, two, four, six, eight, ten or twelve pounds, for Family use, and for exportation, can be had as above, at the Branch Store, in the Town of Quincy, and be sent by carriage free, to any part of the City or State, upon receipt of the usual Post Office money order.

The Company have in connection with any other establishment in this city or in the neighboring towns, and purchasers are cautioned against this species of fraud. Boston, Feb. 27. 1f

Notice. COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. NORFOLK ss. At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Detham, December term, A. D. 1846—

ON the petition of Ebenezer Vinson and others, presented at the September term last past of the Commissioners, praying for an alteration of the public highway in Weymouth, called Randolph street, leading from Pond street in Weymouth to Randolph, by a widening of the same; and also for some alteration in the road in said Weymouth leading from Columbia Square to Main street near the house of Perez Loud. The Commissioners having caused due and legal notice of said petition to be given to said town of Weymouth and the public, and having viewed said roads and fully heard all parties interested in the prayer of said petition, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that the said public road called Randolph Street should be widened as prayed for.

It is therefore by the County Commissioners, ordered that they meet at the house of Isaac N. Hollis, in said Weymouth, on Friday the second day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to locate the alterations and widenings of said street.

And that an attested copy of this adjudication and order be served upon the Clerk of the town of Weymouth, thirty days at least before the day appointed for said meeting; that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, in said County, the last publication thereof, to be fourteen days, at least, before said day, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said Weymouth fourteen days before said day of meeting, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk. A true Copy of the Adjudication on file and order thereon. Feb. 27. Attest: EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot

POOR ERIN'S WOE.

Awake my harp a mournful sound
Of Erin's woe—for Erin's woe;
Oh may an echo true be found
In every heart 'till all shall feel,
For Erin's woe.

Gaunt famine stalks along the land,
And fathers, mothers, children all
Before his pestilential hand
That ruthless strikes or threatens all
To Erin's woe.

Let Mercy's plaintive voice be heard
To stay the fell destroyer's power;
Let those in plenty's dwelling read
Be generous in the trial hour
Of Erin's woe.

That source of good—all bounteous heav'n—
From whence proceeds the power to give,
To you the ample means has given
To bid your suffering brothers live,
And cease their woe.

And can you coldly hear their wail
And see your brothers, sisters die?
No—fill the bark and spread the sail,
And bid Compassion's offering fly,
To ease their woe.

The feeling heart shall meet return,
The open hand shall clutch a prize;
A world wept over Howard's Urn,
His living spirit ever flies,
To banish woe.

No greater joy can Christians feel
Than this, the mourner's tears to dry;
These sufferers bear our father's seal
And none can sinless pass them by,
Unhelp'd in woe.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

DESTINY.

Sybil! look upon my brow,
Read to me my destiny,
Mark the thoughts that even now
Burn to burst their secrecy.
Many a bright and laughing morn
Cradling in the sigh of sorrow,
Or in lines of light revealing
Wither'd hopes and blasted feeling.
Sybil speak! what'er the spell
Name! for I can bear it well.

Tell of blisses rich and rare,
Wooing hearts to meet them, never—
Tell of all that's bright and fair
Gripped—dash'd aside forever—
Tell of roses pluck'd and withering,
Storm clouds in the blue sky gathering,
Serpents coiling round the bower,
Blasphemy and falling flower,
Sybil speak! what'er it be,
Read to me my destiny.

I can nerve to meet the scorn
I can bear the scorching flame—
'Tis but once to cloud the morn,
But the blighting of one name—
Bloom or burning, joy or anguish,
'Tis but once to writhe or languish,
Speak the muter'd malin, louder,
Never can ye crush a prouder—
Speak! and be futurity
Dark or bright unveiled to me.

SONG OVER A CHILD.

Dream, baby, dream!
The stars are glowing;
Hear'st thou the stream?
'Tis softly flowing.
All gently glide the hours;
Above no tempest howlers;
Below are fragrant flowers
In silence growing.

Sleep, baby, sleep,
'Till dawn to-morrow—
Why would'st thou weep,
Who know'st not sorrow?
Too soon come pain and fears;
Too soon a cause for tears;
So from thy future years
No sadness borrow!

Dream, baby, dream!
Thy eye-lids quiver.
Know'st thou the theme
Of yon soft river?
It saith, "be calm, be sure,
Unfailing, gentle, pure!
So shall thy life endure,
Like mine, for ever!"

ANECDOTES.

A lady mentioned to Figaro, that a sister of hers who was engaged appeared to be absent in mind, and actually tripped, as she was going up stairs. "Oh," said the wit, "that is merely a symptom of her falling in love."

A gentleman was asked the other day why the people who were at a fire at a hat store one night were like the hat that were burnt? "I give it up," said he. "Because they lost their nap."

Some one wishing to be witty on a gentleman with a large mouth, asked him if he had "a long lease of that mouth of his?" when he was good-humoredly answered. "No, I have it only from year to year."

A drunken youth got out of his calculation, and was dozing in the street, when the bells roused him by their ringing for fire. "Nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen," cried he. "Well, if this isn't later than I ever knew it!"

A lady asked one of her kitchen girls, who was clearing some rubbish from the cellar, what she was doing? "Molly replied, in the cant phrase of the day,—"removing the deposits, ma'am."

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

Books.

To the purchasers of the "Quincy Bookstore," we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, or to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed,

that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient

for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable, both as to price and quality, for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, and which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading for a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

REPORT

OF THE COMMITTEE CHOSEN BY THE TOWN TO CONSIDER THE SUBJECT OF AN ACADEMY.

At a public meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, held November 9th, 1846, in relation to the subject of an Academy
as connected with the Adams' Gift, it was voted:—

That a Committee of seven be chosen to confer and to act, in conjunction with the Supervisors of the Adams' Temple and School Fund, upon the subject of building an Academy in this Town, in accordance with the provisions contained in the deeds of Gift of the munificent donor of said fund, and take into consideration the whole subject of establishing such a High School, as shall meet the views of the donor and the wants of the Inhabitants of the Town, and if said Committee, after due consideration, should be of opinion, that it is expedient to build an Academy, at this time, that they be requested to procure plans of a suitable building, and estimates of cost, and report to the Town as soon as the nature of the subject will permit, at a meeting to be called for that purpose.

The Committee to whom this subject was referred, consisted of the following persons,—George Newcomb, William B. Duggan, Orange Clark, Lysander Richards, Israel W. Munroe, William D.
Gray and Manning W. Sullivan, (two of whom, Messrs. Gray and Sullivan, owing to their absence from Town, have not acted at all with the other members of the Committee,) and having attended to the duty assigned them, would respectfully

REPORT.

That they have duly considered the whole subject, and given to it that attention and candid deliberation which its importance demands. In the establishment of a High School, or an Academy in this town, by aid of donation or gift, or by the Town itself, the questions would naturally arise, what effect will it have upon the present public school system? Will it improve, or will it operate as a disadvantage to the District School? Will it be for the best good, to the greatest number? These questions have been well weighed by your Committee, and they are unanimous in the opinion, that it would operate beneficially; that it would be wise and expedient for the Town to have such a school. And in this opinion, they are happy to say, that the Supervisors of the Adams' Temple and School Fund, concur. The reasons that have led your Committee to this conclusion are:—

1st. Such a school will serve to complete the public school system, as required by the Statute, and thus furnish the means of giving instruction to our children in those higher branches, which are not required by law to be taught in the District School. In chap. 23d, sect. 5, of the Revised Statutes, the law requires that every town of five hundred families, that is, of about three thousand inhabitants, shall support a school at least ten months, in each year, for the benefit of all the inhabitants in the town; in which may be taught, in addition to the branches taught in the district school, the history of the United States, book-keeping, surveying, geometry, and algebra; and towns of four thousand inhabitants, are required to support a school, wherein may be taught in addition to the branches before mentioned, the Latin and Greek languages, general history, rhetoric, and logic. But an act was passed by the Legislature of this Commonwealth, in the year 1840, which released any Town from the obligation, to establish a High School, provided said Town should raise for the general purposes of schooling, twenty-five per cent. more money than the highest sum ever raised by said Town, in any one year, for schooling. In 1841, the subject of a High or Town School was by a vote of the Town referred to the General School Committee, with instructions to take the whole subject of schooling into consideration. They reported in favor of the Town's raising twenty five per cent. more money, which at that time, was the wisest and best course. Our public schools were then in a crowded state, children of all ages, large and small, were allowed to attend the same school. By means of raising the twenty five per cent.
more money, the Town were enabled to adopt the present excellent system of departments, of Primary, Intermediate and Grammar schools. But the adoption of that report only had reference to the first part of the 5th, section of the 23d. chap. referred to. The Town has since then increased its numbers—its population exceeds four thousands, and it now becomes necessary to take action upon the second part of the same section. Can it be said that the twenty five per cent. act, adopted in 1841, will now answer the requirements of the law? Can the additional branches named be taught with any degree of success in the District School? If not the true intention of the Statute will not be complied with. At this present time, all our Grammar Schools are full, crowded to the utmost extent, all the of the other schools are likewise in the same condition; if therefore a High School be not established to lessen the numbers, the time is not far distant when the Town will be obliged to form another District, and erect new school houses, and still the true meaning and intention of the statute would not be complied with, inasmuch as it would be impossible for the District School Teacher to do justice to all his scholars, should it be required of him to teach so many and different branches, as specified in the law.

2d. The establishment of a High School, or an Academy, with salutary regulations for the admission of its pupils, will make both parents and children more interested in the public schools. There would be less money expended for private instruction. It is the duty of all parents to give their children a good education. The better our public schools are, greater will be the opportunities for all to do so. Why is it that so much money is expended yearly for private instruction? And who are they that thus give encouragement to private schools? Can they feel to have the same interests in our public institutions? Will they interest themselves to make improvements for the great mass of the people as long as they send their children to the private or select school? No. The principle holds good in education, as well as in religion, where your treasure is there your heart is also. Let our public schools be elevated then to meet the wants of the community, and they will supercede the necessity of private schools. The statistics of the past five or six years in relation to private instruction will show that the community demand something more, than what now exists for the better education of their children. What is that something?
Is it not the kind of school contemplated in this report? Another fact exhibits itself in these statistics which is that in those years when the district school was in its most flourishing and happy condition, the number who attended the private school, was less than under other circumstances. In 1840, the number of children who attended the private schools was 157—the amount paid for tuition

During these same years, from 1841, the amount of money expended each year for public instruction, was about $3200. The facts show, therefore, that the amount paid each year for private tuition, was equal to one third of the whole amount paid for the support of all our public schools. This amount of money, would supply the school we desire to see established, with faithful instructors. And would it not promote a greater public good? Let the public system be so improved that the poor man's child shall have advantages to obtain an education, equal to that of the most wealthy citizen's.
Certainly, there is no institution more deserving of patronage and encouragement. And we ought not to rest satisfied with the action of the past, nor think that we have done our whole duty, till such a system of public instruction is established as will enable our children to obtain at least a thorough English education; till we have in active operation, a system, that will conform in letter and spirit, to the wise and judicious statutes of the Commonwealth. The public school is the great conservative principle of perpetual improvement; it is nourished by our dearest privileges, our most sacred rights. The private school system has nothing to compare with it.
We say, therefore, in establishing a public Town school, to supercede the necessity of private schools, you will promote a public good, inasmuch as you will awaken a wider and deeper interest, throughout the community, in favor of our public institutions; and inasmuch as you will furnish opportunities for all to obtain a thorough education.

3d. We present to another reason in favor of establishing a high school, that its tendency will be to increase the population of the Town. By means of the Railroad, which passes through this Town, we are within twenty minutes ride of the City of Boston.
That City, it is well known, is rapidly increasing in wealth and population, and many of its enterprising Merchants and Mechanics, prefer to reside with their families in the country; and among the considerations which influence them in the choice of Towns in which to locate, no one has greater weight than that of good schools for their children. Boston is noted for its excellent system.
In leaving the city, therefore, they would naturally be induced to come amongst us, if our system should correspond with it. The establishment of a public Town School, of the kind contemplated, will enable Quincy to exhibit the same perfect and complete system of public instruction, as Boston presents in hers. Is not this worthy of consideration? Would it not be a public good? Would not an increase of population add to the prosperity of the Town? Would it not increase the aggregate amount of wealth? Should we not, in a pecuniary point of view, gain by it in the end, even though it should cost us a few thousand dollars now? Such being its tendency, it can be viewed in no other light than a public good?

Such are the views of your Committee, and to establish a school that shall correspond with them, they believe will fully meet the wants of the inhabitants of the Town, and add to its wealth and prosperity. But, in this connection, another important question presents itself. Can the building be erected upon the "Hancock Lot," and such a school be established in conjunction with the Adams' Gift? or, in the language of our instructions, will such a school "meet the views of the donor"? This question was submitted to the Supervisors of said Gift and they gave it as their opinion that it would.

But to do away with any misapprehension, and to make perfectly plain the objects and intentions of the late venerable John Adams, by his deeds of Gift to the Town, we would invite your attention to the principal provisions contained in them. These deeds are three in number, bearing date June 25th, July 25th, and August 10th, 1822. The Town received, in accepting them, certain grants of Real Estate and a valuable Library, upon certain conditions therein expressed. The deeds provide that the rents, together with the profits arising from the sale of wood, fuel of any kind, timber and stone, shall be placed at interest in some solid public fund, either of the Commonwealth, or of the United States, and the interest again placed at interest as it arises, and the same to be under the management of the Selectmen, and a board of Supervisors, consisting of five persons, with power to fill vacancies. The present board consists of Messrs. Thomas Greenleaf, Josiah Quincy, John Q.
Adams, George W. Beale and Charles F. Adams. The objects of the Gift are

1st. To erect a Stone Temple for the use of the Congregational Society in this Town.
2d. To build a Stone School House, to be erected over the cellar which was under the house, and to be used for a Cabinet or Apparatus room, or both; another similar room in connection with the Latin Schoolroom, to be used as a recitation room or a Committee room as circumstances might require; a vestibule and two ante-rooms in which are the stairs leading to the upper story. Upon the second story, it presents one excellent school room, of sufficient dimensions
to seat eighty four children; two good sized recitation rooms and a recitation platform. The front entrance is used only for the lower story; the entrances to the upper story are on each side.
The exterior of the building is designed to be of rough granite,
except the trimmings, which are to be fine hammered. The style Italian, neat but not extravagant, and, as will be seen by the plan, there will be no pillars or pilasters connected with it. Such is the plan! What will it cost? The estimate we give, was prepared by the Architect, G. J. F. Bryant, whose experience and judgment in matters of this kind is acknowledged to be very good. He makes the cost $18,000.

This, we are aware, is a great sum to be expended in a single building; yet we find it is no more considering the materials of which it is to be built than what our sister towns have paid. A similar building in Lowell, built of brick, cost $18,528 84. The one in Newburyport $19,500. Lowell school house is 84 by 48 feet; Newburyport school house is 55 by 85 feet. The difference in building of handsome faced brick and granite is said to be one fourth. These buildings are somewhat larger than the one we recommend, and if they had been built of granite instead of brick would have cost much more. What method can we adopt then to have a suitable building, built of granite, to cost less? Shall we contract its dimensions and thus debar our children of the many conveniences and advantages specified in its interior construction.
Enlightened wisdom forbids it! The laws of health and comfort forbid it! Our children would not honor or respect us for it!
Shall we give the exterior no dress or ornament? Shall we build it up with rough granite wholly and thus present to the passer by a plainness of rough simplicity to correspond with the rough walls of a prison house? Would such a building look well to be erected upon the spot, around which cluster the hallowed associations connected with the name of John Hancock, the bountiful benefactor of his country; or with that of John Adams, her ablest defender, and

ly enjoin it upon the Supervisors and Selectmen so to manage the estate as to be for the best interests of the Town. The school when established will be designed for the benefit of the whole Town; and any application of the funds contrary to this, would, in the opinion of your Committee, be just cause for an action at law for mismanagement and thus render the estate liable to forfeiture.

The Act of Incorporation, which was granted by the Legislature of this Commonwealth, Feb. 3d, 1827, under the name of the Supervisors of the Adams Temple and School Fund in Quincy, confers no special privilege, nor grants any new power not enjoined in the deeds of Gift. By it the Town Treasurer for the time being is made Treasurer of the fund. By it the Supervisors are clothed with the authority of law to do and act in relation to the whole subject matter contained in the deeds, but nothing more. By it their authority to act in relation to the support and maintenance of the school, when established is made subject to the action of the town.

The 8th Section of the Act reads thus—
Be it further enacted, That the Supervisors aforesaid, be, and they are hereby authorized upon the erection and establishment of the said school, to exercise any authority, and to do and perform any act in relation to the support and maintenance of the same, as Trustees forever, which the inhabitants of the town of Quincy may authorize, or confer upon them: provided the same be not repugnant to the laws of the Commonwealth.

The opinion of your Committee therefore is, that a public town school or an Academy, to meet the wants of the town, and to answer the requirements of the law of this Commonwealth, can be erected and established in concert with the one designed by Mr.
Adams. In this opinion the Supervisors concur, and have expressed a willingness and a warm desire to cooperate with the town in what they might consider for the best good, to accomplish the desired object.

In compliance with your instructions and in accordance with the expressed wish of the Supervisors, we would next call your attention to the plan we have procured as a model for a suitable building.
If at first sight it should be thought by any one that we have been too liberal in the dimensions or size of this building, we would respectfully ask such, to listen to the reasons that have influenced your Committee. We would say, however, in the first place, that the reasons we offer in favor of such a sized building as well as of its interior construction, are not only the settled convictions of our own judgments, but that of some of the most enlightened men in the Commonwealth. We have spared no pains in procuring a model of a good School House. We have consulted the best authorities, and visited many of the most noted buildings in the State.
The light of knowledge and science has shown that much of the suffering to which mankind have been called to endure is owing to a violations of the natural laws of God, and in no case have these laws been more disregarded than in the construction of our School Houses. The time was once when most any kind of building was deemed sufficient; no regard was paid to ventilation, heating, nor conveniences of any kind, all were crowded together in one small room, in violation of law and much to the injury of the children.
Even our prisons and jails were better provided with accommodations to make comfortable the convicts and felons, than our School Houses were for the innocent children and youth.

Our plan presents to you a building of two stories in height, sixty eight feet long and fifty wide, which we think, in view of the present population of the town, and the prospects of its future growth and prosperity, is no larger than what is or soon will be required. Though we might possibly do with less room for a few years to come, yet it seems to your Committee that to have no regard to the immediate future in constructing a house of such durable materials would be, to say the least, very unwise. It would be pursuing a policy far different from that pursued in the erection of other public buildings. The Congregational Society had an eye to the future when they built the Stone Temple. So did the citizens of Quincy in the erection of the Stone Town House. Your Committee, however, are not anxious to urge upon the town any peculiar notions of their own, but would only express the hope that whenever an Academy is built, whether it be at the present time or at some future day, its interior will be so constructed as to embrace all the late improvements of school house architecture, both for convenience and comfort, health and happiness.

The interior of the plan, recommended by your Committee, exhibits upon the lower story two good sized rooms,—one for the library, the other for the Latin School,—a small room connected with the library room, to be used for a Cabinet or Apparatus room,
or both; another similar room in connection with the Latin Schoolroom, to be used as a recitation room or a Committee room as circumstances might require; a vestibule and two ante-rooms in which are the stairs leading to the upper story. Upon the second story, it presents one excellent school room, of sufficient dimensions
to seat eighty four children; two good sized recitation rooms and a recitation platform. The front entrance is used only for the lower story; the entrances to the upper story are on each side.

The exterior of the building is designed to be of rough granite,
except the trimmings, which are to be fine hammered. The style Italian, neat but not extravagant, and, as will be seen by the plan, there will be no pillars or pilasters connected with it. Such is the contract its dimensions and thus debar our children of the many conveniences and advantages specified in its interior construction.

Enlightened wisdom forbids it! The laws of health and comfort forbid it! Our children would not honor or respect us for it!
Shall we give the exterior no dress or ornament? Shall we build
it up with rough granite wholly and thus present to the passer by a plainness of rough simplicity to correspond with the rough walls of a prison house? Would such a building look well to be erected
upon the spot, around which cluster the hallowed associations connected with the name of John Hancock, the bountiful benefactor of his country; or with that of John Adams, her ablest defender, and

ered from the language of the deeds; on the contrary, they express-

whose patriotism and virtues have cast a lustre upon the place of his nativity; and whose grateful attentions to its future welfare and prosperity, prompted to give that hallowed land with other munificent gifts to the town? Ah no! Such an exterior would not awaken that feeling of gratitude and pleasure in the minds of our citizens, such as every one ought to feel when he is reminded of a Hancock or an Adams. Such an exterior would not comport with good taste, neither would it impress the stranger from other States or countries, whenever he might visit our ancient town, to view its granite hills, or to admire its varied scenery, or to behold the place that gave birth to some of the most fearless and brave patriots of the revolution, with the idea of its fulfilling the sacred object of its erection.

Children admire taste and beauty, and in the language of Mr. Mann, the Secretary of the Board of Education, "how different would be the feelings of all the children towards the school and through the school towards all other means of elevation and improvement, if from their earliest days of observation, they were accustomed always to look at the school house and to hear it spoken of as among the most attractive objects in the neighborhood." In view of these considerations the accompanying plan is recommended as the model for the building.

The next subject of inquiry with your Committee was, to ascertain the amount of funds accumulated. With a view to this, and for the purpose of obtaining a correct statement of its past financial history, the following questions were submitted, in writing, to the Supervisors:

- 1st. What was the amount collected by way of rent and profits as particularly mentioned in Deeds of Gift during the year, after their acceptance by the town, and each successive year?
- 2d. What was the actual amount appropriated towards the erection of the Stone Temple?
- 3d. Has there been any monies applied to other purposes, if so what and how much?
- 4th. In what year did the funds cease being applied for the erection of a Stone Temple, and consequently commence accumulating for the second object named, viz, the erection of a Stone School House?
- 5th. Has the Old Colony Rail Road, or either of its branches, crossed any of the lands specified in the Deeds of Gift, if so what land and what compensation was received for the same?
- 6th. What is the actual amount now accumulated and in what way is it invested?

To which your Committee received the following reply:

Answer to the first question.

The Town Treasurer's account of the Fund will give more specific information than can be supplied from the Corporation records. I find from these no return given from the 6th August, 1822, when the deeds were accepted by the town, until after an act of Incorporation was obtained, in February, 1827. From that time the report upon the state of the funds are regular. From these I gather that on the 25th April, 1825, less than three years, and owing to favorable leases of stone quarries, since abandoned, the fund had risen to

On the 5th May, 1827, 2176 18
which sum was then duly paid over to the Treasurer of the Congregational Society for the erection of a Church.

On the 28th November, 1829, it amounted to $216 88
which sum was paid over as before.

8 July, 1835, it again equaled $615 16 gross
21 Aug. 1839, " " 1040 34 " " " " " " 1157 88 " " " " " " 1285 33 " " " " " " 1302 66 nett
25 April, 1844, " " 1457 58
8 Sept. 1845, " " 2689 65
28 Aug. 1846, " " 2921 73

These balances may not all be accurate, but they can be tested and verified by reference to the Treasurer's books, in which the accounts are given at large.

Answer to the second question.

So far as the records show, the amount was the sum paid 5 May, 1827, $2176 18, 28 November, 1829, $246 88, making in all $2423 06.

Answer to the third question.

There have been no funds applied to other purposes than the Church, excepting such as were deemed necessary to the management of the property, in building and repairing walls and fences, paying taxes, drawing leases and deeds, etc. The gross sum cannot be obtained excepting by reference to the Treasurer's notes.

Answer to the fourth question.

In 1830.

Answer to the fifth question.

The Old Colony Railroad crossed the Hancock lot in 1844, for which a thousand dollars was paid to the fund. There has as yet not come before the Board any other case of crossing.

Answer to the sixth question.

The amount accumulated 28 Aug. 1846, was $2921 73; invested as follows:

Two certificates U. S. five per cent. Stock, $2000 00
Note of the Town of Quincy, 779 48
Cash in the hands of the Treasurer, 142 25 $2921 73

C. F. ADAMS, Supervisor's Clerk.

Your Committee have compared the above statements with the Treasurer's books and find them substantially correct. It appears therefore, that the town has only three thousand dollars in the funds towards the erection of this building so much desired. In consideration of which, an important question arises. In what way shall the money be obtained? Were it not that the town was now in debt to a considerable amount, on account of the late erection of the Stone Town House, your Committee would not hesitate a moment to recommend that the whole amount required be raised by taxation. But under the circumstances, such a recommendation would not perhaps be deemed advisable. Though under any circumstances "it is better to be taxed for the education of the boy, than the ignorance of the man, for one or the other we are compelled to be." If, however, such a recommendation be not deemed advisable, your Committee would suggest the propriety for the town to raise by tax one half of the balance required, provided the other half be furnished by individual subscriptions. In this there seems to be a fitness and propriety, for, if the town were not obliged, as expressed in the deeds of Gift, to erect the building of stone, it would not cost any more than what this suggestion would require. In view, therefore, of the present wants of the town, and to elevate the standard of our public schools, and to carry into effect the wise and judicious desires of the late venerable John Adams, your Committee do recommend the adoption of the above principle, and would, in behalf of the town, appeal to the liberality of our wealthy citizens to assist in this noble enterprise. It will enable the town to erect a building of more durable materials, one that will reflect credit and honor upon them and the whole town. It will stand too upon that sacred spot—the hallowed place where was born the first President of the American Continental Congress. It will be associated, likewise, with other names, whose illustrious deeds of virtue and patriotism will awaken in the minds of our children a noble and worthy spirit of emulation. In conclusion, your Committee would express the hope that this subject will be duly considered and that measures will be adopted to carry it into immediate effect, either by pursuing the method recommended by your Committee, or by adopting any other more feasible and better plan. For to borrow the language of another, "Our schools must maintain their high character; they must go forward, the past is nothing; the present is but a starting point; they must rise every year. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school."

must go forward, the past is nothing; the present is but a starting point; they must rise every year. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school. To stand still one year is the worst thing that can happen to a school."

GEORGE NEWCOMB, Chairman.

LOT EXPOSED!!!

JOHN ADAMS GREEN, Esq.—I notice in your last paper an article in relation to the "Dorchester and Milton Branch Rail Road," and the article is copied, or the spirit of it, into the "Financial" of the Boston Morning Post, of the 9th inst., which intimates, as I assert, without any qualification whatever, that "the proposed branch from Old Colony Railroad, at Neponset to Milton, has been postponed until action is had by the legislature upon the Fall River Railroad extension, which if made, takes its place." Now, I wish to inquire, through the same medium of a certain gentleman of Milton, and also of a Mr. Tower of Randolph, if the above paragraph is the "light" they asked for, at the meeting of the stockholders of the Dorchester and Milton Branch Railroad for organization, etc. If that is the fact, I will say to them, to the Railroad Committee of the Legislature now in session, and to all creation, that that light is perforated darkness. There is no shadow of doubt, and no ray of light in it. Something like a year ago, a large number of the citizens of Dorchester and Milton, etc. believing that the public good required a Railroad from Milton and Dorchester Upper Mills to the Old Colony Depot at Neponset, in accordance with their duty and inalienable rights, petitioned the legislature, then in session, for a charter. The legislature believing in concurrence with the petitioners granted the charter—subsequently this road was surveyed—the right of way obtained—a temporary organization took place—the road laid in accordance with the provision of the charter—the stock taken up—a permanent organization effected—a Board of Directors chosen—an assessment of ten per cent. made on each share, payable the last of this month—as soon as men, under the direction and supervision of an persevering and energetic board of directors as can be found in Massachusetts can do it, the road will be made; and last, though not least, the crowning point of the undertaking is, it will pay the stockholders good six per cent. on their investment, and be a great and permanent blessing to the good old towns of Dorchester and Milton, and the surrounding country. The article alluded to, says, if the Fall River extension is made, it will take the place of this branch. For conscience sake, Mr. Editor, do you, or any other rational man, suppose that a very hungry man, or a body of hungry men, being exhausted and almost fainting, after much trouble and expense and long delay, come in possession of a supply of bread and butter, instead of using and receiving the benefit of it, give it away to their neighbors; neighbors, too, who have a supply of the same kind? Preposterous! preposterous!!! A STOCK HOLDER.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1847.

DORCHESTER TOWN OFFICERS, ETC. The following are the officers for the ensuing year, chosen by the town of Dorchester at their annual meeting held on the first instant, at which Mr. Lewis Pierce was Moderator.

Town Clerk—Ebenzer Tolman.
Selectmen—E. J. Bispham, William Tolman, and Oliver Hall.
Town Treasurer—Charles Howe.
Assessors—E. J. Bispham, Henry Humphreys, Joseph Clapp, Robert Vose, and Harvey Howe.

School Committee—Rev. Nathaniel Hall, Rev. Richard Pike, Rev. David Dyer, Rev. Humphrey Richards, Rev. David Shailer; District No. 1, Ebenzer Clapp, Jr.; No. 2, James Swan; No. 3, Ebenzer Tolman; No. 4, Robert Vose; No. 5, John P. Spooner; No. 6, Isaac Houghton; No. 7, Friend Crane; Nos. 8 and 9, O. Putnam Bacon.

Constables—Peter Blake, Stephen A. Robinson, William G. Swan, Benjamin F. Hebard, Henry M. Goodwin, Seaborn J. Hyde. In connection with the Auditors' Report of the "Receipts and Expenditures of the Town, a copy of which has been furnished us by our attentive friend at Neponset Village, O. Putnam Bacon, Esq., is a Table appended, prepared with great care by Otis Shepard, Esq., showing the population of Dorchester in 1840 and 1846, (pop. '40, 4875; in '46, 6560; increase in six years, 1685), also, the births, marriages and deaths in the years 1845-6. It appears by the list and number of deaths in the town for the last twenty five years, that one-seventh part of the deaths were persons who came into the town, being out of health, for the purpose of availing themselves of its healthy climate. There is no town in New England, probably, where sea and land, city and country, salt water and fresh, hill and plain, are more delightfully and healthfully blended; and no town offers more inducements to the man of leisure, the business man, the manufacturer and mechanic, than the town of Dorchester. There are in the town, eight Meeting houses, and as many Churches and Societies, all of which are regularly supplied with preaching of the following persuasions—two Unitarians, three Orthodox Congregationalist, two Baptist, and one Episcopal Methodist; seventeen public schools, six of which are denominated Grammar Schools, one Common School and ten Primary Schools, all of which are open and free to all the residents and citizens of the town. In regard to the Schools, in the opinion of competent judges it may be said, they will compare favorably with Roxbury, Boston and Charlestown Schools. Railroad, Omnibus and other travelling facilities are not surpassed probably in any other town, and what with the unsurpassed healthy climate, religious, educational and other privileges, the town of Dorchester must continue to increase in wealth, business, population and respectability.

Weymouth Town Officers. The following gentlemen were elected on Monday last, Town Officers for the year ensuing.

Town Clerk—Oran White.
Treasurer—Thomas Nash.
Selectmen—Nathan Canterbury, James Torrey, Noah Vining, Jr.
Assessors—Martin Vining, Samuel Reed, T. R. Hanson.
Officers of the Poor—Alva Raymond, Stephen French, Thomas Derby.

School Committee—Rev. J. Emery, Rev. W. Lewis, Dr. A. Howe, Noah Vining, Jr., B. F. White.
Constables—Silas Binney, Henry Lord, Warren Thayer.
Voted—To raise 2500 dollars for Schools, in addition to the School Fund, and 4000 dollars for other Expenses of Town.

DORCHESTER AND MILTON BRANCH RAILROAD. A friend corrects our statement of last week, and informs us that the location of said road is about completed; the stock nearly all subscribed, contracts for iron and grading being made; the direction thereof in a state of great efficiency, and every thing concurring to ensure the happy, rapid and successful completion of said road. A Stockholder, as will be seen by his communication, has also taken notice of the same subject.

FAST DAY. The Governor of this State, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council, has appointed Thursday, the 8th of April next, to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer.

CLOSE OF CONGRESS. A joint resolution to place the United States Frigate Macedonian at the disposal of Captain DeKay, and the Sloop Jamestown at the disposal of Captain Forbes of Boston, to convey provisions to Ireland, passed both branches.

The bill to establish the Territory of Minnesota was taken up, debated, laid on the table, and consequently lost.

In accordance with the usual practice, the Vice President vacated the Chair, and, on motion of Mr. Webster, Mr. Atchison of Missouri was elected President pro tem.

The Three Million bill from the Senate was taken up in the House and Mr. Wilmot moved his Proviso prohibiting Slavery in new Territories. The bill was then reported to the House and the Proviso rejected 97 to 112. Mr. Wilmot then moved to lay the bill on the table which was negatived, and the bill was then passed 115 to 82.

Several private bills and bills not of general interest were passed. A resolution was adopted for printing seven thousand additional copies of the last Patent Office Report. The bill was passed, providing for additional war steamers, appropriates a million dollars for four vessels of the first class for the navy, and provides for the construction, by individual enterprise, of twelve others for transportation of the United States mail between New York and New Orleans, Havana and Cienfuegos, Panama and Oregon.

Among the last bills before Congress, was that for the relief of the heirs of John Paul Jones. It was found on floor the of the Senate, the morning after the adjournment, having passed both Houses but without the signature of the President.

DECISION ON THE LICENSE LAWS. The United States Supreme Court have decided in favor of the constitutionality of the license law of Massachusetts as well as the laws of Rhode Island and New Hampshire on the same exciting subject. Six of the nine Judges were present when the decision was given, viz: Chief Justice Taney, and Associate Justices McLean, Wayne, Nelson, Woodbury and Grier. This result is said to be the unanimous opinion of the Court. The Supreme Court decides that the States have a right to regulate the trade in, and licensing of, the sale of ardent spirits. Thus the law of New Hampshire, which controls the power over licenses generally, and the law of Massachusetts, which forbids the sale of any smaller quantity of liquor than twenty-eight gallons, and the law of Rhode Island, limiting the sale to ten gallons, are all affirmed by the Court. These cases have been ably argued by counsel from each of the States, and the decision of the Court will happily put the question of power to rest; and settle, beyond successful legal controversy, at least, the power of the States over the retail trade in ardent spirits.

CENTRE SCHOOL DISTRICT. We learn that the amount of the execution in favor of Gen. F. A. Kingsbury against the Inhabitants of the Centre School District of Quincy, is $278.26. A district meeting is to be held next Monday evening to consider the subject. On account of the great length of the Report on an Academy or High School, we have been compelled to omit our correspondent's favor in relation to school matters in the Centre District.

ADVERTISING AGENCY. Messrs. Roberts & Dalton, 12 State Street, Boston, are general agents for city and country newspapers. They solicit subscriptions and advertisements, and receive a moderate percentage for their services. They well understand the business, and should be encouraged by the craft and advertisers.

RESPECT FOR EX-PRESIDENT ADAMS. The Representative in Congress from this District, since he resumed his seat, spoke against a proposition to give fifty thousand dollars to the owners of the schooner L'Amistad. He occupied only a few minutes, but with such effect that the proposition was voted down, ninety-five nays to twenty-eight yeas. While he was speaking the whole House was as still as the grave, and the members crowded around him in the smallest possible circle.

LICENSES IN VERMONT. The citizens of Vermont have had to determine at the ballot box whether the traffic in intoxicating liquors should be permitted any longer. Previously, the question of license or no license had been determined by each County for itself; but the Legislature at its last session passed a law to submit the question to the people of the whole State, so that the traffic should either be entirely prohibited, or allowed on equal terms in every town. The result, as far as intelligence has been received, warrants the opinion that the people have decided against granting licenses by a large majority.

FROM MEXICO. By an arrival at New Orleans on the 1st, news has been received from Tampico to the 20th ult. General Scott arrived at Tampico on the 19th. It was reported that Vera Cruz had been evacuated by order of Santa Anna, and the troops marched to the interior.

It is pretty certain that Santa Anna is now at Saltillo, and it is reported that he had engaged in a conflict with Gen. Taylor, but the report was not believed.

Gen. Scott has issued orders to punish all crimes committed, not provided for by the army clause, according to the laws of the United States.

Later news states that Gen. Taylor with his regiment was at Saltillo. He wants light troops very much.

P. S. Last night's intelligence gives the account of a severe battle between the forces of Gen. Taylor and Santa Anna. The Mexican General advanced upon Saltillo from which Gen. Taylor retired towards Monterey. Santa Anna extended his line in order to surround the American army on their retreat, but when the centre became much weakened by the movement, the Americans made a gallant charge, thus cutting the centre to pieces before the wings of the Mexican army could return to succor, and the wings in turn were also beaten. Gen. Arista is said to be dangerously wounded. Great loss was sustained on both sides.

INCENDIARY ARRESTED. A boy of Milton has been arrested, and on his own confession committed to Dedham jail for setting fire to the School-house on Milton Hill last November.

LEGISLATURE. Laban Souther and others have had leave to withdraw their petition for railroad from Cohasset to Quincy. A Petition has been presented for putting equal penalty on the buyer and seller of spirituous liquors. The attempt to revive the office of State Attorney has failed.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. The returns of the recent election in New Hampshire show that the democratic candidate for Governor has been elected by the people,—that the democrats will have a majority in both branches of the Legislature, and are certain of two members of Congress—the two remaining districts are in doubt.

The citizens of Charlestown, (Mass.) voted for the acceptance of the new city charter. The vote was, yeas 1143, nays 869; majority for a city 274.

Since the new tariff went into operation, (three months,) says the New York Journal of Commerce, there has been imported into the United States from foreign countries, nearly or quite ten million of specie.

The Mexicans who killed Lieut. Miller, of the Ohio Volunteers, cut out his heart and hung it on a bush! Lieut. Ritchie's heart was stuck on a pole by the road-side. These are probably innocent Mexicana.

NOTICES.

Whigs of Quincy!

You are requested to assemble at the Lyceum Hall, on SATURDAY EVENING, March 30th, at seven o'clock, for the purpose of choosing Delegates to attend a County Convention, which is to be held at the Phoenix Hotel, in Dedham, on Thursday, the 25th inst., at eleven o'clock, A. HAS THE GREAT AUTHOR OF NATURE provided us with no remedy for Consumption—and the diseases leading thereto which are so fearfully common in our country? Has He left us to find relief from that fatal scourge by ransacking other lands? No, it is not so. The best—Nature's own remedy—is ready at our hand. The Wild Cherry and the Pine furnish us with a cure, where a cure is possible. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, formed by chemical extracts from Wild Cherry bark and turpentine, all cases of Consumption, and effectually cures it where it has not progressed so far as to be beyond cure—subdues the most inveterate cough of Asthma, even of 30 and 40 years standing—stops raising of blood, after other remedies fail—and removes every kind of affection of the Lungs and Liver which our climate induces. The remarkable efficacy of this wonderful medicine, in many diseases hitherto deemed incurable, has excited among physicians great curiosity as to the precise nature of its ingredients. Let purchasers beware of imitations and counterfeits.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

For sale in Boston by S. W. Fowle, 138 Wash. St. Quincy, by Mrs. E. HAYDEN.

Instruction in Drawing.

MISS PACKARD proposes giving Lessons in DRAWING, for the benefit of all who would like to avail themselves of that accomplishment which is not merely ornamental, but useful to persons in the common pursuits of life. It gives one a correct eye for any mechanical operation and enables the traveller to spread before his friends the works of nature and art seen by him in distant countries. All who practice it acquire habits of observation, and become alive to the beauties of nature. It is very important to children in learning to write, as writing is drawing letters with a pen.

Miss Packard will commence April 10th, at two o'clock P. M. Twenty four lessons for $1.50.

Quincy, March 13.

The public are invited to attend.

JAMES M. WADE, Secretary.

HAS THE GREAT AUTHOR OF NATURE provided us with no remedy for Consumption—and the diseases leading thereto which are so fearfully common in our country? He has left us no relief from that fatal scourge by ransacking other lands? No, it is not so. The best—Nature's own remedy—is ready at our hand. The Wild Cherry and the Pine furnish us with a cure, where a cure is possible. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, formed by chemical extracts from Wild Cherry bark and turpentine, all cases of Consumption, and effectually cures it where it has not progressed so far as to be beyond cure—subdues the most inveterate coughs of Asthma, even of 30 and 40 years standing—stops raising of blood, after other remedies fail—and removes every kind of affection of the Lungs and Liver which our climate induces. The remarkable efficacy of this wonderful medicine, in many diseases hitherto deemed incurable, has excited among physicians great curiosity as to the precise nature of its ingredients. Let purchasers beware of imitations and counterfeits.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

Instruction in Drawing.

MISS PACKARD proposes giving Lessons in DRAWING, for the benefit of all who would like to avail themselves of that accomplishment, which is not merely ornamental, but useful to persons in the common pursuits of life. It gives one a correct eye for any mechanical work, and enables the traveler to spread before his friends the works of nature and art seen by him in distant countries. All who practice it acquire habits of observation, and become alive to the beauties of nature. It is very important to children in learning to write, as writing is drawing letters with a pen.

Miss Packard will commence April 10th, at two o'clock P. M. Twenty-four lessons for $1.50.

New Spring Goods!!

JOHN DINEGAN, MERCHANT TAILOR, School Street, Quincy.

WOULD respectfully intimate to the people of Quincy, and the surrounding villages, that he has just received an assortment of

SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS,

which he flatters himself will be found to correspond with the liberal patronage he has received, and for which he returns his sincere thanks.

His present stock consists in part as follows:—

GERMAN CLOTHS, of the very best make and finish;

FRENCH CLOTHS, of extra and superfine jet black, blue and fancy colors;

ENGLISH CLOTHS, Yorkshire and west of England manufacture, including the most approved fabrics and fashionable shades—brown, citron, golden and green olives, and

AMERICAN CLOTHS, from the very best Mills.

Fashionable Doe Skins, of English, German, French and American make;

VESTINGS, in very desirable styles of fancy figured, plain, white and satin striped;

Do. ELEGANT VALENCIAS, in various qualities—light and dark. London heavy figured SILK VESTINGS and SATIN do.

To the inhabitants of Quincy it is unnecessary for me to say a word of my abilities, or style of getting up a ready Garment. They have tested my work, and I have no hesitation in saying that I have the honor of working for a majority of the most fashionable and respectable inhabitants of the place.

People run no risk in coming to my establishment for their Clothing, for if they do not suit in every respect they need not have them. Besides, they can buy them twenty per cent. cheaper from me than in any store in Boston.

All my Goods are made by the best Journeymen Tailors, I ask but one price and my terms are CASH.

Notice.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

NORFOLK ss. At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, December term, A. D. 1846—

ON the petition of Ebenezer Vinson and others, presented at the September term last past of the Commissioners, praying for an alteration of the public highway in Weymouth, called Randolph street, leading from Pond street in Weymouth to Randolph, by a widening of the same; and also for some alteration in the road in said Weymouth leading from Columbia Square to Main street near the house of Perez Loud. The Commissioners having caused due and legal notice of said petition to be given to said town of Weymouth and the public, and having viewed said road, and fully heard all parties interested in the prayer of said petition, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that the said public road called Randolph Street should be widened as prayed for.

It is therefore by the County Commissioners, ordered that they will meet at the house of Jesse N. Hollis, in said Weymouth, on Friday the second day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to locate the alterations and widenings of said street.

And that an attested copy of this adjudication and order be served upon the Clerk of the town of Weymouth, thirty days at least before the day appointed for said meeting; that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, in said County, the last publication thereof, to be on Friday, at least, before said day, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said Weymouth fourteen days before said day of meeting, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

MISCELLANY.

MR. AND MRS. BATTLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Battle were a fond and loving couple in the town of N—, who for about a twelve-month, had dwelt as "one flesh" in the law matrimonial, and whose union thus far, if a shade less blissful than that of turtle doves, had afforded an example of conjugal felicity as edifying, to say the least, as the generality of matches. It happened one winter evening that, having exhausted all their usual themes of chit chat, they had been sitting in silence for some minutes together, luxuriating in "the uncommunicating muteness of fishes," when suddenly, with a piercing shriek, Mrs. B. sprang from her chair and jumped upon a side table, crying out at the top of her lungs "Lord of Mercy! Oh, that horrid being! Kill him, Mr. Battle, kill him!"
The husband, quick as thought, seized the poker, and though half frightened out of his senses, raised it firmly over his head, and placed himself bolt upright in an attitude of defence. For some moments he stood speechless, with mingled wonder and awe; then casting a glance at his wife, who stood leaning against the wall, pale, shivering, and half frantic with terror, he at length recovered his wits and the use of his tongue so far as to ask, in a voice somewhat faint and husky—
"Who—where—what is he?"
"There! there! Husband, don't you see? there! It isn't so man—it's a horrid great mouse. Oh dear, I shall faint away, certain! There he comes again, this way. Merciful Heavens! Oh! Oh!"
Mr. B. breathed a little more freely, after this last piece of information, for, to say the truth, he was by no means a Hercules in strength or stature, (being only four feet eleven in his boots, and weighing but just one hundred and five pounds, even after dinner,) and as he supposed it was some house-rover or cut-throat who had hidden himself in the room, that had caused his wife's fright, his knees began to knock together his great show of bravery. But now, regarding with marvellous quickness the use of all his limbs and faculties, he advanced boldly in the direction indicated by Mrs. B.'s finger, and with a courage and presence of mind worthy of an Alexander, succeeded, by the aid of the poker, in stretching a most ferocious looking young rat lifeless on the floor.
After a few moments, peace and order were again restored, and Mrs. B. having succeeded by an astonishing degree of self control, in quieting her nerves, was again seated at her work-table, busily plying her needle, when a loud tinkling of the door-bell was followed by the announcement of Mr. Pry. Pry had popped in, as he said, "to see how they all did and have a little social chat;" but as it turned out, (unfortunately for the peace of our excellent couple,) he was just in season to hear from Mrs. Battle's lips a relation to what she called her "frightful adventure with the mouse."
"No, my dear," interrupted Mr. B., "a rat."
"Excuse me, my love, but 'twas a mouse."
"But I do assure you, Madam, it was a rat. I beg your pardon, Sir; notwithstanding you assure me, I am quite sure it was a mouse."
"Don't tell me, Mrs. Battle; do you think I'm a fool, not to know a rat from a mouse, and in my own house, too?"
"Keep cool, Mr. Battle; don't get huffy just because I spoke a word. Some how or other, lately, I can never open my lips before you, but you must fly into a pet. And then you must be twit—twit—twitting me always, always about your house, as if you were lord of everything here; and I were only your humble servant. I declare, Battle, you are as cross as a bear and as you can live."
"Mrs. Battle, you are enough to provoke a

For the Quincy Patriot

A SATIRE

On Beer and Cider drinking pretenders to temperance.

Turn—The White Cockade.

We temperance folks together met,
A firm and staunch tee-total set,
To warm our hearts and make good cheer
We'll push about the foaming Beer;
And here, perhaps, may be a few
Who like their can of Cider too,
So bring them both and let us toast
Our firm and staunch tee-total host.

Chorus.

A fuddle ain't a drunk 'tis clear,
So pass the Cider, hand the Beer;
No matter what the rummy 'tink,
We know the right tee-total drink.

Let those who drink their rum and gin
In secret hide their dreadful sin;
We don't get drunk, the fact is clear,
We only fuddle drinking beer,
And if we tip the cider cruise
Who takes offence at apple-juice?
These grumbler only raise our spunk,
We only fuddle—don't get drunk.

Chorus.

We've got our name, we'll keep it too,
—We grand tee-total dole do—
We'll rail against the men of sin
Who drink their brandy, rum and gin,
Resolved to do our duty here,
So hand along the foaming beer,
And fill your glasses for the toast,
The firm and staunch tee-total host.

Chorus.

F. M. AMERSTON, Weymouth.

THE DISINTERSED WARRIOR.

Gather him to his grave again,
And solemnly and softly lay,
Beneath the verdure of the plain,
The warrior's scattered bones away.
Pay the deep reverence taught of old,
The homage of man's heart to death,
Nor trifle even with the mould
Once quickened by the Almighty's breath.
The soul hath hallowed every part;
That remnant of a martial brow,
Those ribs that held the mighty heart,
That strong arm, ah! 'tis strengthless now,
Spare then, each mouldering fragment spare,
Of God's own image—let them rest,
Till not a trace shall speak of where
The awful likeness is impressed.

For he was fresher from the hand
That formed of earth the human face,
And to the elements did stand
In nearer kindred than our race,
In many a flood of madness tost,
In many a storm has been his path,
He hid him not from heat or frost,
But met them and defied their wrath.
Then were they kind—the forest here,
Rivers and stiller waters paid,
A tribute to the net and spear
Of the red ruler of the shade.
Fruits on the woodland branches lay,
Roots in the shaded mould below:
The stars looked forth to teach his way,
The still earth warned him of his foe.

A noble race! but they are gone,
With their old forests wide and deep,
And we have built our homes upon
Fields where their generation sleep.
Their fountains slake our thirst at noon,
Upon their hills our harvest waves,
Our lovers woo beneath their moon,
Ah! let us spare at least their graves!

ANECDOTES.

Two Dutchmen, who built and used in common a small bridge over a little stream which ran through their farms, had a dispute concerning the repairs of the same. One of them objected to paying the expense of the purchase of a few planks. Finally the aggrieved party went to a neighboring lawyer and placing ten dollars in his hand, said, "I will give you all the bridge money if you'll make Hans do justice mit the dish." "How much will it cost to repair the bridge?" asked the counsellor. "Well, den, not more as five tollar," said the Dutchman. "Very well," said the lawyer, pocketing one of the notes and handing him the other, "take this, and go and get the bridge repaired; it is the best course you can take." "Yass," said the Dutchman, slowly, "dat ish more better dan to quarrel mit Hans," but as he went along home he shook his head frequently, as if unable after all, quite clearly to see how he had gained any thing by going to law.

One of the young blades dining at a fashionable hotel a few days since, was requested by a gentleman to pass some article of food which was near him. "Did you mistake me for the waiter?" asked the exquisite. "No, sir, I mistook you for a gentleman!" was the prompt reply.

A western stump orator, recommending himself to his constituents, said—"If I'm elected to this office I will correct all abuses, purge out all corruption, and go through the enemies of our party like a rat through a new cheese."

"You say this was a very strong smell," remarked an attorney of the defendant to a witness. "Yau! so much strong as I never smell," answered he. "Well, tell the jury how strong that strong was," continued the counsel. "It wash so strong as dake an ox by de horns and tumble him on de ground wit de smell."

A lady in Albany is said to be so kind hearted that when her servants do wrong, instead of scolding, she requests her husband to write a reprimand for them, and sends a little black boy to read it to them.

A Frenchman being about to remove his shop, his landlord inquired the reason, stating at the same time that it was considered a very good stand for business. "Oh yes," he replied, "he's very good stand for de business. Me stan all day, for nobody come to make me move."

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish readers of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.
To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

MR. AND MRS. BATTLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Battle were a fond and loving couple in the town of N—, who for about a twelve-month, had dwelt as "one flesh" in the law matrimonial, and whose union thus far, if a shade less blissful than that of turtle doves, had afforded an example of conjugal felicity as edifying, to say the least, as the generality of matches. It happened one winter evening that, having exhausted all their usual themes of chit chat, they had been sitting in silence for some ten minutes together, luxuriating in 'the uncommunicating muteness of fishes,' when suddenly, with a piercing shriek, Mrs. B. sprang from her chair and jumped upon a side table, crying out at the top of her lungs 'Lord of Mercy! Oh, that horrid being! Kill him, Mr. Battle, kill him!'

The husband, quick as thought, seized the poker, and though half frightened out of his senses, raised it firmly over his head, and placed himself bold upright in an attitude of defence. For some moments he stood speechless, with mingled wonder and awe; then casting a glance at his wife, who stood leaning against the wall, pale, shivering, and half frantic with terror, he at length recovered his wits and the use of his tongue so far as to ask, in a voice somewhat faint and husky—

'Who—where—what is he?'
'There! there! Husband, don't you see? there! It isn't no man—it's a horrid rat mouse. Oh dear, I shall faint away, certain! There he comes again, this way. Merciful Heavens! Oh! Oh!'

Mr. B. breathed a little more freely, after this last piece of information, for, to say the truth, he was by no means a Hercules in strength or stature, (being only four feet eleven in his boots, and weighing but just one hundred and five pounds, even after dinner,) and as he supposed it was some house-rover or cut-throat who had hidden himself in the room, that had caused his wife's fright, his knees had begun to knock together a little à la Belshazzar, notwithstanding his great show of bravery. But now, regaining with marvellous quickness the use of all his limbs and faculties, he advanced boldly in the direction indicated by Mrs. B.'s finger, and with a courage and presence of mind worthy of an Alexander, succeeded, by the aid of the poker, in stretching a most ferocious looking young rat lifeless on the floor.

After a few moments, peace and order were again restored, and Mrs. B. having succeeded in an astonishing degree of self control, in quelling her nerves, was again seated at her work-table, busily plying her needle, when a loud tinkling of the door-bell was followed by the announcement of Mr. Fry. Fry had popped in, as he said, 'to see how they all did and have a little social chat'; but as it turned out, (unfortunately for the peace of our excellent couple,) he was just in season to hear from Mrs. Battle's lips a relation to what she called her 'frightful adventure with the mouse.'

'No, my dear,' interrupted Mr. B., 'a rat.'
'Excuse me, my love, but 'twas a mouse.'

'But I do assure you, Madam, it was a rat.'
'I beg your pardon, Sir; notwithstanding you assure me, I am quite sure it was a mouse.'

'Don't tell Mr. Battle; do you think I'm a fool, not to know a rat from a mouse, and in my own house, too?'

'Keep cool, Mr. Battle; don't get huffy just because I spoke a word. Some how or other, lately, I can never open my lips before you, but you must fly into a pet. And then you must be twit—twit—twitting me always, always about your house, as if you were lord of everything here, and I were only your humble servant. I declare, Battle, you are as cross as a bear and as you can live.'

'Mrs. Battle, you are enough to provoke a saint. Three times have you contradicted me, and—'

'All because I said a mouse wasn't a rat. And a mouse ain't a rat, and you know it, Battle.'

'Mrs. Battle, there's no standing this—No!—nor I won't stand it any longer. I will have a divorce, if there's one to be had in the country. I won't live with such a tergiteant. No, I won't Mrs. Battle, and that's the long and the short of it.'

Here Mrs. Battle fell back in her chair, and burst into a flood of tears. Fry, finding matters getting a little too hot, crept slyly out of the room, and run for home as if from a hornet's nest. Mr. Battle paced the room hurriedly to and fro, for the space of five minutes or more, with blanched cheek, and lip quivering with rage, and finally seated himself by a window, and with an air of affected unconcern, began to whistle Yankee Doodle. He had been seated but three or four minutes, when his wife, suddenly rising up, came across the room, threw her arms affectionately about his neck, and buried her head in his bosom.

'My dear husband.'

'My dear wife.'

'I have offended—deeply offended you. Can you forgive me?'

'Yes, sweet, a thousand times.'

'How foolish I was to dispute with you, dear one, about such a trifle.'

'Yes, it was very foolish in both of us. But never mind; thank Heaven, we've come to our senses again. Kiss me, darling—there, all's made up. Ain't we happy now?'

'Yes, my love. Clouds will come sometimes, but thank Providence, they are all gone now. We couldn't have expected sunshine always. Oh, won't we have the precious times together, hereafter, loving each other so tenderly? There, it does seem to me as if I were at this moment perfectly, perfectly happy.'

'Blessed, blessed wife, kiss me again, darling. There—we have had the last of our quarrels—haven't we, my own, my angel one?'

'Yes, dearest. And if we were going to quarrel again—which never can be—it would be about something of more importance—wouldn't it, love? The more I think of it, the more foolish it appears, quarrelling about so trifling a thing as a mouse.'

'You forget, my dear, a rat you mean.'

'No, my dear, I mean a mouse.'

'How can you, Mrs. Battle, say a mouse, when I have told you, over and over again, 'twas a rat? Dye think I've no eyes?'

'I say what I mean, Mr. Battle, and I mean just what I say. To say that was a rat, is the most absurd thing I ever heard. A rat, indeed!'

'Absurd or not, Mrs. Battle, I tell you, you are a simpleton. You don't know beans from a broom-stick!'

'Then it's because I've lived so long with you, Battle. I don't believe you saw a rat. Every body knows they have long round tails like a file. But I'm an abused woman, and I won't put up with such treatment any longer. I'll go home to my father's. We'll see, then, how some folks will get along. And I will tell you, Battle, it was a mouse.'

'And I will tell you, Mrs. Battle, it wasn't a mouse.'

''Twas a mouse.'

''Twas a rat.'

''Twas a mouse.'

'Rat.'

'Mouse. 'Rat.' 'Mouse.' 'Rat.'

'Mou—' 'R—M—'

Just at this moment, a stage coach drew up before the door, and the appearance of an old and long expected friend, who, after a long absence, burst suddenly into the room, put end to hostilities, and threw both parties into temporary good humor.

To this day, however, the cause of Mrs. Battle's fright has never ceased to be a prolific source of contention, Mr. Battle insisting most strenuously that it was a rat, and Mrs. Battle protesting with equal pertinacity that it was a mouse. A hundred times they have squabbled till almost ready to broomstick each other, and a hundred times they have just made all up again, and asked each other's forgiveness, when an unfortunate allusion by one of the parties to the cause of their quarrel has caused all the smothered fires of rage and indignation to break forth afresh.—Yankee Blade.

LEGAL ABSURDITIES. 'Why cannot we simplify the language of the law—why not banish its old black letter Vandalism? 'Sir, I give you this orange,' and I do give it; should not that declaration and transfer be deemed an absolute conveyance? Yet to make it perfectly legal it must run thus:—

'I give you all and singular my estate and interests, right, title, and claim, and advantage of and in that orange, with the rind, skin, juice, pulp, and pips, to bite, eat, suck, or otherwise eat the same, or give the same away, with or without its rind, skin, juice, pulp, and pips, any thing heretofore or hereinafter, or in other deed or deeds, instrument or instruments, of whatever nature or kind soever, to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding—with much more of the same effect.'

DISCIPLINE AND METHOD. If thou wouldst be easy and happy in thy family, observe discipline and method. Every one should know their duty, and there should be a time and a place for every thing.

SINGULAR HABITS OF SWALLOWS.

House-martens have a singular practice throughout the breeding season, and more particularly towards the latter part of it, of flying up against the walls of buildings, just below the eaves, and daubing them with mud, apparently without any intention of constructing a nest. Perhaps they do not go twice to the same spot; at any rate, these patches of dirt are not applied with any regularity, but may be seen sticking to the brickwork, at intervals of two or more inches, all along the front of the building. Just at the present time my own house has a line of these mud patches carried round nearly three sides of it. I fancy I notice that the birds are more inclined to this sort of proceeding in some states of weather than others. Occasionally, twenty or thirty martens will be engaged in this manner from morning till night, when, perhaps, for several days before and after, not one is to be noticed. A damp, cloudy day, especially, if also warm, seems to call them most to this employment, during which they appear actuated by some feeling or excitement which it is difficult to explain. It is surely something more than an instance of their 'caprice in fixing on a nesting-place' (alluded to by White), which induces them to 'begin many edifices, and leave them unfinished.' In the present instance, I suspect, they may be the first broods but lately fledged, whose instinct begins to operate and show itself in this manner before it is wanted. We see something analogous to this in the behaviour of caged birds, who seem to experience a pleasurable sensation in carrying about in their bills, at the proper season for building, any little pieces of thread straw, or other materials which happen to be within their reach, even when they have no mate, and no conception for making a regular nest. This is evidently an instinctive action occasioned by the excitement of unsatisfied desire, increased, perhaps, by high and stimulating food.—The Rec. L. Jennings' Observations on Nat. History.

THE SUN FLOWER.

Those who are most experienced in the cultivation of the plant are sanguine that, with a proper soil and proper cultivation, it is more profitable than wheat or corn. The seeds are more oleaginous than those of the flax plant, and combine the qualities for table use of the best olive oil; for burning, of the best sperm, without its smoke; and for painting, it is said by painters, who have used it, to be superior to linseed, as it is more rapid in drying, equally easy in spreading, and without forming a much denser coat.

Prepared and eaten as artichokes, the young cups of this plant are very esculent and pleasing to the palate; the stalks are an excellent substitute for hemp or flax, and for bee pasture; it is equal to any plant, yielded in its luscious and numerous nectaries, an abundance of the best and most palatable honey. A writer in one of our agricultural exchanges, says that, on suitable soil, with proper cultivation, it will yield, on an average, from eighty to one hundred bushels of seeds to the acre. From five to seven quarts of oil are calculated on per bushel. If this is not over-estimating its productiveness, and it can be raised as wheat or Indian corn, ordinarily considered the most expensive crops cultivated, the sun-flower must be a very profitable production. We have, heretofore, cultivated it on a small scale—usually in vacant spots, by the fences and in places where the cultivation of other vegetables was ineligible, and so far as our experience goes, it corroborates the above assertions. We find that the green leaves are very excellent fodder for cows, especially when the feed in our pastures gets low, in seasons of scarcity and drought. We generally commence plucking them in July, taking the lower leaves first, and feeding them out at night, or, if the scarcity of food is great, in the morning before turning them from their yards. We have sometimes given them corn-toppings and the leaves of the sun-flower at the same time, and have found that the latter is invariably preferred. The seed of the sun-flower is a most desirable food for poultry, is highly oleaginous nature wholly superseding the necessity of animal food.—Dr. Holmes.

FAITH.

An individual, recently, while standing in a street in Brooklyn, (N. Y.) was asked by a poor, famishing, ill-clad man, for relief. He said he had applied to the poor authorities in vain, and unless he got relief from some source very soon, he knew not what must become of him. The appeal reached the heart of the individual addressed, and would have reached his pocket, but, alas! it happened that it was empty. He bid the poor fellow wait a few minutes, and he would try to raise a small sum from individuals he was acquainted with in the neighborhood. He went, and after obtaining a few shillings, was returning, when he met a noble hearted fellow, to whom he said—'Mr. S., I want a shilling or two from you, for a poor fellow dying, almost, for want.' Mr. S. searched his pockets for some time, and at length said, 'Upon my word, I have not a cent about me. I am sorry.' The other turned to go away, but was called back by Mr. S., saying—'Hold! I have found something—if that will be of any use to you, take it.'

'But,' replied the other, 'this is a two dollar bill. I cannot take it. I only want a quarter from you, at most.'

'Take it along,' was the reply, 'and don't keep the poor fellow standing there famishing. It will get him something comfortable.'

The individual departed with the money, but before he had got twenty yards, returned, and said: 'Mr. S., I cannot take it. I know you have many calls and turn none away, and this seems like robbery. I cannot take it.'

'There you stand,' replied Mr. S., 'and perhaps the poor fellow has had neither bit nor sup to-day. You and I have had plenty; take it along. I shall be repaid fivefold for what I have given.'

'But,' said the individual, as he stood with the bill in his outstretched hand—'I would rather.'

'Pshaw! don't I tell you I shall receive fivefold for that; you know what the good book says—go and make the good fellow happy, for a short time at least.'

The individual was about to express his doubts, and urge him to receive back the money, when a third person stepped up, and said, 'Mr. S., I have owed you ten dollars for a long time, but until within one hour have not been able to pay you. I have unexpectedly received the amount of an old bill, and the first thing afterwards was to find and pay you.' Mr. S. took the money, and he who paid it departed. The individual who still held the two dollar bill in his hand, looked on in astonishment as

BOB WADDAM'S HORSE TRADE.

'You know Bob Waddam, I reckon,' said Uncle Mike.

'Not that I recollect,' I replied.

'Well, Bob was an amazin' hand at tradin' horses, and generally come out ahead too. I never knew him rarily girdled and the underbrush cut but once.'

'How was that, Uncle Mike.'

'Why, you see Bob had just been getting a grey boss in some of his deals, that was just about as nice a boss to look at as ever put his nose through the rack sticks. He was a human lookin' boss and nothin' shorter. He was always lookin' for stars, and carried his tail like the National Flag on the fourth of July.'

He wouldn't work—he was above it. He'd almost stop when he see his shadow followin' him for fear he might be drawn in. Now then, says Bob, some individual is bound to be picked up. So, makin' an excuse that Gray's shoes wanted fixin', he sent him to the blacksmith's and harnessd up his other horses, hitched on to a wagon load of stone, and drove down to Sam Hewett's tavern. Here he stopped before the door, unharnessed his near side boss, and bringing Gray over from the shop, harnessed him up in his place. Bob went in and took a drink, and waited round until some man should come along who wanted to 'speculate.'

He hadn't been waitin' long when he see some feller comin' up the road like all possessed, his horses under a full run, while he was sawin' the bit and hollerin' 'wo! wo! with all his might and main. He managed to stop 'em after he got a little ways by Sam Hewett's, and turning 'em round, he came up a slappin' his hands and cussin' that 'sorrel boss.'

'He's never ready to stop,' says he, 'that boss aint; and though he's the best boss I ever owned, yet, blast my eyes if I don't get shut of him.'

'Well, jest then out comes Bob and mounted his wagon, says as he was goin' to drive off, when says he—

'Hallo, stranger, perhaps you'd like to deal with me for a steady one?'

'Why, yes,' says the stranger, 'I would like something a little more quiet than that go-ahead snap-dragon rascal of mine.'

So Bob, he looks at the sorrel, and found him a fine square built animal, his eyes full of fire, and every muscle in play.

'Well,' said Bob, 'a few words does for me. There's my gray—here's your sorrel. What's your proposition?'

'Now you are talkin',' says the stranger, examining the gray as he stood hitched to the load of stone. 'I'll give you sorrel, and the best forty dollar clock in my wagon for your gray.'

'Done,' said Bob, 'jest unhitch.'

'Neither of them had asked t'other any questions, cause neither one of them wanted to answer any. The horses were exchanged. Bob had got his clock, and the stranger got in to his wagon, took up his lines, and biddin' 'em good day, was about to start, when gray put a stop to it, and wouldn't budge a hair. In vain did the stranger whip and coax—not an inch could he get. There sat Bob, laughin' in his sleeve, almost ready to burst, to see how the stranger was tryin' to start and couldn't. Not a word did the stranger say, however; but after he got tired and had given up tryin' any more, he came and sat down on the horse block.

Bob thought he might as well be going; so picking up his ribbons—'go along,' says he. The sorrel turned his head and looked at him as much as to say, 'don't you wish I would?' but didn't stir a hoof. In vain Bob coaxed and patted. Sorrel was thar, and he wasn't any where else.

'Well, I reckon it's my turn to laugh now,' said the stranger; 'I s'pose you'll call again when you come in town?'

'Oh never mind,' says Bob. 'Sorrel will go or else you couldn't have got here with him.'

'Oh yes,' says the stranger; 'you can start him if you'll only bring some shavings and kindle a fire under him, as I did.' And then he laughed again, and when I came away, they were playing a game of Old Sledge, to see who should take them both.—Cincinnati News.

he saw Mr. S. receive just fivefold, as he had had predicted—as though it was a matter of course.

'What are you looking so astonished for?' said Mr. S., pleasantly. 'Didn't I tell you I should receive fivefold? I knew it. If I had not stopped to talk with you the man would have been spent, doubtless, before tomorrow. Now go; don't keep the poor fellow out of his money any longer; and mind, always rely on what the good book says.'

FIGHT WITH A PANTHER.

In years gone by, say 1820, there lived in Lawrence County, Alabama, two brothers—Jim and Bob Luckey. The latter had obtained the sobriquet of 'Canoe Bob,' while the former had the appellation of 'Painter Jim.' This cognomen, the sequel will show, he was honorably entitled to.

About the period spoken of, there was a shooting match at old Jim Rousey's grocery, near the mouth of Bear Creek, in the unsettled part of Lawrence County. The brothers were perfect antipodes in character; though brave to a fault, Bob was kind and good natured, while Jim was always ready for a fight, right or wrong. It happened on the day spoken of, that there was a fellow from the forks of Cypress, who was rather acknowledged in Lauderdale, as being the best in rough fight on those waters; and after the shootin' was over, and Old Bald face, (alias Kentucky wine) had circulated pretty free, there was some banter as to manhood thrown out, such as these: I am the best man that ever wore hair, and can whip any man, woman or child from the Forks of Cypress to the Tennessee River; except my friends.' This Jim thought an insinuation and immediately stepped out and said he could 'thrash any man in Alabama, and they might throw in a panther or a wild cat.'

At this juncture 'Canoe Bob' interferred and quashed the fight, and treated all hands. Soon after this the two brothers, Jim and Bob, started for home, talking over the affairs at Rousey's when Jim accosted Bob something in this style: 'Bob, I say?'

'What?' responded Bob.

'This is not the first time, replied Jim that you have entered in a fight I was about to make, and said he 'I'll be—if you ever do so again I'll give you an infernal thrashing.'

Bob declared that he had kept him out of several fights, and he would be extremely exasperated if this was not the last time.

Just at this moment, immediately in front in the road, on a log, stood a half grown panther, crouching himself and wagging his tail ready for a spring. On seeing it, Jim said to Bob—'Hold my hat, and let me have a fair shake.' Which Bob readily complied with. A very pretty little fight occurred, and for a time it was so good and so good—sometimes victory appeared in favor of the quadruped, and then Jim's show was the best, while Bob stood about twenty feet off, hurraing for Jim, who finally succeeded in whipping the panther. Having done this handsomely, Jim turned to his brother and saluted him with—'Why he hadn't helped him? who immediately answered with a certain nonchalance peculiar to the man, that Jim had just declared if he ever interferred in a fight of his making, that he might expect to catch a whipping.'

From this day, Jim received the cognomen of 'Painter Jim,' and when his dander is up, he often boasts that he can whip his weight in wild cats and a panther thrown in.

HABITS OF VARIOUS AUTHORS.

Homer, it is said, had such an aversion to natural music, that he could never be prevailed on to walk along the banks of a murmuring brook; nevertheless, he sang his own ballads, though not in the character of a mediant, as recorded by Zolius.

Virgil was so fond of salt, that he seldom went without a box full in his pocket, which he made use of from time to time, as men of the present day use tobacco.

Zoroaster, it is said, though the most profound philosopher of his time, theoretically, was very easily put out of temper. He once carried his irritability so far, as to break a marble table to pieces with a hammer, because he chanced to stumble over it in the dark.

Shakspeare, though one of the most gorgeous of men, was a great higgler. He was often known to dispute with a shopkeeper for half an hour on a quarter of a penny. He gives Hotspur credit for a portion of his own disposition, when he makes him say, 'I would cavil on the ninth part of a hair.'

Peter Cornelius, the greatest wit of his time, so far as concerns his works, was remarkably stupid in conversation, as was also Addison, who is acknowledged to have been one of the most elegant writers that ever lived.

Samuel Rogers is an inveterate punster, albeit from his poetry one might suppose him to be the greatest writer in Christendom. He has one peculiarity that distinguishes him from all poets, past, present, and to come, id est, three hundred thousand pounds.

Young wrote his "Night Thoughts" with a scull and a candle in it before him. His own scull was luckily in the room, or very little aid would have been yielded by the other.

VICIOUS SHAME. Such is human weakness, under present modes of education, that we are less ashamed, perhaps, of supposed vice, than of real poverty.

For the QUINCY PATRIOT.

PLEASANT AND APPROPRIATE.

A few evenings ago was presented a spectacle, then which, none in the town was ever more interesting or commendable. At the South District School-house were assembled a crowd of parents and children, spontaneously brought together by a desire to testify the respect and affection cherished towards WILLIAM SEEVER, Esq., their Grammar Master. Ninety-two of his pupils were prepared to place in his hands some token of their esteem and love. Almost thirty years had rolled away since first he was introduced as a common school teacher, to the town of Quincy, and during most of these many years he had held the high and responsible station of Teacher here. Two or three hours before the presentation, he was waited on with a request to be at his School-room. Up to this time he had been ignorant that anything was doing for him, and now he was not told what was doing. Complying with the request, he found his school-room filled with his friends, young and old; and directly one of his pupils entered at the head of a delegation, and read before the Moderator of the meeting the following Address. We give it in the entire dress with which the young lady who wrote it had herself clothed it, (we are told she had not an hour's previous notice that she must put such an address) to show the public how Mr. Seever had taught his pupils:—

"To Mr. William Seever:—
 "Sir—We have come together this evening with hearts filled with grateful emotions towards you, for the valuable acquisitions we have gained through you, a kind and faithful teacher. And we sincerely regret that one with whom we have been so long and pleasantly associated is about to leave us. But may this Goblet, which we would present as a token of respect and esteem, serve to call up the pleasant hours which we, as teacher and scholars, have passed together. Years may intervene ere we shall meet again, but, however, wherever you may be situated in life, may you ever meet with friends as true and hearty as sincere as those who now bid you farewell."
 "Your memory, sir, is in our hearts enshrined. You have done your duty well and well you have taught us ours."
 In behalf of the School.

These last lines were inscribed on one side of the Goblet, and on the other side, as follows:—
 "Token of respect and affection presented to William Seever, Esq., by his pupils of the South District Grammar School, Quincy, March 12th, 1847."

The Goblet was of massive silver and cost about fifty dollars. Mr. Seever, overwhelmed for a long time unable to utter a word while hardly a dry eye remained in the School-room, at length replied in substance as follows:—
 "Recently a gentleman was unexpectedly surprised by an act of noble generosity, and his first exclamation was 'who ever had such friends?' He was not more surprised than I am. Three hours since I knew nothing of this. After school, one of the scholars said, 'we are going to make you a present this evening,'—but who could have expected a token of affection so valuable in itself, so valuable as a memento of the donors, and doubly dear to me for the sentiments inscribed upon it! It will often remind me of those with whom I have passed so many happy hours, during which, we probably have many things to regret. But I hope we shall ever cherish towards each other feelings of benevolence, of charity, and of forgiveness, remembering that 'To err is human to forgive divine.' If I have ever been instrumental in your improvement, I have only done my duty, and 'you' must have done 'yours.' My richest reward will be to know you are respected, prosperous and happy. Accept my sincere thanks, individually, for this proof of your confidence and esteem. It is as acceptable as it was unexpected."

The moderator, Mr. John Glover, Jr., after a few brief remarks as follows, dissolved the meeting:—

My friends—Parents and Children of the District—The occasion which has called us together is both pleasantly and painfully interesting. You make a demonstration of gratitude and affection towards the worthy man who has so long and so ably served you,—this is pleasurable. You bestow upon him this Goblet as a memento; a token of the affection and gratitude you entertain for his valuable services. You anticipate a separation,—this is painful.

The occasion brings also painfully to mind the unworthy strife raised by an officious few who have at last so prevailed over the minds of the whole, that, by a majority of one vote, not of the parents who have children under his care, but of the legal voters of the District, Mr. Seever is to be dismissed. We must part with him. No sacrifice, no generosity, not even the liberal bestowal of the money paid him as salary, to hire a music master for the School, nor the gratuitous devotion of almost all his evenings at the School-room to teach his pupils penmanship could soften the relentless heart of party strife; he must go. We lament his loss but here we must stop. Let me emphatically exhort you, children, harbor no resentment. Hold up the hands of your future master, whoever he may be. Obey him, honor him, respect his wishes as you have done those of master Seever. Contribute all in your power to make the life of your teacher happy. Show to those who have torn from you the master you most loved and who has done so much to merit your gratitude, that he has cultivated in you manly, generous and magnanimous dispositions, and thus make them ashamed of their conduct if they have been ungenerous towards him."

Here the speaker was overwhelmed with the scene of weeping and sobbing before him and his feelings got the mastery. He could only dismiss the assembly and permit the gust of wounded affections to exhaust itself as he and they wended their way sorrowing to their homes, hoping and determined to forgive as they hope to be forgiven.

Mr. Editor, we feel constrained to add—this is right. Fidelity in any calling, specially in a public trust, should be thus publicly remembered and publicly rewarded, and it is heart cheering in these days to be assured not only of distinguished fidelity, like that of Mr. Seever, but also to know that there exists, amid the petty strifes of self-exaggeration and self-will which so mar the happiness of life, that there still exists hearts capable of appreciating and well acknowledging that fidelity. We almost envy Mr. Seever and feel constrained to inquire—Has he no enemies to take off the implied curse in that assurance "We unto you when all men speak well of you?"

MILTON AND DORCHESTER RAILROAD. When we penned a short paragraph, a few weeks since, in relation to the supposed suspension of the Dorchester and Milton Branch Railroad, we were not aware that so small a spark would have kindled so great a fire. No sooner had our humble sheet made its appearance, than we were besieged with communications, written and oral, in regard to the matter. This is the simple story of our paragraph:—A rumor was current in the community that it was intended to delay the commencing of the Dorchester and Milton road till the petition before the Legislature for the extension of the Fall River Railroad by an independent route to Boston was settled. It is well known that this extension route passes through Dorchester and Milton, and if granted by the Legislature and built, would render the Branch almost worthless. It was a rumor that had nothing improbable upon the face of it, and to our view seemed so regardless of the interest of the Stockholders of the Branch Road that we had no doubts of its truth and therefore gave it a place in our columns. But it seems to have given great offence somewhere, and articles denunciatory have appeared in the Boston papers, and even the able Friend of the Boston Post has stepped aside from his usual dignity and raps us for circulating a report that now appears to be unfounded. We shall say but one word in relation to the truth of the original rumor, for we have made inquiries upon the subject and find that the Dorchester and Milton Branch Railroad have never concluded to suspend their operations, but at the same time we also find that the matter has been talked over by stockholders and others, and some members of the Branch corporation are strongly in favor of the Fall River extension and have presented petitions to the Legislature to aid that undertaking, and under such circumstances it is singular that such a report as we gave currency to should have arisen? For ourselves we have no interest in the matter—our intention being solely to chronicle passing events for the information of our subscribers, and if in so doing we commit an error—an event which we trust but rarely occurs—we do not believe that if we make none worse than the one above alluded to, that we shall have committed a very unpardonable offence.

CHOICE OF OFFICERS. At the annual meeting of the Weymouth and Braintree Washington Total Abstinence Society on the 15th inst., at Liberty Hall, the following persons were chosen to fill the Board of Officers the ensuing year.
President—John O. Foye.
Vice Presidents—Atterton Wales, Jr. and Jonathan Hunt.
Recording Secretary—Martin K. Pratt.
Corresponding Secretary—Elias Richards.
Treasurer—John Rolie.
Visiting Committee—Dennis Smith, Charles S. Clapp, Bennett Smith, Edward K. Chipman, Amos Wheelock, David J. Tirrell, Mrs. C. Rolie, Mrs. M. Edson, Mrs. Bagley, Mrs. Deborah Cushing, Mrs. Hannah Holbrook, Mrs. Rachel Smith.

GUN COTTON. The Legislature of Massachusetts have passed an act, whereby the inhabitants of any town, and the government of any city in this Commonwealth, may order that no Gun Cotton or other substances prepared like it for explosion, shall be kept within the limits of such town or city, excepting under the regulations and penalties that are now applicable by law to gunpowder, and if it shall be considered necessary for public safety, they may restrict the quantity to be so kept, to one fifth of the weight of gunpowder allowed by law in such case provided for.

MEXICO. It is now certain that an attack will be made by the Americans upon the great Castle as well as the city of Vera Cruz. Santa Anna keeps his plans secret, and it is difficult to divine the course he intends to pursue. Thrilling news may soon be expected.

The venerable Dr. John Pierce has been settled over the First Parish in Brookline, where he now officiates as the sole Pastor, nearly fifty years.

THE LICENSE LAW. The Grand Jury of Boston have indicted over a hundred persons for violations of the license law, and complaints are almost daily instituted before the Court against individuals for similar offences.

Chief Justice Wells has said that the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas had ever been of the opinion that the license law was constitutional; and this opinion has been confirmed by the highest judicial authority in the country; and the question had also been popularly settled in all counties where county commissioners are elected. In all future convictions, the Judges would impose not only the statute punishment but also require sureties for good behavior, and if the bonds be broken, the full amount would be required.

TOKEN OF AFFECTION. In to-day's paper will be found a full account of the proceedings connected with the presentation of a silver Goblet to Mr. William Seever, late Instructor of the Grammar School in the South District of this town, by a portion of his pupils. This token is well deserved, and shows the esteem and affection entertained by the children recently under his charge, as well as their parents. It was our fortune to receive eight years' instruction from Mr. Seever, and a goodly number of the inhabitants of the town were formerly his scholars, yet but few will be found to speak otherwise than in the highest terms of his labors. A life so long and successfully devoted to the welfare of the rising generations, will ever receive the warmest affections and ardent blessings of the recipients.

LEGISLATIVE. A bill to authorize the Old Colony Railroad Corporation to extend that road in the city of Boston, has passed to be enacted.

The Committee have reported favorably on the petition of James Newcomb and others for a railroad from Quincy Point to the stone quarries.

The remonstrance of G. B. Weston and eighty others of Duxbury, against any modification of the charter of the South Shore Railroad, has been presented.

FIRE. A large barn, near the Old Colony Depot, was burnt in Dorchester, last Thursday night. It was empty. Supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

A barn was also set on fire and entirely destroyed on Friday evening of last week, and a quantity of hay and several carriages consumed.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. The election of County and Special Commissioners takes place, by the provisions of law, on the first Monday of April next. Two conventions have been called at Dedham, for selection of candidates; and as much interest is now felt in the license question, it is anticipated that more than usual feeling will be manifested in the selection of candidates.

RELIEF FUND. We see it stated that the Rev. Mr. Lunt's Society of this town, have contributed $111.00 for the aid of the suffering Irish and Scotch. We do not learn that contributions have been taken at the other religious societies in the town. We hope they are not unmindful of the duty of a Christian, which they doubtless profess. It is not yet too late to lend a helping hand.

MONEY WANTED. Our creditors expect some money on the first of April, which we have agreed to pay them on the strength of promises made to those indebted to us. We have made calls until our patience is about exhausted, and we have written to others with nearly the same effect. Remember the time named, and be prepared all ye indebted to answer our call with the ready.

FIRE FROM LIME. A schooner, loaded with lime, took fire last Monday, in Neponset River, just below the Railroad Bridge. The lime was destroyed, but the vessel was saved although considerably damaged.

The whole amount of private remittances from Boston, for the benefit of the Irish Relief Fund, exceeds two hundred and sixteen thousand dollars.

There are now over forty different Railroad applications before the two Railroad Committee in the Massachusetts Legislature.

The capacity of the United States for supplying the wants of Great Britain with bread stuffs, is shown in an estimate contained in a statistical article published in a New York paper. It makes the surplus of wheat and Indian corn for export to be—Wheat 3,000,000 bushels; Flour, 3,500,000 barrels; Indian corn and meal, 17,000,000 bushels.

Jacob Hays, the veteran high constable of the city and County of New York, well known throughout the United States as "Old Hays," was first appointed Marshal, in the year 1798. In 1801, he received the appointment of High Constable, and has been re-appointed annually from that period up to the present time.

The United States steamer Hunter left New Orleans again on the first instant, for the Gulf of Mexico, on board of which is Lieut. J. Q. Adams, of this town. The accident which caused her return to port was not so serious as was at first supposed.

The town of Towanda, (Penn.) has just been visited by a very extensive and destructive conflagration. More than twenty buildings are laid waste, in the fairest and most business portion of the town. The loss is estimated at from sixty to eighty thousand dollars.

The Selectmen of Westfield, (Mass.) have been instructed by the town to omit from the list of Jurors, all Odd Fellows, Rum-sellers and Rum-drinkers.

The squadron with which it is said that the Prince de Joinville of France, will enter the magnificent harbor of New York next summer, will consist of eight ships of the line, four or five frigates, and as many war steamers, surrounded by fifteen or twenty vessels bearing the tri-colored flag.

The Adjutant General of the United States Army offers a reward of thirty thousand dollars for the arrest of one thousand and eleven deserters from the United States Army! The names and particular descriptions of each soldier are contained in an advertisement in the New York Police Gazette.

The Plymouth Rock says that several new vessels are to be built in that harbor this season. Ship carpenters are scarce and command good wages.

Among the names attached to a petition to the Massachusetts Legislature, against the abolition of capital punishment, were no less than twenty ropemakers.

Joseph Bonaparte's beautiful residence, erected with so much taste and liberal expenditures at Bordentown, on the Delaware, in New Jersey, is to be sold at auction next June. The house, large and spacious, is built of stone and brick. The Park, containing two hundred and seventy-four acres, is very beautiful.

The True American, which 'fell through,' by Cassius M. Clay's departure to Mexico, is to be recommenced at Lexington, (Ky.) by a gentleman of superior abilities, who was once a slaveholder.

Snow, in the neighborhood of Quebec, lays on the hard wood lands to the depth of five feet. In many of the fields the fences are no longer visible.

Three churches have been destroyed by fire the past winter in Massachusetts. One in Lexington, one in Haverhill, and one in Broomfield—all from the same cause, stove or furnace pipes.

Hon. Thomas H. Benton declines the appointment of Major General in the Army, tendered to him by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

It is estimated now, that nine-tenths of the paupers, supported by the Corporation of New York, are foreigners, and only one-tenth Americans. It is also estimated that the Almshouse expenses for the year 1846 will be about three hundred thousand dollars; so that the city of New York has to spend annually, two hundred and seventy thousand dollars, for the support of the off-scouring of Europe.

When Quincy Hall Market was built by the then Mayor, Josiah Quincy, he was rated as a madman, and a fool for the enormous outlay. If now lives to see a project on foot in his native city, for the building of two more such market houses, one in the Southern and the other in the Western parts of Boston. This must be gratifying to him, and shows his clear forecast and indomitable perseverance.

Wisconsin has been admitted into the Union, and will be represented in Congress at the next session. The opening of the Thirtieth Congress will witness a representation from thirty States.

NOTICES.

The members of the Social Singing Society are requested to meet at Christ Church, TO-MORROW EVENING, at half past six o'clock precisely. Members are reminded to bring their books with them. JOSEPH FIELD, Secretary.

Rt. Rev. Manton Eastburn, D. D., Bishop of the Episcopal Church in Massachusetts, will preach in Christ Church, Quincy, on SUNDAY (to-morrow) EVENING, at quarter past seven o'clock. All persons are respectfully invited. Seats free.

His Excellency, Governor Briggs, and His Honor, Lieutenant Governor Reed, will address the Teachers' Institute, now in session in this town, on MONDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock. On THURSDAY EVENING next, the addresses will be from Rev. Dr. Putnam of Roxbury, and Rev. S. K. Lothrop, Pastor of the Brattle Street Church, Boston, at the same hour. The citizens of Quincy are respectfully invited to attend.

In consequence of the lectures that are to be given at the Town Hall, the Social Temperance Meeting of this evening will be postponed for one week, and the meeting of the Union Board will be postponed until the evening of the 28th inst., at seven o'clock.

By the advice of a number of the Officers,
 S. ADAMS, Secretary of the Board.

Whigs of Quincy!

M., for the purpose of nominating three candidates for County Commissioners, and two candidates for Special Commissioners, for the County of Norfolk.

Per order of the Town Committee,
 CHARLES CLAPP, Secretary

OPINION OF THE PRESS.

WISTARS BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. The beneficial effects of this remedial composition are astonishing to the world, and make it one of the most popular medicines now known. For Coughs, Colds, and Consumptive cases, its curative powers are established by numerous testimonials of the highest character. In the first stages of disease, termed "Catarrhal Consumption," originating from neglected Colds, it has been used with undeviating success, and hundreds acknowledge they owe the restoration of their health to this invaluable medicine.—Sentinel and Reformer, Worcester.

New Spring Goods!!
JOHN DINEGAN,
MERCHANT TAILOR, School Street, Quincy.

WOULD respectfully intimate to the people of Quincy, and the surrounding villages, that he has just received an assortment of
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS,
which he flatters himself will be found to correspond with the liberal patronage he has received, and for which he returns his sincere thanks.

His present stock consists in part as follows:—
GERMAN CLOTHS,
of the very best make and finish;
FRENCH CLOTHS,
of extra and superfine jet black, blue and fancy colors;
ENGLISH CLOTHS,
Yorkshire and west of England manufacture, including the most approved fabrics and fashionable shades—brown, citron, golden and green olives, and AMERICAN CLOTHS,
from the very best Mills.
Fashionable Doe Skins,
of English, German, French and American make; VESTINGS,
in very desirable styles of fancy figured, plain, white and satin striped;

Do. ELEGANT NEW VALENCIAS,
in various qualities,—light and dark. London heavy figured SILK VESTINGS and SATIN do.

To the inhabitants of Quincy it is unnecessary for me to say a word of my abilities, or style of getting up a tasty Garment. They have tested my work, and I have no hesitation in saying that I have the honor of working for a majority of the most fashionable and respectable inhabitants of the place.

People run no risk in coming to my establishment for their Clothing, for if they do not suit in every respect they need not have them. Besides, they can buy them twenty per cent. cheaper from me than in any store in Boston.

All my Cuts are made by the best Journeymen Tailors, I ask but one price and my terms are CASH.

QUINCY PATRIOT.
Howqua's Celebrated Mixture.

198 Washington Street & 40 HINCHER Street, Boston.

THE Tea is Good and Cheap!
The Coffee is Good and Cheap!
Both were never so Cheap Before!!

198 Washington Street, Boston, nearly opposite the Marlboro' Hotel.

THE centre of this metropolis, has been visited by very many thousands, who are recommending their friends to participate in the advantages and excellencies of the Teas continually selling at this Store. The present rates of

BLACK TEAS
Are 25, 32, 40, 50, 60, and 60 cents per pound, at Retail.

The Tea at 25 cents is an excellent article for large families. That at 32 cents is strong and sound. That at 40 cents is great strength and fine flavor. That at 50 cents is a Fancy Tea of a Hyson flavor, and has given unusual satisfaction.

GREEN TEAS
Are 25, 40, 50, 60, 75, 80, and $1 per pound.

The first, second, and third qualities are all strong and good Teas. The remainder are well selected stock of Hyson, Imperial, Oolong, or Young Hyson; those rare and rich Ceylon Teas, and Gunpowder Teas, all helping to vouch for the fact that the China Tea Company's Teas are 20 per cent. cheaper than any Grocer's in Town.

No. 198 Washington St. and 78 Hanover St., Boston.

The Secretary of the Treasury contemplates a duty on all Teas and Coffees, to aid in carrying on the Mexican War! You can never buy these necessary articles at a lower rate than now, whilst they are on the Free List.

The Company have the best raw Coffee, procured from Arabia, Mocha, 20; Cuba, 7; Sumatra, 9; Java, Gov't, 12-12; Java, 10; Maracabo, 8; Porto Cabello, 9; St. Domingo, 7.

The above Coffees, burnt, ground, and raw, packed in boxes of retail quantities to suit all, proper for exportation.

Country dealers and the Trade supplied by any of the Expresses running from Boston, at a slight advance upon the first cost, relying upon having the best weight and tare.

20 Per Cent. may be saved by purchasing Teas as above. Address THE CHINA TEA COMPANY, at their Principal Warehouse, 198 Washington Street, Boston.

N. B. Chinese Catty Boxes of one, two, four, six, eight, ten, or twelve pounds, for Family use, and for exportation, can be had, at once, at the Branch Store, 78 Hanover Street, and sent, carrying free of cost, by the City or State, upon receipt of the usual Post Office money order.

THE CHINA TEA COMPANY, in connection with any other establishment in this city or in the neighboring towns, and purchasers are cautioned against this species of fraud.

POETRY.

THE CALENDAR.

From the Monthly Religious Magazine.
Hast thou ever seen in the miner's book
The hours and days gone by?
For, there may be read, at a single look,
And with unerring eye,
In colour and whitening,
The labor and rest,
With which the miner's life is drest.

* Their almanac is a curious thing,
A tell-tale of their task,
For the master miner his lamp may bring,
And have no need to ask,
If faithful or not,
To their tedious lot,
The workmen have been in the darkness grot.

So, in the deep mines of the human heart,
A crystallising leaf
Is receiving the tints of the varying part
For future joy, or grief,
The occupant plays,
Resplendent with rays
Are times of exertion, all blank the lost days.

Then welcome trials, and labors, and toils,
Of hours of ease be spare,
That, when the Master collecteth the spoils
Earth's heaving bosoms bear;
The streakings of white,
Be eclipsed by bright
And manifold hues of the stalactite.

* The miner's Almanac, is the name given to a crystallization which is formed in mines by the dampness and oozings of the crevices coming in contact with the gases. That which is made during the day, is coloured by the dust agitated by the workmen, but that of the night is perfectly colourless. Thus, the days of the week may be counted, every sixth being succeeded by an extra thickness of white, from the stillness of Sunday.

THE MERCIFUL SLAVE HOLDER.

You call yourself a democrat, I call myself the same,
But if you are a democrat then I abjure the name;
Democracy awards to all their just and equal rights,
And honestly for labor done a brother must requite;
Would you sacrifice the multitude to glorify the few?

You call yourself a merciful slaveholder! can it be
That you are so devoid of sense as not to see That 'tis by power alone you hold—that might does not give right—
And that were you an aid, for the mastery you must fight;
Would you esteem him merciful who held you for a slave?
No—even your least advocate you know a fool or knave.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

HON. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

Return to his seat in Congress, on the 13th ult., formed the subject of the following beautiful lines, from the pen of Mrs. Sigourney. We find them in the 'Intelligencer.'

I saw him as he enter'd. Age had thinn'd
The white locks clustering round his ample brow,
And recent sickness chain'd him; yet he came
Still strong in spirit from his northern hills,
To the high conclave, where he longed to be.
—I saw him, as beneath that lofty dome,
Where throng the chosen and the gifted men
From all our many States, he took his seat.
Up, like a cloud they rose, and noble heads
Were bow'd before him; and unfeebled hearts
Paid homage to that 'old man eloquent,'
Such homage as doth honor him who gives,
As well as him who takes.

Heaven bless thee still,
Statesman and sage, of high ancestral line,
Who, with the force of a far reaching mind,
Enrich'd by discipline of studious lore,
Hast serv'd thy country even from boyhood's prime,
Till fourscore winters settled, and last home,
The highest honors. Be thy fame her care,
And, 'mid her pictures for a race unborn,
Be this Uprising in her Halls to greet
The hoary head, with priceless wisdom crown'd!

ANECDOTES.

A judge and a joking lawyer were conversing
about the doctrine of the transmigration of the souls of men into animals.
"Now," says the judge, "suppose you and I were turned into a horse and an ass; which would you prefer to be?"
"The ass, to be sure,"
"Because," was the lawyer's reply, "I have heard of an ass being a judge, but of a horse—never!"

"My dear, come in and go to bed just," said his wife to a jolly son of Erin who had just returned from the fair in a decidedly "how came you so" state. "You must be a tired tired man, with your long walk of two miles." "Arrah! get away with your nonsense," says Pat, "it was the length of the way at all that fatigued me, but the breadth of it."

A well known dentist was met by a noted wag who was carrying an old rake in one hand while he held the other to his face, which wore the lugubrious expression which the "gnawing tooth-ache" is so well calculated to produce. "Doctor," says he, "I want you to pull a couple of teeth for me." "Very well," replied the doctor, "just step into my office and I'll relieve you. There," continued he, as they entered,
"take a seat in that chair and show me the teeth you wish extracted." "Well, doctor," says the wag holding up the rake, "I want you to pull these two broken teeth out of the rake." For a moment the doctor was thrown off his guard by the joke that had been played upon him; but soon recovering himself, he replied—"Well, let me have it—I might as well take the teeth from one rake as another."

"Sir," said one man to another, with whom he was quarrelling, "allow me to say to you, in the softest language, in the mildest manner and in the most polite manner, you are a d-d fool!"

Public Notice.
THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this
community, for the patronage that has been bestowed
upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business
and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in
every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we
say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly
to individuals, or to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash price.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed,
that we can supply them with any style or quality,
at prices varying according to the quality, but all as
low as any person can afford to sell them.
Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient
for the supply of this market, well selected, and will
be sold at fair prices.
We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JU-VENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wal-
lets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers,
Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy
Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.
We again call your attention to our CHIL-DREN'S LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge
by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.
We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all
Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the
most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, Book, Music, &c.
To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and
patronize home enterprise and industry in preference
to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

From the Law Report for February, 1847.

IN ADMIRALTY.

Circuit Court of the United States, Massachusetts District, October Term, 1846. At Boston.

JOHN S. PACKARD v. THE SLOOP LOUISA.

Where a vessel was under fifty tons burthen, and not engaged in the foreign trade, or in the coasting trade of the state, but with a license was employed in carrying and laying stone during summer in Quincy River and Massachusetts Bay, it is doubtful whether her employment was of that maritime character which would render the vessel liable for wages.

If a person is hired on board of her by the master, who has chartered the vessel of all the owners, and a fixed proportion of the profits, and this fact is known to the person, if he signs no shipping articles, and resorts to the master only for payment two or three years after the service is finished, and is paid in part by him,—it is strong evidence that the contract was originally with the master alone, and not intended to bind the owners as such, or the vessel.

This presumption is strengthened if the person was thus hired and employed to load and unload, and lay the stone, as well as to navigate the vessel, instead of signing shipping articles, and being employed exclusively in maritime duties. And the usage of a port, in such a case, has some influence.

A delay to institute proceedings against the vessel for wages for three years after they became due from the master, under the above circumstances and contract, and when in the mean time some of the owners had changed and become insolvent, exonerates her from the lien for wages.

There is no fixed time for liens to expire, which exist at common law, except the time of putting with the possession, and none in maritime liens, where possession does not exist with them exclusively, except the end of the next voyage, or the intervention, after it, of rights by third persons without notice.

This was an appeal from a decree of the district court, dismissing the following libel. It was filed by the libellant in November, 1845, against the sloop Louisa, of forty tons burthen, for wages due to him for services on board of her, commencing in March, 1842, and ending in November after. The libel alleged that Packard served as a seaman, hired by the master, Hersey, at twenty three dollars per month, and that she was employed on the high seas, carrying stone, and he doing duty on board faithfully till duly discharged. The claimants were Seth Spear and John Brisler. Their answer denied that the libellant was a seaman in the Louisa, but averred that he contracted as a laborer, to load and lay stone with the master, Hersey; and denied that the vessel, employed as she was, ever became responsible for wages, she being hired by the master of the owners, in carrying and laying stone, within the state of Massachusetts, for one third of the profits; and that this was known to the libellant. It insisted also, that if the Louisa was ever liable, she had ceased to be so by Packard's resorting to the master, and receiving payment partially of him, and by the delay to institute proceedings against the vessel so long, and till the owners had, in part, become changed.

Kingsbury, counsel for the libellant.
W. S. Morton, for the vessel and claimants.

WOODBURY, J. The evidence and agreements of counsel in this case accord in substance with the facts set out in the libel and answer. Packard is proved to have actually served on board the vessel, both in loading stone, and in navigating her. She was of 40-95 tons burthen, and employed in transporting stone within the State of Massachusetts, and laying it, without shipping papers signed by the crew, or any regular clearance, except a coasting license. The libellant and Hersey came to a settlement in the winter of 1843, and part of what was due has since been paid by Hersey. It was shown that Spear owned three-fourths of her and Hersey one-fourth, and that the former, in June, 1844, said that Hersey ought to pay Packard what was due, and he hoped that P. would not libel the vessel; and that about the first of March, 1845, Spear was again notified that the debt was unpaid. From sixty to seventy dollars still remained so. It was further shown, that in such vessels, under such contracts, the wages were considered a claim on the master and not on the owners.

It is a matter of regret that some of the details as to the employment and papers of this vessel, are not more fully proved and alleged. It is, however, questionable, on all the facts as they stand, whether the Louisa, in such an employment within the river, at Quincy, and within Massachusetts Bay, without any regular clearances, ought to be deemed a vessel liable to any lien for the wages of men, not hired as seamen under any shipping articles, or exclusively for navigating her. Here their business was to help to load, unload, and lay the stone, no less than to navigate her. Whether unloading a vessel belongs to a seaman, as such, depends on the usage of particular places, the heat of the climate, and the character of the hiring and voyage. By the laws of Oleron, it appears that particular officers once existed for this purpose. It is certain, however, that laying stone is no part of the business of a seaman.

This vessel, and the employment of Packard, seem to have been of a mixed or amphibious character, not distinctly and exclusively marine; and at the same time, not distinctly and exclusively independent of marine service and marine liabilities. The vessel was not destined to carry freight in the coasting trade from state to state, nor to people in general; nor merely to carry stone for particular objects, but to carry it for special purposes within the bay, and aid in laying it in wharves and other ways.

And Packard was engaged to work in the latter employment as a laborer, as well as in navigating the vessel, and on a contract with Hersey, who had hired her of the owners, and not under ordinary shipping articles with the owners.

The questions then are, had he a lien for his wages in such a vessel, or for such an employment, either by an express contract, or act of Congress, or any principles of admiralty law?

The claim of a seaman on the vessel for his wages is, at any time, rather an equitable privilege than a technical hypothecation of the vessel. It is a charge on her as a favor of priority of payment, if seasonably enforced. It is given in certain cases by admiralty law, and of course it cannot be sustained there, as that law is founded on the civil law, except where equitable; and in many respects in its character looking for what is equitable, it must be regarded as analogous to other liens, given otherwise than by express statute or express contract.

When such statutes or contracts provide for it, they of course furnish the limitations and conditions. But here no specific agreement is pretended to have been made for such a lien, as in case of pledges and mortgages. Nor is any state statute cited on the subject, such as exist at times in favor of mechanics on houses.

Nor can it be pretended that any lien is probably created, in a case like this, by the acts of Congress. There are but two on this subject. One, passed July 20th, 1790, relates to vessels when bound to a foreign port, or of fifty tons burthen, and engaged in the coasting trade beyond the neighboring shore, and then gives a lien on vessels, which probably means such vessels as just described. The other, passed June 19th, 1813, gives it to all vessels engaged in the bank or cod fisheries. This vessel, the Louisa, was of less than fifty tons burthen, and not engaged in the coasting trade out of the state, nor employed in the foreign trade, or in the bank or cod fisheries, and of course the libellant can claim nothing from her in these views.

As these acts, however, do not prohibit liens for wages created by any principles of admiralty law, on vessels of less than fifty tons burthen, they may, when coming within those principles, be sustained by this court on appeals, under the jurisdiction expressly conferred on the district courts, by the ninth section of the judiciary act of 1789.

But, on those general principles, where and how employed must the vessel be, to give a lien? and to whom on board? It must be an employment from one port to another; and not merely along shore, or in the shore fisheries. It must also be at sea. Not lying merely at a wharf. Not as ferry boat; or merely carrying wood across a river.

And it must be from one port to another, where the tide ebbs and flows; and not on fresh water. The person libelling must also be engaged in maritime duties on board.

The next inquiry is, what are such duties, and to whom is the lien given, if on board a suitable vessel, or one engaged in maritime employment? Not carpenters on board, though they may have a lien at times as mechanics, or if acting as seamen.

Though it does include pilots on the high seas. And pilot, deck hands, engineers and firemen, may sue in rem against a steamboat. All these are engaged in what is really maritime. But not mere landmen on board, as physicians. It is doubtful, therefore, whether Packard's employment on board of the Louisa, partly in loading and laying stone, or the business of the sloop herself, could be regarded as strictly maritime and commercial. It seemed to be not wholly that of the sailor, whose services in and for the ship, and whose reckless character in ocean dangers, have made the law indulge him with this additional security.

And if this kind of claim be not contemplated by the parties from the character of the vessel, or nature of the duties required of the men, it would be unjust to let it be set up against the vessel. Such is the case with seamen on board ships of war, or revenue cutters, and for the reasons that the employment of such vessels and such seamen is not entirely commercial, as well as that the ownership of the vessels, being in the government, bar the practicability of any resort to them for wages having been contemplated, as well as prevents their liability. But the lien is not lost if the vessel merely carries the public mail. Nor in letters of marque which pay wages, and are engaged in commerce; but otherwise with mere privateers, paid by shares.

So there may be other circumstances connected with a transaction which repel or rebut the idea that parties look to a lien. And when these occur, the lien either does not attach, or the evidence of such circumstances shows it to be relinquished. Thus, in the present case, besides the equivocal or ambiguous position of the libellant, and of the vessel in which he labored, there had been a hiring of the Louisa, by the captain, of the other owners, and a contract by her for the owners, but for himself; it being his duty as the charterer of her, to supply the men. All this was known to Packard; and he signed no shipping articles, and perhaps he ought to be considered as having no expectation of a lien, originally, on the vessel.

In some cases this inference might not arise from that alone. But here, coupled with the other facts, it looks like an agreement, made to serve for the captain rather than the owners, when the latter had hired the vessel at a fixed freight and also hired the men, with a knowledge of his contract. The captain could not resort to the vessel for any services or wages of himself, by the admiralty law. Such are the decisions, rather forced on the admiralty by courts of law.

Because on such principle and analogy, the master should have the same lien on the vessel as the seamen. But notwithstanding his claim on principle in cases generally, he could not have it here, as being not employed by the owners, or working for the ship, but for himself; and it seems just that a seaman so employed by him, and with a full knowledge of all these facts, should stand in a like position. A different course would be tantamount to giving Packard a claim on the owners, as owners, when they had not employed him; nor had their agent done it for them. There must have been no knowledge of the facts or the repairs very durable, or the charter must have contemplated it, if the owners are liable for repairs, though the master has hired the vessel, and orders them. The usage in such case to look to the captain would be nothing more than what seems legal and reasonable.

In new cases an existing usage should not be without some influence. Indeed, usage governs often at particular places, as to the duties, and also the usages of seamen. But however any of these views may be, in their force and weight, I think the dismissal of this libel by the district court is on another ground so well supported, both by principle and authority, that the decree ought not to be reversed. It is the long delay to resort to the vessel, and when, in the mean time, the owners had changed, and one of them become insolvent. The claim of a seaman for wages on the vessel, is a species of lien upon an article, which he should not long forbear to enforce, or it may become inequitable. Having assisted to keep in repair, and navigate and use her for purposes profitable to the owners, and having been so attached to it by a contract of shipping papers, and having been exposed to all the risks, and toils, and responsibilities of a seaman in her, he is allowed a privilege to charge and hold on upon her for his payment. But all analogies show that the claim, if renewed after long abandonment, will mislead the public as well as the owners; and embarrass commerce and sales, through secret and unknown and unrecorded outstanding claims. Maritime liens are not like common law liens, limited to possession. Indeed, exclusive possession seldom accompanies them at all. But they are claims in rem, or charges in rem, having priority, and due to be seasonably enforced, else they may work great fraud in the community, where possession is not taken or retained; and no public register or record is made of them, and the property thus secretly encumbered is allowed to depart, it may be, again and again, to the opposite side of the globe. Hence where Congress has given an express lien in the two acts before referred to, they evidently contemplate, as a part of sound public policy, a speedy and prompt enforcement of it.

The first act provides that seamen, 'as soon as the voyage is ended,' shall be entitled to all the wages due; and if not paid in ten days, or if a dispute arises, the master shall be summoned to show cause why process shall not issue against the vessel, 'according to the course of admiralty, to answer for the said wages; and if the master neglects to appear or settle for the wages, process is to issue forthwith, and the master must produce the contract or day-book, and if the vessel is about to proceed to sea before the ten days have expired, or has left the port of delivery before paying the wages, 'immediate process out of any court having admiralty jurisdiction' may be had. This looks to early proceedings only, and contemplates only ten days' delay, and indeed no departure of the vessel, even on a new voyage, till the libel should be filed. And if she does in the mean time depart, or prepares to depart, a process still earlier than ten days can be instituted against her. In the case of fishing vessels, the claim given to the seamen on the vessel is, by the act of June 19th, 1813, sec. 2, limited to six months after the sale of the fish or fare; but is given for that period as fully as in the merchant service. Indeed the sailor, after reaching land, is so impatient for his wages, and so needy, that he will seldom consent to wait long, unless his contract or service has been of a land character rather than maritime, and his habits partake more of the former business. The law, in order to protect him under his improvident habits, when a mere seaman, gives him three modes of redress and security, so as speedily and surely to obtain his just dues. But, doing this, and following the claim on the vessel, even to the last plank or nail, if wrecked or condemned, yet a corresponding diligence must be exercised, in order to secure freedom and safety to commercial transfers of property against secret liens. A prominent reason for giving him a lien in the admiralty, against the ship, is, that he may at once detain her for security; and another is, that the admiralty court being always open, he may obtain satisfaction sooner than by a suit at common law.

Most other liens, raised by implication, if at common law, are dissolved by a separation from the goods which is paramount and of much length. The innkeeper has it only till his guest receives his baggage, and quits. The common-carrier does not retain his lien after the articles are delivered over. Even in maritime cases, a lien on goods for freight is lost, if the goods are delivered, or time is allowed to the charterer of the vessel to make payment of the freight. In many cases, liens on domestic ships for repairs are also lost, if the ships are allowed to go to sea without the liens being enforced on them. But there may be cases of supplies furnished, or monies advanced to the master in a foreign place, which are not secured by an express contract of bottomry or mortgage, and time expressly given, but being to be repaid usually out of the fruits of the voyage, may rest on a different ground, and create liens for the whole voyage, or longer. It is not here pertinent to examine them, and I merely allude to them with the view to exclude them. Again, a lien on goods for salvage is lost, if the goods are given up to the possession of the owner. The policy of the law to shorten such liens, is manifested also in those which are expressly allowed by statute. Thus where a lien has been created by express statute, in favor of mechanics on houses they have helped to build for others, it is usually made to last for only six months, and sometimes but thirty or sixty days. They too are at times required to be recorded. All these limitations are wise, whether created by statute or usage, so as to prevent secret claims from existing on property, independent of its possession, and independent of what is recorded by mortgages or otherwise; and so as to obviate litigation, and remove speedily any obstacle to the free disposal and circulation of property. To allow a seaman, then, after his voyage is over and his contract ended, and his connection with the vessel dissolved, and he embarked for years in employment elsewhere, to retain a secret claim on the vessel, and thus prevent her sale or use, unincumbered, and thus embarrass any new purchaser without notice, would be very bad policy. Much more would the long continuance of the lien, under these circumstances, not be reasonable, if the lien itself, for any time whatever, was doubtful from the nature of his undertaking; as here, being as much that of a laborer to lay the stone, which the vessel carried, as to navigate her, and not having signed any shipping articles as a seaman, nor being engaged on the high seas, or even on the coasting trade to other states.

The seaman, like the common-carrier or innkeeper, or mechanic, would still be able to sue on his contract, till barred by some other equitable defence, or by some statute of limitations. By the statute of Anne, he is not barred, in an action at law for wages not till six years.

Again, in equity, a party, though otherwise chargeable, is sometimes relieved if there has been such delay in the complainant as to prevent the respondent from having a remedy ever so good as if prosecuted earlier. If the delay leads to new interests and relations, it operates against the plaintiff's equity of it, and sometimes lessens the amount to be refunded, and at others prevents the rescinding of a contract. Courts of admiralty, on the matters within their jurisdiction, must be governed by equitable principles. They are chancery courts for the sea. Here a new owner of one quarter has come in instead of Hersey, and any remedy over against the latter had become worthless by his insolvency.

This part of the case, it will be seen, does not go on the ground that the claim of the plaintiff is based on his contract with the master in two or three years, or in any period short of the statute of limitations, as before suggested, if one exists. But it rather proceeds on the ground, that if the seaman sets up an equitable lien on the vessel as collateral security to that contract, and one raised by construction of law, and not regulated by express contract or positive statute, he must enforce it within an equitable period, considering the nature of the lien and of the employment of the vessel, and the charges of interest happening in it. If he asks equity, in this respect, it must be by doing equity, and not violating it. Where the vessel was so situated that the interests in her could not be changed, as if condemned abroad, or where the length of time is accounted for by absence of the seaman or want of recovery for the vessel when condemned or lost after freight is earned; the only bar, perhaps, in most cases, is the statute of limitations, or what is equivalent to it. All depends, if the title in the vessel has not been sold, on the circumstances and the equities of the case. These may require, as a general rule, that the lien for wages is to end, if not enforced soon after the voyage ends. See former analogies. And yet cases may occur where equity would enlarge the time, on some facts, to one year, and on others to several years. Where the vessel continues in existence and employed, or is sold without notice, no case has been found where the lien extended beyond the end of the next voyage. The time of delay there was only nine months. If an owner himself neglects to resume a claim on his ship, once derelict or abandoned, a year and a day, he is stopped from recovering his own property. Justice Livingston says, there is no rule requiring seamen to prosecute at once,—though in France, after a sale of a vessel and one voyage, they will not allow a proceeding in rem. In that case, the seamen were discharged at New Orleans, and presented at New York, their home, as soon as the ship returned there from Liverpool, which was her originally intended voyage. Though she remained some time at New Orleans, over six months, yet she was soon speedily on her return.

The present case is therefore decided on its own peculiarities, as before explained. Again, if the responsibility of the vessel were for the fulfillment of the contract of the master, if existing at all, was considered like that of a surety for the master, being collateral, though it is not so strong as that, how incumbent would it be to resort to the surety early, and not sleep over his claims, till the original debtor becomes insolvent, and the interests of the owners have changed? The United States laws, as to sureties of deputy postmasters, on account of the danger of injury to them by long delays, expressly exonerate them, if the principal be not sued in two years after the debt is liquidated. So in courts of equity, sureties are often exonerated by negligence as to the principals, or giving them new and extraordinary forbearance, if the liability over has been injured or lost by the principal becoming insolvent, after the usual credit or agreed delay expired, or after the claim ought to have been enforced according to the ordinary course of business and its usages.

There is another ground of defence under positive proceedings, which might be urged so far as regards the new owner in the ship and his interests in common with the old owner, for valuable consideration without notice, for ought which appears, of this secret outstanding trust, and usually would hold property, thus purchased, exonerated from such a trust. This would be correct in relation to trusts on land, growing out of parol agreements. So in mortgages of personal property not recorded, where they are required to be recorded. But in case of liens like this, it deserves more consideration before I could allow it to prevail, even as to that purchaser, if the want of notice stood as the only answer to this claim, so much like a bottomry claim, and of which a record or notice is not necessary.

On the whole facts, the nearest precedent which I have found is this. In the case of a lien on a vessel by a bottomry bond, created July 14, 1796, and to take effect on the arrival of the vessel in Europe. She went thither, and returned here Sept. 25th, 1796; but she was not then arrested or libelled to pay it, and it was delayed till the 19th January, 1798, between which periods she had made two voyages, and been attached by creditors. It was held that the lien had thus become discharged. Blaine v. Ship Charles Carter et al. (4 Cranch, 325.) But this was less delay than has occurred here; and Justice Story says, in Notes to Abbott on Shipping, 639, that the rule would be similar in a lien for wages as in a bottomry lien.

The decree below is affirmed.

INSTRUMENTS OF TORTURE.

The Rack was a large wooden frame, of oak, raised three feet from the ground. The prisoner was laid under it, on his back upon the floor; his wrists and ankles were attached by cords to two collars at the ends of the frame; these ends were moved by levers, in opposite directions, till the body rose to the level of the frame: questions were then put; and if the answers did not prove satisfactory, the sufferer was stretched more and more, by the farther elongation of the ends of the frame from each other, through means of the levers, until the bones started from their sockets.

The Scavenger's Daughter, another instrument of torture used in the Tower, was a broad hoop of iron, consisting of two parts fastened to each other by a hinge; it operated by pressure over the small of the back, and by force of the compression soon caused the blood to flow from the nostrils.

The Iron Gauntlets, another kind of torture, served to compress the wrists and suspend the prisoner in the air from two distant points of a beam. 'I felt,' said F. Gerald, one of the sufferers by this kind of torture, 'the chief pain in my breast, belly, arms, and hands. I thought that all the blood in my body had run into my arms, and began to burst out at my fingers ends. This was a mistake; but my arms swelled till the gauntlets were buried within the flesh. After being thus suspended an hour, I fainted; and when I came to myself I found the executioners supporting me in their arms; they replaced the pieces of wood under my feet; but as soon as I recovered, removed them

A fourth kind of torture used in the Tower, was called Little Ease. It was of so small dimensions, and so constructed, that the prisoner could neither stand, walk, sit, or lie in it at full length. He was compelled to draw himself up in a squatting posture, and so remain during several days.

FAST DAY.

Proclamation by the Governor of Massachusetts.

A proper sense of the goodness of God leads individuals and communities to manifest their gratitude to Him by public acts of Thanksgiving and Praise.

When individuals and communities feel the force of the great moral truth, that they have all gone out of the way, and are great sinners in His sight, it is their appropriate duty to humble themselves before Him, and implore His pardoning mercy. From their earliest history, the people of this Commonwealth have observed these solemn rites. In continuation of this ancient christian custom, I do, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint THURSDAY, the 5th day of April next, to be observed throughout the State as a day of Humiliation, Fasting, and Prayer.

Let not a thoughtless disregard of its right observance add to the catalogue of transgression and iniquity which renders its duties so important and necessary.

I earnestly request the people of Massachusetts to show their respect for this religious example of their Fathers, by turning aside from their usual course of business and recreations, and going up to their temples of worship with their spiritual teachers, there with contrite hearts to humble themselves before their Maker, and supplicate His blessing upon themselves and upon their Country.

Remembering with gratitude, that when we were a small and feeble people, His hand led us, and His right hand held us, let us entreat Him, now that we are a numerous and prosperous people that He will not leave us to the pride of our own hearts, and the blindness of our own way:—

That, in all the varied pursuits and business of life, in our relations and intercourse with each other, we may be influenced and controlled by the principles of honesty and good will, so beautifully and clearly delineated in the gospel of His Son:

That He will endow with wisdom all the institutions of the Commonwealth designed to improve the condition of every class of our people, in Education, Literature, Science, Civil Liberty, Morality and Religion:

That He will bless us in the healthful and regular succession of the season, in seed time and in harvest:

That He will animate our hearts with Christian hope, bearing ever present the words of the Saviour, 'the poor ye have always with you,' and dispose us cheerfully to discharge towards them the duty which that truth inculcates:

That in the midst of fulness and plenty, He will awaken within us an active sympathy for that numerous portion of our fellow beings, who at this moment, in a distant hemisphere, are visited with the scourge of famine, and perishing with hunger.

Covering ourselves with humility as with a garment, let us devoutly entreat Him to put an end to the war now existing between our own and the people of a sister Republic, and pray that the time may soon come, when His word shall go forth, that the sword shall cease to kill:

That He will in mercy regard the bereaved and destitute:

That He will restrain the limits of Slavery in our own, and in other lands, and hasten the time when the interests and the happiness of the Master and the Slave shall be advanced by bursting the chains of every bondman on the face of the earth:

That He will teach us the great lesson, that if we should possess every temporal blessing which a people are capable of enjoying, but should not spiritually 'be wise unto salvation,' we should fail in the essential end of existence, and hereafter may experience the full import of that weighty declaration of the Son of God, 'For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or, what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?'

That He will give to the members of this Federal Union a love of Justice and Harmony, promote a brotherly feeling among the nations, crown with success the means employed for the general diffusion of the Gospel, and cause the whole earth to be illumined by the 'Sun of Righteousness.'

MASON AND DIXON'S LINE.

MR. EDITOR.—Happening to be present a few evenings since, where the question of Slavery was agitated, and one of those present, in the course of his remarks, saying something regarding 'Mason & Dixon's Line,' I was much amused to find that not one of the company present, except myself, knew any thing more about the matter than that there was a 'Mason & Dixon's Line,' somewhere, (as one said,) near Baltimore. I happened to have the following in my wallet, which I cut from a paper, in August 1841—and I now send it to you for publication, believing the information to be useful.

Mason & Dixon's Line. This boundary is so termed from the names of Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon—two gentlemen who were appointed to run unfinished lines in 1762, between Pennsylvania and Maryland, on the Territories, subject to the heirs of Penn and Lord Baltimore. A temporary line had been run in 1739, but had not given satisfaction to disputing parties, although it resulted from an agreement in 1730, between themselves. A decree had been made in 1618 by King James, delineating the boundaries between the lands given by charter to the first Lord Baltimore, and those adjudged to his Majesty [afterwards to William Penn.] which divided the tract of land between Delaware Bay and the Chesapeake Bay, by a line equally intersecting it, drawn from Cape Henlopen to the 40th degree of North latitude. A decree in chancery rendered the King's decree imperative. But the situation of Henlopen became long a subject of serious, protracted and expensive litigation, particularly after the death of Penn, in 1718, and Lord Baltimore in 1714, until John and Richard and Thomas Penn, (who had become the sole proprietors of the American possessions of their father William) and Cecillicus, the original patentee, entered in an agreement on the 19th of May, 1772. To this agreement a chart was appended, which ascertained the site of Cape Henlopen, and delineated a division by an East and West line, running Westward from that Cape to the exact middle of the peninsula.

Lord Baltimore became dissatisfied with this agreement, and endeavored to invalidate it. Chancery suits, kindly decrees, and proprietary arrangements followed, which eventually produced the appointment of commissioners to run the temporary line. This was effected in 1739. But the case in chancery being decided in 1759, new commissioners were appointed, who could not however agree, and the question remained open until 1762, when the line was run by Messrs. Mason and Dixon.

CURE FOR DIARRHOEA. A certain cure for this complaint is found in rice water. Boil the rice, take the water, make it palatable with salt, and drink copiously while warm. We never knew this to fail.

THE FALL RIVER RAILROAD ACCIDENT. A complaint has been made against Luther Coleman, who was an Engineer in the service of the Fall River Railroad, charging him with negligence and carelessness, in running his engine with a snow-plough attached, against the passenger train on the same road, at Randolph, on the 23d of February last, and thereby causing the death of two persons.

From the evidence it appeared that Coleman left Fall-River with the snow-plough in advance of the passenger train, and continued in advance until reaching North Bridgewater, when, meeting the passenger train from Boston, which with a snow-plough attached had cleared the track, Coleman—supposed to be ignorant of the passenger train from Fall River—continued on to Randolph. The conductor of this train testified that he was about three minutes longer than usual in running from North Bridgewater to Randolph; it might possibly have been six; that he had been at Randolph about one minute when the collision occurred.

It further appeared from the testimony of those on the engine with Coleman, that the snow flew so, that they could not see at all in advance of the engine, while the plough was in motion, and that they did not know that they had reached the Randolph station when the collision occurred, although the steam had just previously been shut off, but the brakes had not been applied.

After a long and careful examination of the case, by the magistrate, Aaron Prescott Esq., of Randolph, the defendant was ordered to recognize in the sum of five hundred dollars with sureties, to appear before the Court of Common Pleas, at Dedham, in April next.

WARNING TO YOUNG MEN. A Boston correspondent relates the following incident which he says actually occurred in that city:—A few weeks since, a 'Country Spooner,' (but would be Boston Gentleman,) was parading one of the prominent streets of our City, and fell in with a fair daughter of Erin. Overcome by her beauty and personal charms he requested to accompany her home, which was promptly but modestly refused. Being noted for his brave faced impudence, he continued closely to follow the woman, and molest her, in as much as he was able. Upon reaching his residence, (and finding himself done up), he slipped in, as he supposed, unobserved. At the same instant the door bell rung, and the fair lady presented herself before a numerous group, and selecting from their midst, her victim, thus attacked him, 'And please, sir, will ye be after giving that jilt-man a cup of tea, and put him to bed, for fith and he jasus, he's been after insulting a poor lone woman, this paccably going home, he has.' Our friend did not wait for 'ta,' but sloped.

NEW YORK PICTORIAL SUN. The ensuing number of this semi-annual mammoth pictorial newspaper is to be issued about the first of June, and will 'be the most magnificent thing of the kind ever published.' It will contain a great variety of interesting and most attractive engravings on all subjects, each executed in the best possible style, besides a large quantity of literary matter.

Single copies, twelve and a half cents. Persons wishing to subscribe for this number can have them free of postage by immediately leaving their names and money at this office.

It is stated that the cigars smoked in the United States amount to ten million of dollars annually. This expense, great as it is, is incurred by boys and young men principally, and would support fifty thousand of their number in the process of obtaining a liberal education, 200 dollars per annum!

IN ADMIRALTY. On our first page will be found a full report of the libel suit, before the Circuit Court of the United States, of John S. Packard vs. the sloop Louisa. As the questions involved in this case are of great importance upon one of the business interests of this town, we have not felt at liberty to abridge the text of the report, but give it as we find it, in the February number of the Law Reporter. It will be seen that the libel was dismissed conclusively, because the suit was delayed for an unreasonable period after the services were performed; and although no absolutely decisive opinion is given on the liability of our stone sloops for the wages of men employed on board of them, yet there seems to be from the general tenor of Justice Woodbury's remarks, that the libel would have been dismissed on the ground that mariners have no lien upon vessels in similar employment had not there been a stronger reason why the suit should not be sustained. We refer our readers to the report—and while we are on the subject we shall take the liberty to recommend the Law Reporter to the attention of the public—it is a work well worthy the perusal of every individual—as it gives the decision of all the civil and maritime Courts, when the cases are new and important to the public at large. Its pages are also interspersed with much other matter of varied interest.

It is published monthly by Bradbury & Guild, 12 School Street, Boston.

COUNTY NOMINATION. At the democratic convention held at Dedham, last Tuesday, for the nomination of Commissioners, Messrs. Aaron Prescott of Randolph, Fisher A. Kingsbury of Weymouth, and Nathan Jones of Medway, were selected as County Commissioners, and Messrs. Laban Souther of Cohasset and Michael Whittemore, Jr. of Roxbury as Special Commissioners.

QUINCY BRANCH RAILROAD. A bill has been reported to incorporate the Quincy Branch Railroad Company, and Messrs. Octavius T. Rogers, George Penniman and Joshua Emerson are named in the act. The said company is authorized to purchase from the Granite Railway Company their road or railway, already built, with all the rights and privileges thereto belonging, and with all the authority or powers for extending the same which have heretofore been granted by the Legislature.

NEWS FROM THE VOLUNTEERS. The bark Baring Brothers, hence with Capt. Webster and two companies of the Massachusetts volunteers, was spoken March 9th, off the Tortugas Islands, about a week's sail from the Brazos. On board of this vessel are three of the volunteers from this town.

NOW'S THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE. Transient newspapers, or those not sent from the office of publication to subscribers, are charged three cents postage—but if sent from the office of publication to subscribers, only one cent.

GENERAL COURT. The Legislature do but little business of any importance, and probably will not until the committee report. We notice that bills have been reported, concerning the South Shore Branch Railroad Company.

Leave to withdraw has been reported on the petitions of A. P. Nash and others, and Nicholas Tower and others, for charters for railroads from Cohasset to Quincy.

NEW DETROT. It is stated that the Old Colony Railroad Company have commenced the erection of their New Depot, situate on South and Kneeland streets, in Boston. The wooden part of this Depot on South street, is to be three hundred feet long and sixty feet wide. The brick portion is to face on Kneeland street, and the whole when completed, will be a spacious and substantial structure.

ROBBERY AND AN ATTEMPT TO BURN. The store of Darius Brewer in Dorchester, near Milton Mills, was entered on Tuesday night last, by boring a hole through the door and slipping the bolt, and about five dollars in cents taken. The store was also set on fire by putting combustibles under the counter, but went out without doing much damage.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS. Since last week, accounts of battles have been received between Gen. Taylor and Gen. Santa Anna, in which the Americans lost two thousand men killed and the Mexicans nearly five thousand killed. Although nearly a week has elapsed yet no confirmation of the actions have been received.

It is reported that the Mexican army have left the American force in the interior, while they have gone to the frontier in the Rio Grande, where there is only a small detachment of the American army, in the hopes of recapturing Matamoros and other places.

It is stated that Gen. Taylor is surrounded at Monterey, where he is strongly fortified, and that he has made a requisition on the Governors of several States for ten thousand volunteers immediately.

As things now look, Gen. Taylor is rather critically situated, but as there are so many rumors it is hard to arrive at any definite conclusion. Gen. Scott had started with his force for the attack on Vera Cruz and the Castle, as appears by the last news from him. Ere this time, a battle has doubtless been fought.

TEACHER'S INSTITUTE. One of these gatherings has been held in this town for the past ten days. It has been well attended, and several excellent lectures delivered. Gov. Briggs and Lieut. Gov. Reed addressed the meeting, last evening, in the Unitarian Meeting-house.

We were promised a full report of these proceedings but have been disappointed. Perhaps a short review may be furnished next week.

EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE. The steamer Hibernia arrived at Boston last Saturday afternoon, having on board more than two millions of dollars in specie.

The former high prices of bread stuffs in England and Ireland, which it was generally supposed would have declined, are considerably improved. Flour has advanced near a dollar a barrel, and Indian corn in proportion. Cotton has declined a little.

The distress in Ireland still continues, and is reported to be on the increase among the lowest class of the Irish. Large supplies were expected from America.

The health of Daniel O'Connell is in a precarious state which prevents his removal to Ireland. His complaint is stated to be water on the chest and dropsy in the legs, fatal symptoms at his time of life, being more than seventy years of age.

The destitution in Scotland embraces nearly a third part of the country and about two hundred thousand people. The Scottish farmers are substituting beans and turnips on the land hitherto employed for potatoes.

Upwards of fifty thousand persons are now inmates of the London work-houses; sixty thousand are receiving out-door relief; and nearly two thousand nightly sheltered in the refuges for the unprotected and houseless.

It is stated in a Cork paper (Ireland) that a gentleman living in that county bought seventeen horses alive, to feed his hounds, at five shillings each. The horses were on the point of death from hunger, as their owners had no food of any kind to give them.

About fifty gamblers were caught in one den in Boston, pursuing their unlawful calling, last Saturday evening. They were committed until Monday morning, when the matter was compromise on account of their first offence, by each one paying half of the fine and cost.

The Church Almanac for 1844 states that there are now in the Episcopal Church of the United States one thousand three hundred and seventy-one clergy-men. The number of candidates for holy orders is one hundred and eighty-eight.

There are now established in Mexican territory three newspapers printed in English—one at Monterey, in California; one at Matamoros and one at Tampico; and the fourth is about to be established at Monterey, in the State of New Leon.

Col. William Cumming, of Georgia, has also declined accepting the appointment of Major General in the United States Army, recently conferred upon him.

Rev. W. H. T. Barnes, after having enlisted to preach through the Mexican war, deserted the camp at New Orleans, with three months advance pay in his pocket.

Three men—John Perry, James Hoyt, and Henry H. Cory—have been sentenced to the State Prison for life, for burglary in the house of David Howland, in Dartmouth, (Mass.) on the night of the 17th of December last, they being armed at the time with bludgeons, and stealing a silver watch, and about sixty dollars in money.

Grape shot is very destructive, whether projected from a cannon or junk bottle.

A petition, signed by six hundred and forty-eight members of the Catholic Clergy, demanding an immediate and total abolition of slavery in the French colonies, has been laid before the chamber of peers.

A wealthy planter in Greene County, (Ala.) was recently shot by one of his own slaves, a mere youth. No reason assigned.

It is estimated that three hundred thousand emigrants will arrive in the United States during the next six months.

It had continued good sleighing in Pittsfield, (Mass.) and vicinity from Thanksgiving up to the 20th inst.—a period of one hundred and fourteen days. In this vicinity, there have been but a few days decent sleighing this winter.

The Iowa Legislature has adjourned without electing Judges of the Supreme Court, or United States Senators.

A western editor says—You might as well try to confine a thunderbolt in a quart cup, as to cramp the temperance cause; it's rising like a bowl of yeast.

Town Meetings.

Norfolk ss. To either of the Constables of the Town of Quincy, Greeting: L. S. YOU are hereby required, in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to notify and warn the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified to vote in Elections, to meet at the Lyceum Room in said Quincy, on MONDAY, the fifth day of April next, at one o'clock P. M.,

To bring in their votes to the Selectmen, on one ticket, for three County and two Special Commissioners for the County of Norfolk.

And you are further directed to notify and warn the Inhabitants of said Town, qualified to vote in Affairs, to meet at the same place, at four o'clock in the afternoon, on said day, to act on the following articles, viz:

- 1st. To choose a Moderator.
- 2d. To know if the Town will pay Mr. John Jacobs the whole or any part of his expenses in an action lately tried in the Supreme Judicial Court in which he, a Field Driver within the Town of Quincy, was Defendant.
- 3d. To know if the Town will divide the South School District and build a School House, or act any way upon the subject.
- 4th. To know if the Town will accept the Road laid out by the late Henry T. Gay and others, commencing at the westerly corner of Mr. Benjamin Curtis' land on School Street, and running Easterly twenty-eight rods, thence Northerly twenty rods, it being two rods wide, to the house of Benjamin Gay, as a Town Road, to be called Gay Street.
- 5th. To know if the Town will take any measures for laying out and assigning Tomb Lots to those persons who wish to build Tombs in the Town's Burial Ground.
- 6th. To know if the Town will instruct the Selectmen to let at auction the office of Steward or Warden of the Town House, to the lowest bidder, with such restrictions and requisitions as the Selectmen may deem expedient.
- 7th. To choose any Committee, or hear and act on the Report of any Committee, the Town may think proper.

Hereof full not, and make return of this Warrant, with your doings thereon, unto the Town Clerk, on or before the times appointed for said meetings. Given under our hands and seals at Quincy, this twenty fourth day of March, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and forty seven.

DANIEL BAXTER, BRYANT B. NEWCOMB, } Selectmen of Quincy. SETH SPEAR, } Quincy, March 25th, 1847.

POETRY.

TO THE WORKINGMEN.

Potatoes, bread and beef are high,
And wages rather low;
Enormous rents are all the cry,
The poor must closer stow.

From this disease and quarrels come,
And quacks and lawyers thrive;
Disease and strife are aids to rum,
And thus rumsellers live.

Religion's getting out of tune,
The rich are getting deaf;
I wonder what has got that coon,
"Two dollars and roast beef."

It was a faithless promise that,
And meant but to deceive;
The rich, it seems get all the fat,
The poor get what they leave.

And for the dollars, what a slave,
A villainous pretence,
The devil a dollar e'er they gave,
'Twas only paltry cents.

Wake up, you poor low-bending fools,
And claim your right to live;
You were not made for nabob's tools,
To take what they would give.

Demand your price, a living rate,
For all your sweat and toil,
And scorn to work on his estate
Who would your object foil.

You are the many, they the few,
And well to them 'tis known
If to yourselves you are but true,
They cannot grind you down.

LET ME GO HOME.

'Let me go home!'—'tis a plaintive cry
On the wayward path of infancy;
The truant is wearied and bramble-torn,
And it longs in a mother's arms to mourn,
And to feel its troubles hushed to sleep,
Where a mother's love its watch shall keep.
'Rest, child, rest! and never more,
Wander away from thy father's door.'

'Let me go home!'—'tis the lost one's cry;
'Let me go home—go home to die!'
The traitor, who robb'd her of maiden fame
Has cast her forth to a life of shame;
And the gnawing tooth of gaunt despair
Preys on a cheek no longer fair,
Let the erring daughter in;
Open the gates to the Magdalen.

'Let me go home!'—'tis the exile's prayer—
Of what to him is the balmy air
Of the genial south when far away?
His fond wife weeps and his children play,
Where the snows of the north are on the track
O'er which the look'd-for comes not back!
He comes! and brightly the hearth shall burn
To light the joy of that blest return.

'Let me go home!'—from the wanderer's breast
Burst the heaving sigh of the soul's unrest;
Long hath he roamed thro' countries strange,
Breaking ties in the love of change;
One, long forgot, hath his pride unmanned—
He would make his grave in his native land.
'Thro' a ruin'd hall the night winds sweep,
As we lay him down where his fathers sleep.

'Let me go home!'—Poor outcast say,
Hast thou a home?—Yes, a house of clay—
Wherever my faltering feet shall fail,
There my life shall end its mournful tale;
And they'll make me a home, and I'll there abide,
Nor envy the homes of living pride.
Let me go home—to Him who gave
Yet another home—beyond the grave!

REMEMBRANCE.

Farewell! yet on sweet memory's page,
Thy name, thyself, thy worth shall be;
In golden letters there I'll write
The blissful dream that dith unite
My soul, my life, my light with thee.

There is a wish,—a boon I crave,
That precious boon I'd crave of thee—
No pang of woe but 'twill assuage,
'Twill gild my youth, 'twill soothe my age,
To know thou dost remember me.

Remembrance! Oh, thou happy power,
Thy spell can soothe life's troubled sea;
Can bid hope's hallowed fires to glow,
And bid we used to feel, to know,
Blend with the joys that yet may be.

ANECDOTES.

A sailor attempted to kiss a lass he met on shore.
She bridled up and declared he had insulted her;
whereupon Jack exclaimed,—"Well, that beats all!
I've been to sea these twenty years, and never knew
a salute called an insult afore!"

An Irishman in a store asked for a pair of silk gloves, and was told that the kind he wanted would cost a one dollar. "Oh, by my soul, how thin," exclaimed Pat, "I'd sooner have my hands go barefoot
all the days of my life, than give ye that for em."

A Chinese widow, being found fanning the grave of her husband, was asked why she performed so singular an operation. She said she had promised not to marry again while the grave remained damp, and that as it dried very slowly, she saw no harm in assisting in the process.

A tender-hearted young belle remarked to her fair friend the other day, that it seemed cruel to kill so many animals just for their fur. "Only think," she exclaimed, "thirty-six poor squirrels put to death to make a muff for us!" "Why, yes, returned the other,
I never thought of it before. How cruel! Why don't the monsters take their skins off without killing them?"

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this
community, for the patronage that has been bestowed
upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to the attention to business
and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in
every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we
say, that our list comprises all that are used in the
various public and private schools in this and the
neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly
to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed,
that we can supply them with any style or quality,
at prices varying according to the quality, but all as
low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient
for the supply of this market, well selected, and will
be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JU-VENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selection can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wal-
lets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers,
Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy
Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULA-TING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge
by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all
Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the
most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and
patronize home enterprise and industry in preference
to foreign."
